All the rich endowments of Virginia, her Virgin-portion from the creation nothing leſſened, are wages for all this worke: God in wiſedome hauing enriched the Sauage Countries, that thoſe riches might be attractiues for Chriſtian ſuters, which there may ſowe ſpirituals and reape temporals.

Anſweres to Obiections: & firſt to the want of Gold and Siluer Mines.

But what are thoſe riches, where we heare of no Gold nor Siluer, and ſee more impoueriſhed here then thence enriched, and for Mines we heare of none but Iron? Iron mindes! Iron age of the world! who gaue Gold or Siluer the Monopoly of wealth, or made them the Almighties fauorites? Precious perils, ſpecious puniſhments, whoſe originall is neereſt hell, whoſe houſe is darkneſſe, which haue no eye to ſee the heauens, nor admit heauens eye (guilty malefactors) to ſee them; neuer produced to light but by violence, and conuinced, vpon records written in bloud, the occaſioners of violence in the World; which haue infected the ſurface of their natiue earth with deformity and ſterility (theſe Mines being fit emblemes of mindes couetous, ſtored with want, and euer wanting their owne ſtore) her bowels with darkneſſe, damps, deaths, cauſing trouble to the neighbour Regions, and miſchiefe to the remoteſt! Penurious mindes! Is there no riches but Gold Mines? Are Iron Mines neglected, reiected for hopes of Siluer? What, and who elſe is the Alchymiſt, and impoſtor, which turnes the World, and Men, and all into Iron? And how much Iron-workes in Warres and Maſſacres hath American Gold and Siluer wrought thorow all Chriſtendome? Neither ſpeake I this, as if our hopes were blaſted, and growne deplorate and deſperate this way, the Country being ſo little ſearched, and the remote in-land-Mountaines vnknowne: but to ſhew the ſordid tincture and baſe alloy of theſe Mine-mindes. Did not the Spaniſh Iron (tell me you that contemne Iron-mines) draw to it the Indian Siluer and Gold? I will not be a Prophet for Spaine from Virginia. But I cannot forget the wily apophthegme of the Pilots Boy in the Cacafuego, a great Ship laden with treaſure taken in the South Sea, by Sir Francis Drake; who ſeeing the Engliſh Ordnance command ſuch treaſure from the Spaniſh Cacafuego; Our Ship, ſaid he, ſhall be called the Cacaplata, and the Engliſh may be named the Cacafuego. I will not be ſo vnmannerly to giue you the homely Engliſh; it is enough that Engliſh Iron brought home the Spaniſh-Indian Siluer and Gold. But let vs conſult with the wiſeſt Councellour. Canaan, Abrahams promiſe, Iſraels inheritance, type of heauen, and ioy of the earth! What were her riches? were they not the Grapes of Eſhcol, the balme of Gilead, the Cedary neighbourhood of Libanus, the paſtury vale of Ieriche, the dewes of heauen, fertility of ſoile, temper of climat, the flowing (not with Golden Sands, but) with Milke and Hony (neceſſaries, and pleaſures of life, not bottomleſſe gulfes of luſt) the commodious ſcituation for two Seas, and other things like (in how many inferiour?) to this of Virginia. What golden Country euer nouriſhed with her naturall ſtore the hundreth part of men, in ſo ſmall a proportion of earth, as Dauid there mukered,

Digitized by Google

mustered, being 1100000. of Israel and 500000.* of Iuda, not reckoning the Tribes of Leui and Beniamin, all able men for warres? And after him, in a little part of that little Iehoshaphat (More I dare say then the Spaniards can finde in one hundred times so much, of their Mine lands, and choose their best in Peru, New Spaine, and the Ilands) the Scriptures containing an infallible muster-booke of 1160000. able Souldiers in his small territories?

That then is the richest Land which can feede most men, Man being a mortall God, the best part of the best earth, and visible end of the visible World. What remarkeable Gold or Siluer Mines hath France, Belgia, Lumbardy, or other the richest peeces of Europe? what hath Babylonia, Mauritania, or other the best of Asia and Africke? What this our fertile Mother England? Aske our late Trauellers which saw so much of Spaine, the most famous part of Europe for Mynes of old, and inriched with the Mynes of the New World, if an Englishman needs to enuy a Spaniard, or prefer a Spanish life and happinesse to his owne. Their old Mynes made them the seruants of Rome and Carthage: and what their Mynes and mindes doe now I leaue them to others. Once, as the Mynes are in barrennest soyle, and couetous men haue least, euen when they are had of most money (medijs vt Tantalus vndis) so I haue heard that in Spaine is lesse Gold and Siluer, then in other parts of Europe, (I dare not mention the proportions) from both Spanish and English relation: their vsuall money also (to meddle with no more) is of base mettall, and their greatest summes computed by Maranedis lesse then our later tokens: except which (deuised for poorer vses of the poorest) England of long time knowes no base monyes: and hath seene plentie of Siluer and Gold, of Wine and Oyle which (grow not in her) when Spaine, which produceth these, is fed with salads, and drinketh water, helped now and then with Hogges-kinne vnsauoury Wine. The Indian Fountaines runne with golden and siluer streames (sic vos non vobis) not to themselues, but into that Spanish Cisterne; and these Cisternes are like those of the London Water-house, which hath the Conduit Pipes alway open in the bottome, so that a thousand other Cisternes hold more water then it: so may it be said of the other; it is not Concha but Canalis, a Pipe rather then Cisterne, a Cash-keeper rather then Owner; and (which is spoken of better things) remaining poore, makes many rich. To proceed, are not Myners the most miserable of Slaues, toyled continually, and vnto manifold deaths tired for others, in bringing to light those Treasures of darknesse, and liuing (if they liue, or if that bee a life) in the suburbs of Hell, to make others dreame of Heauen? Yea Paradise, the model of heauen, had in it no Minerals, nor was Adam in his innocency, or Noah after the Worlds recouery, both Lords of all, employed in Mines, but (in those happy workes which Virginia inuiteth England vnto) in Vines, Gardening, and Husbandry. Neither let any man thinke that I pleade against the soueraignesse of the Grapes, like the Foxe which could not reach them: but I seriously shew that they are calues and not men, which adore the golden Calfe, or Nabuchadnezzars great golden statue, as if the body were not more then raiment, and those things to be preferred to money, for whose sake mony (the creature of man; base Idolatry where the Creator worships his creature!) was first ordained, and still hath both vse and being.

Doe we not see in this respect, that the Silkes, Calicos, Drugges, and Spices of the East swallow vp (not to mention the Belgian whirlepoole) all the Mines of the West? and that one Carricke carrieth more Rials thither, then perhaps some whole Region in Spaine retaineth for vulgar vse? And whence are English, Portugals, or Dutchmen fitted for that commerce? as if America had ominously (for other iust reason there is none) beene called India, as if the West were but drudge and factor for the East. And what hath dispeopled the New World, not leauing in some places one of Millions, but Auri sacra fames, others killing them in the Mines, or they killing themselues to preuent the Mines? Let it be riches enough, that Sir Thomas Dale testified by Letters from thence, and after his returne to me that foure of the best Kingdomes of Christendome were not for naturall endowments comparable to Virginia: and which I haue heard of one which hath trauelled in all the best Regions of Europe, and hath seene more of Virginia then perhaps any man else, and which needes not speake for any gaine there or thence gotten, as no reputed fauourite or fauourer of that Society and their actions; that he hath seene no Country to be preferred for soile, nor for commodious Riuers to be compared.

And if successe hath not beene correspondent to English hopes: who seeth not the causes of those diseasters?

Diuision that taile-headed Amphisbæna and many-headed monster, deformed issue of that difformed old Serpent, in some of the Colony there & Cõpany here, hath from time to time thrust in her forged venomous tongue, wherby they haue swolne with deadly poison of great thoughts of heart (onely by pride doe men make contention) with blinde-staring eyes of self-loue abounding in their own sense: whence suspicions, iealousies, factions, partialities to friends and dependants, wilfull obstinacies, and other furious passions haue transported men from Virginias good and their owne. Couetousnesse hath distorted others to minde earth and not heauen, in hastinesse of more then speedy returne and present gaine, forgetting that Godlinesse is the best gaine, and that they are planting a Colony, not reaping a haruest, for a publike and not (but in subordinate order) priuate wealth. A long time Virginia was thought to be much encombered with Englands excrements,

* Compare 2 Sam. 24. with 1 Chron. 21. It seemes that there were aboue two millions of men besides women and children.

Virginias high valuation. Cap. Ioh. Smith

Answer to the obiected ill successes and causes thereof.

Iud. 5. 16. Prou. 13. 10.

1 Tim. 6.

Digitized by Google

ſome vicious perſons, as corrupt leuin ſowring, or as plague ſores infecting others, and that Colony was made a Port Exquiline for ſuch as by ordure or vomit were by good order and phyſicke worthy to be euacuated from This Body: whence not only lazie drones did not further the Plantation, but wicked Waſpes with ſharking, and the worſt, that is beggerly tyrants, fruſtrated and ſupplanted the labours of others. Celum non animum mutant qui trans mare currunt. A prodigious Prodigall here, is not eaſily metamorphoſed in a Virginian paſſage to a thrifty Planter: nor can there neede wiſer choiſe or more induſtrious courſe in any vndertaking, then is requiſite in a Chriſtian Colonies plantation amongſt Infidels. Which I ſuppoſe hath beene carefully by many Aduenturers practiſed: and whatſoeuer faults happened by ignorance in the beginnings, neglect of ſeaſons, riot, ſloath, occaſionall wants of or in Gouernours or Gouernment, abuſes of Mariners, trechery of Fugitiues, and Sauages; and other diſeaſes, which haue in part attended all new Plantations, and conſumed many: experience I hope by this time hath taught to preuent or remedy. The late barbarous Maſſacre (hinc illa lachryma) ſtill bleedeth, and when things were reported to be in better forwardneſſe then euer, in great part blaſted thoſe hopefull bloſſomes, diſiointed the proceedings in the Iron workes, Vineyards, Mulberry plants; and in ſudden ſhifts for life, expoſed them to manifold neceſſities; inſomuch, that many of the Principals being ſlain, the reſt ſurpriſed with feare, reduced themſelues almoſt from eighty to eight Plantations; whereby peſtered with multitude, and deſtitute of Corne and other forſaken neceſſaries, they incurred a grieuous and generall ſickneſſe, which being increaſed by infection of ſome paſſengers tainted in their Ship-paſſage with corrupt Beere, there followed a mortality which conſumed about fiue hundred perſons, beſides three hundred and fifty or thereabouts murthered in that Sauage-Maſſacre. All which notwithſtanding, there remaine, ſome haue if truely calculated and coniectured eighteene hundred perſons: for whoſe ſecurity and prouiſion it hath pleaſed his Maieſty to haue a Royall care, as likewiſe the Honorable Lords of his Maieſties priuy Councell, beſides the honorable endeuours of the Councell and well affected members of that Society, which God almighty, the great Founder of Colonies, proſper.

The maſſacre hath been the chiefe cauſe of later miſcaryings.

This number of 1800. was preſented by the Companie to the Lords of the Councell.

Now that I may ſhew Virginia worthy thoſe princely, honorable and induſtrious thoughts, I haue aduentured briefely to point out, rather then to paint out her beauty and attractiue ornaments.

Arguments for Virginian plantation, as being honorable.

1. Religion.

First Religion (as is before obſerued) inuiteth vs there to ſeeke the Kingdome of God firſt, and all other things ſhall be miniſtred to vs, and added as aduantage to the bargaine: ſeeke the Kingdome of God, and ſee an earthly Kingdome in recompence, as the earneſt, and the heauenly Kingdome for our full paiment. Of glorifying God in his word and workes in this deſigne is already ſpoken.

2. Humanitie.

Secondly, Humanity and our common Nature forbids to turne our eyes from our owne fleſh; yea commands vs to loue our neighbours as our ſelues, and to play the good Samaritan with theſe our neighbours (though of another Nation and Religion, as the wounded Iew was to him) to recouer them if it be poſſible, as by Religion, from the power of Satban to God; ſo by humanity and ciuility from Barbariſme and Sauageneſſe to good manners and humaine polity.

3. Honor of the Engliſh Nation

Thirdly, the Honour of our Nation enioyneth vs not baſely to looſe the glory of our forefathers acts, which here haue beene ſhewed in King Henry the ſeuenth, King Henry the eight, King Edward the ſixt, and Queene Elizabeths times, all which illuſtrated their names by Diſcouery of Realmes remote, vnknowne parts and ports, (and the firſt, firſt of all Kings, and the laſt holding to the laſt) Diſcouering and poſſeſſing theſe, and leauing them as iuſt inheritance to his Maieſty. What ſhame to a degenerate poſterity, to looſe ſo honorable a claime, and gaine; yea, to neglect that which many Engliſh haue purchaſed with doing and ſuffering ſo much, and not with their ſweate alone, their care and coſt, but with their deereſt bloud and manifold deaths?

4. Honour of the King.

Fourthly, wee may reckon the Honour of our King, and his Royall poſterity: to which, in time Virginia may performe as much with equall manuring as euer Britannia and Ireland could promiſe when firſt they became knowne to the then ciuiller World. And were not compariſons odious! I am ſure I heard Sir Thomas Dale confidently and ſeriouſly exulting in priuate conference with me, in the hopes of future greatneſſe from Virginia, to the Engliſh Crowne. And if the wiſe King wiſely ſaid, the honour of a King is in the multitude of his Subiects, loe here the way to preſerue, employ, encreaſe them; and for his Maieſty to reach his long royall armes to another World. The Roman Empire ſowed Roman Colonies thorow the World, as the moſt naturall and artificiall way to win and hold the World Romaine.

5. Honor of the Kingdome.

Fifthly, the honour of the Kingdome, thus growing and multiplying into Kingdomes, that as Scotland and England ſeeme ſiſters, ſo Virginia, New England, New found Land in the Continent already planted in part with Engliſh Colonies, together with Bermuda, and other Ilands may be the adopted and legall Daughters of England. An honorable deſigne, to which Honor ſtretcheth her faire hand, the fiue fingers whereof are adorned with ſuch precious Rings, each enriched with inualuable Iewels of Religion, Humanity, Inheritance, the King, the Kingdome; Honos alit artes, omneſque incendunter ad ſtudia gloriæ.

And

Digitized by Google

And if Honour hath preuailed with honorable and higher ſpirits, we ſhall come laden with arguments of profit to preſſe meaner hands and hearts to the ſeruice of Virginia. Onely I deſire that men bring their hearts firſt, and conſider that the very names of a Colony and Plantation doe import a reaſonable and ſeaſonable culture, and planting before a Harueſt and Vintage can be expected: which if they here exerciſe our Faith and Hope both for earth and heauen, where all things are prepared; let vs not in ruder and cruder foundations and beginnings there, precipitate vnto haſty fals. 6. Argument of profit, generally propounded.

And before we come to Virginias particular probabilities for this Kingdomes good, we need not far fetched ſpeculations, we haue euidence from experience. Caſtile (a Kingdome which now ſtoops to none, and which ſome of her flatterers aduance aboue all, making it Catholike without reſpect to Faith) grew from an almoſt nothing out of the Mooriſh deluge, to be but a pettie ſomething in compariſon of others in Europe, till Ferdinands time who ſent Columbus to America. And how poore abilities or probabilities had they for it, when Columbus vpon falſe grounds hauing conceiued ſtrong, ſtrange hopes of the Eaſterne Indies, ſtumbled vpon a Weſterne World whereof hee neuer dreamed, which therefore he called India, and Hiſpaniola Ophir: to which Expedition (neither founded on ſound reaſon, nor experience of former Diſcoueries, when as yet the Mariners Art was but crept out of the Cradle, and bleſſed only in the Euent) the ſtate of Caſtile was as poorely furniſhed as it ſeemes, eyther with money or credit, the Queene pawning part of her Iewels for 2000. Duckets, to ſet Columbus forth with three poore Caruels for this Diſcouery. Little was it then imagined, that in Hiſpaniola ſhould be found (which happened in the taking of Domingo by Sir Francis Drake) a Spaniſh Scutchion with a Horſe, whoſe hinder feet trod on the Globe, his fore-feet prauncing as if he would foot out another World (like Alexander hearing Philoſophers diſcourſe of other Worlds, weeping that hee had not yet finiſhed the conqueſt of this) hauing this Motto annexed, Non ſufficit Orbis. Yea, but they found Gold and Siluer in abundance? the Pockes they did! and plagued all Europe with the great ones, with the ſmall conſuming America: and if they did find Gold and Siluer, how poore were the proportions till the Mexican Diſcouery almoſt thirty yeeres, and that of Peru forty yeeres after their Indian plantation. And who knowes what Virginia in that ſpace may produce by better Diſcouery of it, and further Diſcouery of parts adioyning, whereof we haue ten thouſand times more pregnant hopes, then they had in their firſt Expedition, by knowledge gathered from their Diſcoueries. Illuſtrated by the Caſtilian greatneſſe, Vpon leſſe probabilities, See Ouiedo & our ſixth Booke. Their greateſt benefit in commodities, not in Mines, to the common ſubiect.

Beſides, though Gold and Siluer from thence hath enriched the Spaniſh Exchequer, yet the Magazines haue found other and greater wealth, whereof Virginia is no leſſe capeable, namely, the Countrey Commodities. What Mynes haue they, or at leaſt, what doe they vſe in Braſill, or in all the Ilands, where yet ſo many wealthy Spaniards and Portugalls inhabit? Their Ginger, Sugar, Hides, Tobacco and other Merchandize, I dare boldly affirme, yeeld far far more profit to the generalitie of the Spaniſh Subiects thorow that vaſt World, then the Mynes do or haue done this laſt Age. Which I ſhall make apparant by honourable teſtimonie, in one of the laſt Engliſh Exploits on the Spaniſh Indies. The Right Honorable Earle of Cumberland in a Letter of his after the taking of Port Rico, (chiefe Towne if not the greateſt Iland in thoſe parts, and far ſhort of Hiſpaniola and Cuba) affirmeth, that if hee would haue left the place, hee might haue had by good account as much Sugar and Ginger in the Countrey, as was worth 500000. pounds. But he intended to keepe it, as the Key of the Indies, which who ſoeuer poſſeſſeth (I vſe his owne words) may at his pleaſure goe to any Chamber in the Houſe, and ſee how they ſleepe before hee be either ſtopped or deſcried: ſo as they muſt at euery doore keepe ſo great a force to guard them, as will conſume a great part of their yeerely Reuenue; and ſend it from place to place with ſo great a waſtage, as will cauſe them to curſe their new Porter: for when they haue done what they can, they ſhall beare his charge to their owne deſtructions, and ſtill be looſing places both of ſtrength and wealth. Thus that valorous and renowmed Earle, whoſe bloud ennobled his attempts, whoſe attempts added glory to his bloud, and nobleneſſe to his Nobilitie: which I rather recite that you might ſee the great wealth which the Spaniards reape of Ginger and Sugar, to which that of Hides in that Iland holds ſuch proportion, that one inhabitant thereof named Cherigo, had no fewer then twelue thouſand Beeues: where Beeues growing wild, it was tolerable to any Ilander to kill a beaſt, if hee returned the skinne to the Owner: and what he ſpeakes of a Key and a Porters aduantage, Mutato nomine de te, change the name, and if Virginia and Sumner Ilands fall ſhort ſome wayes, they will, more then equall it other wayes, in Caſe! But I muſt containe my ſelfe, leſt I purchaſe a Purchas Caſe for medling. The Earle had purpoſed to leaue Sir Iohn Barkley with a Garriſon to hold it, but a great ſickneſſe and mortalitie conſuming moſt of his men, he was forced to leaue the place, to bring home his ſhips. I finde this in a written Extract of all the Ports, ſhipping Cities, Men, &c. of Spaine, which ſometimes belonged to that induſtrious Gentleman M. W. Burrough Controller of the Naure.

Now if any ſhall thinke that the many tranſplantations of people into thoſe parts, would exhauſt England, Spaine will anſwere that point alſo, now in theſe dayes complayning no more of ſcarcitie of people (notwithſtanding their many and long Warres in ſo many parts of Europe, except the expulſion of the Moores and Marans, haue cauſed it) then when firſt they vndertooke thoſe conſuming vaſt Enterprizes, not of a Virginia, but of a World. And yet what in compariſon is Spaine for multitudes of people, whoſe vaſtneſſe is ſaid to yeeld (the King, Dukes, Marqueſſes and Earles only with their retinue excepted) from eighteene yeeres of age to fiftie, but

Digitized by Google

1125390. men of all sorts, as I haue seene in an Extract of the Royall Muster-booke, which how much is it exceeded by the numerous excesse of people in this Iland, straitned in farre lesse roome, and wanting necessary employments, which almost exacteth a Virginian vent and aduenture. For how much more conuenient is a transmigration, into a fruitfull, large and wholesome Region, where the Countrie hath need of a Colonie to cultiuate it, as well as those Colons and Inhabitants haue need of a Countrie to inhabit rather then to breed a fulnes in This Bodie, which without some such euacuation either breeds matter for the pestilence and other Epidemicall Diseases, or at least for Dearth, Famine, Disorders, ouer-burthening the wealthier, oppressing the poorer, disquieting both themselues and others, that I mention not the fatall hand of the Hangman? And thus you haue Virginias hopes in generall propounded by Spanish example vrged and enforced by our necessitie of seeking vent to such home-fulnesse.

Arg. 7. from necessitie by our multitudes

Arguments of particular cõmodities and commodiousnesse.

But looke vpon Virginia; view her louely lookes (howsoeuer like a modest Virgin she is now vailed with wild Couerts and shadie Woods, expecting rather rauishment then Mariage from her Natiue Sauages) survay her Heauens, Elements, Situation; her diuisions by armes of Bayes and Riuers into so goodly and well proportioned limmes and members; her Virgin portion nothing empaired, nay not yet improoued, in Natures best Legacies; the neighbouring Regions and Seas so commodious and obsequious; her opportunities for offence and defence; and in all these you shall see, that she is worth the wooing and loues of the best Husband. First, for her Heauens and Climate, she with her Virgin Sisters hath the same (being extended from 30. to 45. degrees of North latitude) with the best parts of Europe, namely the fat of Graecia, Thracia, Spaine, Italie, Morea, Sicilia, (and if we will looke more Northward to the height of France and Britaine, there her Sisters New England, New Scotland, and New-found-land, promise hopefull and kinde entertainment to all Aduenturers. If you looke Southwards, you may parallel it with Barbarie, Egypt, and the fertilest parts of Africke) and in Asia, all that Chersonesus, sometime the seate of foure thousand Cities, and so many Kingdomes, now called Natolia, with her Neighbours Antiochia, and other Regions of Syria, Damascus, Libanus, with Babylonia and the glorie of the Earth: and Types of Heauen, Indea and Paradise; the Silken Countries also of Persia, China in her best parts, and Iapan, are in the eleuation; and Virginia is Daughter of the same Heauens, which promise no lesse portion to this Virgin, then those Matrons had for the foundation-stock of their wealth and glory.

1. The same climate with best Countries

Secondly, this Climate as it promiseth wealth, so it doth health also, enioying the temper of the most temperate parts, euen of that in which Adam, Abraham, with the Prophets and Apostles were bred in, and receiued as an Earthly priuiledge; and in which Christ conuersed in the flesh. And thirdly for extension, if couetousnesse gape wide, ten Iudeas, and a hundred Paradises, may be equalled for quantitie in Virginia, whose mid-land Regions are wholly vnknowne, till we arriue at that Nona Albion, which yeelded it selfe English before the first Virginian plantation.

2. Temperate.

3. Large extension.

Fourthly for commodious diuisions, the Lands and Seas contend by fresh Riuers and Armes of the Sea so to diuersifie the soyle as if in luxuriant wantonnesse they were alway engendring manifold Twinnes of Commoditie and Commodiousnesse, Profit and Pleasure, Hunting and Fishing, Fruits and Merchandizing, Marinership and Husbandry, Opus and Vsus, Meate and Drinke, Wares and Portage, Defending and Offending, Getting and Keeping, Mountaines and Valleyes, Plaines and Hillocks, Riuers Nauigable and shallower Foords, Ilands and Land-iles (or Peninsule) Woods and Marishes, Vegetatiues and liuing creatures maruellously diuersified. Looke on the Map, and tell me if any Countrey in the World promiseth more by the lookes then it. Yea I haue obserued in the Letters of greatest Malcontents from thence, foe and friend and themselues are blamed rather then the Countrey, the least finger of Virginias hand (I meane the least of fiue Riuers (or as Master Alexander Whitakers relateth, the least of seuen) in a small part of that great Countrie, is bigger then the First-borne of Britaines waters, the famous Thames, all Nauigable, some one hundred miles, some one hundred and sixtie, receiuing Tributes by the way of innumerable Springs, Brookes, Riuerets (such as that of Ware, and fit for portage of Wares in smaller Barkes, of which kind Iames Riuer hath fiue Attendants in ordinary) the fall of euery one of the fiue is within twentie or fifteene miles of some other: and not aboue fifteene miles in some places is the Great Riuer of Roanoke said to be distant from some of those which fall into Iames Riuer, yeelding a commodious intercourse twixt those Southerly and these more Northerly parts of the Countrey. I know not how Nature hath here also wantonized and danced a Loath to depart in the winding of those Streames, which seeme willingly againe and againe to embrace that beloued Soile, and to present her with rich Collers of siluer Esses, murmuring that they must leaue so fresh and fertile a Land, of which at last with Salt teares they take their leaue, but contracting with their New Sea Lord to visit their old Land-lord and former Loue euery Floud. Meane while those many impetuous clippings and sweet embraces, searching refuges euery way make shew as if they would meet together in consultation, and agree on some Conspiracie, which howsoeuer disappointed, yeeld neuertheless many conueniences of entercourse and easier portage, each Riuer comming within foure, eight, ten miles, more or fewer in diuers places of another. All these

4. Commodious diuision of Lands and Riuers.

theſe Riuers runne into a faire Bay, on which the Earth euery way is a greedie gazing Spectator, except where the Ocean ruſheth in to raviſh her beauties, flowing neere two hundred miles into it, and forcing a Channell one hundred and fortie, of depth betwixt ſeuen and fifteene fathome, and ten or fourteene miles in ordinary breadth. The Earth yet vndermining it by Ilands, and muſtering thoſe Riuer Captaines and innumerable Springs and Brookes, maintaineth his freſh challenge with continuall Warres, forcing backe the Ocean euery Ebbe to retire, which yet loth to loſe ſo ſweete a poſſeſſion returneth within few houres, freſhly flowing with Salt reenforcements. Bay of Cheſepeake.

Fifthly, the ſoile is bleſſed, euery Element beſtowing a rich portion on her. The fire hath treaſures laid vp to maintaine her fewell vnto prodigality (yea which ſeldome meete, a thriftie prodigality) for many yeeres. Her ſtore of waters you haue heard, but not her watery ſtore of fiſhes vnto incredibility in kinds, goodneſſe, numbers. The Aire is no leſſe luxuriant in the Fowles of Heauen. But the Earth (fruitfull Mother of Mankind) ſhe is prodigiouſly prodigall, in fatneſſe of the ſoile; talneſſe, ſweetneſſe, ſtrength, varietie, numberleſſe numbers of her Trees: her Oakes no leſſe excellent then frequent, many of them bearing two foote and an halfe ſquare of good Timber twenty yards long: of which alſo are diuers kinds. Elmes and Aſhes (of which Sope-aſhes are made) Wal-nuts in three ſorts, Cypreſſes (or much reſembling them) Cedars and other ſweet ſmelling Timbers, Cheſnuts, Plummes of diuers ſorts, Cheries and other Trees, &c. reckoned by Virginian Relators, I omit. But moſt remarkable and promiſing are the Mulberie and the Vine, the one to the backe, the other to the belly, yeelding Silkes and Wine. 5. Fertile ſoile. 6. Trees for timber and other vſes many

As for Silke, how great profits are raiſed thereof to the Chinois and Perſian? Yea to come neerer, in Naples and other parts of Italy, which haue prouoked France to a generall imitation. And how vnualuable are the expenſes of this Kingdome for that materiall, Vt matronæ in publico luceant? Likewiſe for Wines from France, Spaine, Germanie, and other parts how many thouſands are yeerely expended to the profits of Strangers, that I ſay not to enemies, or at leaſt to ſuſpected friends? It hath pleaſed his Maieſtie to take theſe two into his Princely conſideration and by his Letter to the Right Honorable the Earle of Southampton, and the Company of Virginia to commend and command this care to them. 7. Specially for Silkes. 8. And for Wines. July 9. A.R. 20. See ſup. c. 15.

The Countrey it ſelfe naturally produceth Vines in great abundance, and ſome of a very good ſort: diuers plants alſo haue beene ſent thither of the better kinds of Chriſtendome, with eight Vignerons procured from Languedock for the husbanding of that commoditie. The Soyle is no leſſe naturally happy in Mulberie Trees of the beſt kind and ſome Silke-wormes alſo: and generall order hath beene taken for the abundant planting of them in all places inhabited: large ſupply alſo of Silke-worme-ſeed from his Maieſties ſtore, and men skilfull in that kind for the well ordering of that buſineſſe haue beene ſent. In a word, the very proſperity and pregnant hopes of that Plantation made the Deuil and his limbs to enuy, feare and hate it. Hence that bloudy Maſſacre which cauſed almoſt a ſudden Chaos to the hinderance of thoſe affaires, by the convulſions, combuſtions, and almoſt confuſion of that Body and their Deſignes: whereof yet we hope not only a recouery but greater aduantage, the greateſt danger from the Sauages, growing out of our mens confidence, which that terrible ſtroke (except a ſtupid Deuill poſſeſſe vs) hath cut off; which likewiſe requires that ſeruile natures be ſeruily vſed; that future dangers be preuented by the extirpation of the more dangerous, and commodities alſo raiſed out of the ſeruileneſſe and ſeruiceableneſſe of the reſt. 9. Iuſt aduantage from the Sauages to make vſe of their labours.

As for Saſſafras, Salt, Terra Lemnia, Gummes and other profitable Drugges I ſhall not neede ſpeake: nor of their Silke-graſſe naturally growing, beſides a kind of Hempe or Flaxe, yeelding moſt excellent Cordage. Pot-aſhes, Sope-aſhes, Pitch and Tarre haue beene the employment of Polacres ſent thither. 10. Drugs, and diuers other commodities.

In foure yeeres ſpace before the Maſſacre (the Iron Oare of Virginia being found very good and very plentifull) aboue fiue thouſand pounds were ſpent, and one hundred and fiftie perſons ſent for that imployment; which being brought in manner to perfection, was interrupted by that fatall accident, ſince which the reſtituion is with all poſſible diligence (as it is ſaid) ordered and furthered. 11. Iron mines.

There haue beene alſo ſent skilfull men from Germany, for ſetting vp of Saw-mils: Virginia yeelding to no place in the knowne World for Timbers of all ſorts, commodious for ſtrength, pleaſant for ſweetneſſe, ſpecious for colours, ſpacious for largeneſſe, vſefull for Land and Sea, for houſing and ſhipping: in which Timber vſes England and Holland alone are ſaid to diſburſe about 300000. pounds ſterling yeerely. And the defects at home, where the Hearth hath climbed into the Roofe, where back-fewell hath deuoured our buildings in the Woods, and belly-fewell hath deuoured the Woods, and conuerted them to arable: where ſo many ſhips are employed for prouiſions of and for ſhipping, Virginia by diuine bountie is Magnæ ſpes altera Britanniæ. Herein we may verifie the old Prouerbe, That he which liueth longeſt, ſhall fetch his wood furtheſt; but ſo, as he ſhall be paid for the fetching with great aduantage. 12. Timbers for all vſes.

And if an Iland needs woodden Wals to ſecure it againſt others, to enrich it from others, Virginia offers her ſeruice herein, and will looke ſo much more cheerefully on you, how much more you 13. More eſpecially for building both houſes & ſhips you shall disburthen her in this kind: yea, as England hath wooed and visited Virginia, so herein Virginia will be glad and reioyce to visit England, in her there-built ships, and to dwell here with vs in thence-brought Timbers, and esteeme her selfe aduanced to adorne our Towres, and take view of our Pomps and Spectacles.

14. The manifold materialls for shipping.

And touching shipping and the materials thereof; Timbers, Pitch, Tarre, Cordage, Sayles, Anchors, &c. necessitie of the times exacteth in our defects at home, for securitie from enemies abroad, employment of Mariners, Merchants and our numerous multitudes, offending our Offenders, defending our Allies, that I adde not the Riches of the World, and glory of Exploits, all which depend on Nauigation. Hence Tyrus and her Daughter Carthage of old (Matre pulchrâ filia pulchrior) hence the Egyptian Alexandria and many Nations since, haue reaped wealth and honour. Hence the Lumbards and Easterlings sucked out the sweetes of this Kingdome in former times, whiles we like children were fed by their hands, and they were inriched by the Importation and Exportation of Merchandise to and from vs: which when that glorious Elizabeth altered, and sought to stand in the Seas on her owne legs, and to flie ouer them with her owne wings, it not only wanne her renowme but dread abroad, and such strength at home, that notwithstanding her manifold wars offensiue and defensiue, and motherly protection of her Neighbours round about with Men and Monies; her Custome, her Nauie, and the wealth of her people is thought to haue receiued in her time a seuen-fold aduancement. And what hath so long vpholden and enhanced the Hanse Townes? What hath raysed the rich and glorious States of Venice and Genoa? What hath since freed, and doth still sustaine the Hollanders, but their mouing Magazines and Castles, their strength and magnificence being (by a Miracle in State) hereby most, wherein it is least, in their Sea-forrests; Nature denying that to their Soyle, which Art hath superabundantly supplied by shipping, to their Lands, to their Seas, for vse, for admiration? Hence hath the Abassine or Prester Iohn lost his estate, the Turke not encreased his by swallowing the rest of Christendome, the Persian, the Mogull and other mighty Asian Potentates haue not bin mighty, howsoeuer sirnamed Great; haue beene so long awed, and as it were, imprisoned within their owne shores, there also often braued, assaulted, forced to receiue Lawes and conditions, yea to pay Customes for their owne ships, and prohibited Trade with others by a handfull of Portugalls. Hence the Portugals themselues crept out of their Straites and obscuritie, and hence the Castilian colours haue been so far displayed, and set the rest of the World in this present Maze: Hence our Edgar, Edward the Third, and Great Elizabeth, haue left such memories of them, after them; hence all Maritime States and Kings haue receiued encrease or diminishing; as their Nauies haue beene, so haue they. Yea, without a Nauie, Salomon had not beene so meet a Type of Christ, so glorious in Domesticall, Politicall or Ecclesiasticall magnificence.

15. Sauing of expenses and freeing from dangers in forreine Countries.
16. Imployment and breeding of Mariners.
17. Many probabilities by transplantation of cattell, fruits, &c. exemplified by Spaniards.

Haile then, al-haile Virginia, hope of our decayed Forrests, Nursery of our Timbers, second supply to our shipping, the succenturiata copia in distresse of Nauall materials: and those independant on forreine States, disburthened of Taxes, Customes, Impositions, and Suspensions of forreine Princes: yea gainfull not in the ships alone, but in Shipmen and Mariners trained vp and multiplyed by that imployment, with mutuall entercourse of Wares and manifold Commodities. Hee that lookes on the best Corne-fields soone after the sowing, seeth expense and labour without any profit but in expectation. Now is our Seed-time; and if cost and industry want not, Virginia, in her Soyle and Climate not only promiseth these materials, there also to be made at easier rates; but infinite other Commodities also which may be transplanted from these and other parts, as the Spaniards in their Indies, haue giuen vs example. These haue reserued Wines and Oyle, as Staple Commodities to be carried from Spaine (that these Americans may still haue need of Spanish Commodities) which else would easily grow there. They haue againe furnished those parts both from Spaine and many other Countries, with Figs, Oranges, Limons, and fruits for present vse and for Merchandize, with Sugar-canes, Gingers, Cattell and other Commodities, yeelding exceeding summes of Treasure to the Planters. And I know not but in a settled Virginian Plantation, Sugars, Gingers, Hides, &c. may there prooue as gainfull, as they haue in the Spanish Indies, that is, beyond all conceit of ordinarie valuation, and as good as many Mynes.

18. The Countrie, cattell & beasts not only for vse there but Merchandise here.
* Cap. Smith tels of 1000. Basses at a draught: M. Rolfe of 5000. the least of two foot long, 300. as big as Cod, by Sir T. Dale.

Now for the Cattell and Fowles, I might here present their Deere of all sorts, reported to haue three or foure Fawnes at a time, and none vnder two (which some impute to the qualitie of that Countrey, hauing happened likewise to the Goats transported from hence) and were it not for this increase, eyther they must faile, or the Natiues (these sparing neither old nor young, nor old with young, nor obseruing any rule of Season or Reason therein) I might adde Shag-haired Oxen-seene by Sir Samuell Argoll, Beauers, Otters, Foxes, Wilde and Ciuet Cats, Muske Rats, and many Beasts which beare good Furres; their large Turkeyes, Cranes, Herons, Partridges, and innumerable other Fowles: fish also of innumerable numbers and manifold kinds, Sturgeon, Porpose, Base, Rock-fish, Carpe, Shad, and the rest. It seemeth to vs incredible, which is related of the both numbers * and excellencie at one draught taken. As for the varietie of Corne, the excellencie also and multiplication to 1500. or 2000. for one stalke of Maiz, the vsefulnesse, their succeeding-exceeding Haruests, their Roots, Herbs, Pulse, and the rest, I referre to all the Writers in that that Argument, and to as many as haue beene Eye-witnesses themselues to be Relaters.

Were it but a fishing trade, yet his vnderstanding is contemptible, that thinkes contemptibly of it. He that should reade Doctor Dees relations of so many hundred Busses, and Flemmish sailes on the English, and Spanish, on the Irish coasts: or what Master Gentleman hath related of the Commodities raised that way by the Holanders, summed to millions of pounds in Herring, Cod and Ling: and that which others relate of 3600. saile of Fishermen in Holand and Zeland, with other things of like nature gathered together by Captaine Smith in his New Englands Trials, with the experiments of that coast also (part of our Virginian subiect, shall see, as greatest bodies composed of least parts, so greatest summes raised out of least and meanest meanes, that being dundant in tale, which seemeth wanting in weight. Once, the impregnable wals of the vnited Prounces are their Ships (whereof some reckon small and great of all sorts 20000,) and their principall and most generall Trade is Fishing, which is the Seminary of their Mariners of which some haue reckoned aboue 100000. and summed their returnes thence growing to 7000000. pounds in a yeare. I am none of Neptunes Secretaries; yet know this, that there is no fishing to the Sea, and no Country so strong by Sea as that which findeth most employment in this kinde, where no exportation of treasure, no custome, no consumption and exhausting of commodities can be quarelled. Thus then, whether we consider Wines, Silkes, and other the appurtenances of our pleasures, as Dies, Drugges, Gummes, Sugars, Ginger, Furres, and the like, which cost this Kingdome yearely some-hundreths of thousands of our pounds: or whether wee reckon those more staple and necessary commodities for Shipping, and all sorts of Timber, Cordage, and other like, no lesse costly, Virginia inuiteth our hopes, and couenanteth to bestow them on the industrious: so that we shall saue those treasures and costs that way expended, shall lesse depend on other Nations, lesse feare imbarguing, detention, impost; yea, shall from other Nations raise by returne of our excesse in these kindes great Summes, besides the furnishing of the Kingdome with greater encrease of Shipping, Marriners, and innumerable employments, and the securing and enriching the Ports, both of Ireland and England. As for Tobacco I haue said little of it, because it is so generally knowne (which yet is said to be worth to Spaine 100000. pounds yearely; and that (I grieue to speak it) from the fume-some-froth-spirits of England) & the abundance brought from Virginia and Summer Ilands (inopes nos copia fecit) exceedeth the Market: and because so many by immoderate vse thereof are corrupted here at home, and the present benefit thereby accrewing in quicke returne, hindreth designes of better consequence there. And thus much of Virginias present or very probable Commodities: to which we may adde the hopes in future times by finding there as good vent for our Wools and Clothes, both to the English and ciuilized Indian, as the Spaniards doe in their Indies by their Wines and Oyle, of which I haue already said that they permit not the generall growth in their Indian plantations for the continuance and necessitie of commerce with Spaine. And who seeth not the exceeding benefit which may arise by compleat commerce, in venting our owne superfluities of Men; of others, and specially the principall of English Commodities, Cloth and Wooll, with the Gospel of our Lord Iesus; and returning from thence, Clapboord, Pipe-staues, Cauiare, Oade, Madder, Salt, Cordage, Pitch, Tarre, Sope-ashes, Pot-ashes, Cotton-wools, Gaules, Furres, Hops, Hides, Gummes, Dyes, Gingers, Sugars, Silkes, Wines, Iron, Timbers, Fish, Ships, Mariners, Merchants, and a World of the Worlds most vseful good things thorow an open Sea, obnoxious to no forreine Potentate, from and to known and secure Ports and Harbours?

It is also not only vsefull at all times, but necessary to these times, as to transport superfluous numbers from hence to Virginia, so to cure the diseases of the times caused by the wants of Monies (the life of trading, and sinewes of a great State) attended with wants of sale for the Merchant, and consequently of Clothiers and other subordinate professions; want of worke for Spinsters, Weauers, and innumerable poorer Trades and Handicraftsmen; want of trading for Citizens (neither hath such a generall breaking beene euer knwone, so many shops in the principall limmes and streets of this Citie, yea, in Cheapside the faire face, yea, in the eye of that beauteous face, the Gold-Smiths Row (where besides so many shoppes conuerted to other Trades, I haue told this last Winter betwixt Friday-street and Bread-street the third part shut vp) want of employment for decayed Gentlemen, both the elder Vnthrifts and younger Gallants; which want of moneyes and store of wants thence issuing, is in greatest part caused by the Merchandizes sought and bought in other Countries, whereby our Moneyes fall into forraine Whirle-pooles without hopes of recouery; whereas if our Trade lay (as we see the Spanish) with our owne Colonies and Plantations else-where, wee should hold them still current in our owne Nation, and draw others to bring to vs both Wares and Moneyes from other Regions for the Commodities aforesaid. And thus should the Vices of the Times be remedied, and the vices of men or vicious men finde from Tobacco, Silkes, Wines and other excesses (like the sting of Scorpions from the Oyle of Scorpions) a cure thence, whence they receiued their wounds; and so many ruptures should eyther be preuented or healed; prouisions also procured for employment of honest and humble pouertie at home, and the inordinate spirits of others tamed by the Sea, and trained at labour to better Discipline.

19. Benefits by fishing. D. D. Brit. Monarchie.

Et quæ non præsunt singula, multa iuuant.

20. Tobacco. A Booke presented to the Parliament by Master Bennet. It is said that some maliciously father all their bad Tobacco on Virginia and Bermudas, and the good from thence, on Spanish growth

21. Hopes of future Trade for clothes & other English commodities.

22. Manifold necessities of these times.

I adde

25. Neceſſarie for ſtrengthening other Plantations.

I adde further, that the proſecution of the Virginian Plantation, is both profitable and neceſſary for the ſtrengthning of the Plantations already begun in Summer Ilands, New England, and New found Land, and that other expected in New Scotland.

24. Probabilities of a South Sea paſſage & manie manie commodities thereby.

Now if we adde the hopefull paſſage to the South Sea, that one argument is more then all the reſt, if our eyes ſhall once be bleſſed with that deſired ſight. For the trade of the whole world is then made compendious, all the rich trades of the Eaſt Indies are obuious and neerer hand, and no force is able to ſcoure ſo large a Coaſt as that Weſterne ſhoare of all America, and ſecure it from our trading. Hence, if we finde not golden Countries before not poſſeſſed by other Chriſtians (whereof alſo Sir Francis Drakes Noua Albion ſo long ſince ſubiected by voluntary ſurrender to the Engliſh Crowne, hath giuen vs hope) yet trade will bring the Mines of the Weſt into our ſhips, and the Spices and other rich Merchandize of the Eaſt into our ſhops at eaſier charge, and therefore ſaleable at eaſier rates.

25. Neceſſitie of maintaining Virginia in caſe of war forced by others.

But this Deſigne of the South Sea may ſeeme deſperate, and the Argument ridiculous. I ſhall therefore indeuour to giue better light therein, and withall to adde another Argument as weightie as it, and greater then all exceptions.

I may adde alſo the caſe of Warre, which I deſire not; but which may happen, and Bellona may euen now ſeeme pregnant and alreadie conceiued, whoſe abortion might be wiſhed, if neceſſitie adde not honour to the lawfulneſſe. I but propound a caſe poſſible. The moſt certaine, honorable, and beauteous front of Peace, hath a backe part of Warre, and therefore in ſecureſt Peace, Prudence is not ſo ſecure, but ſhe armeth her ſelfe againſt feares of War, forewarning and forearming men by the Sword drawne to preuent the drawing of Swords, and eyther eſchewes it, or reaps good out of it.

South Sea why ſo called.

It is not vnknowne what expenſes England hath ſuſtained in, and euer ſince Sir Sebaſtian Cabots firſt Diſcouerie, as in thoſe of Sir Hugh Willoughby, Burrough, Pet and Iackman by the North-eaſt, of Hudſon, Poole, Fotherby, and diuers other Nauigations by the North; of Sir Martine Frobuſher, Captaine Danies, Sir Thomas Button, Maſter Knight, Hudſon, Hall, Baffin, and other manifold Diſcoueries by the North-weſt, all ſeeking a compendious paſſage to Cathay, and to the Eaſt Indies. The Reaſons which mooued them were far more hopefull then that of Columbus, which found notwithſtanding far better and ſpeedier ſucceſſe. Succeſſe is a ſeruile Argument, for Senſe rather then for Reaſon, and in this whole Virginian proiect, I ſpeake to Engliſh Aduenturers, and not to pettie Pedlers, or Virginian Sauages, to ſuch whoſe eyes are in their heads and not in their hands: Careat ſucceſſibus opto, Quiſquis ab euentu facta notanda putet. Yet hath not Succeſſe beene wholy fruſtrate, yea both Reaſon and Senſe plead for a Paſſage, and Virginias vſefulneſſe therein.

I will not bring vncertaine teſtimonies of a Portugall taken in a Carrike in Queene Elizabeths dayes, and of another Portugall in Guinie, which affirmed to Sir Martine Frobuſher that hee had paſt it; nor of Garcia Loaiſa, which is ſaid by the Coaſt of New-found-land to haue gone to the Moluccas; nor of Vaſco Coronado in his Letter to the Emperour Charles, and other antiquated Witneſſes of Antiquitie.

* See ſup. the end of the 4. Booke: & Dermers Letter in this.

I haue already in due place produced * Thomas Cowles, Iuan de Fuca, Thomas Dermer, Sir Thomas Button, Maſter Brigges, beſides the conſtant and generall report of all the Sauages from Florida, to the great Riuer of Canada. Now for the hopes of Virginia by a South-Sea Diſcouery, how neere is England that way to the Trade of both Indies, that is, of all the remoter World? It ſtands midway betwixt vs and the moſt frequented Ports of the Weſt, which perhaps may ſhortly come to full age and ſue out her Liuerie, how euer hitherto kept in cloſe Wardſhip, and debarred the rights of common humanite, that is, the commerce with other Nations, without diſcerning Friend and Foe. Strange iealouſie and worthy of iealous Suſpicion! to admit Trade in all European Ports, not Siuill and Madrid excepted, and to prohibit the ſame in all the Eaſt and Weſt, where it can leſſe be prohibited! there to repute all in nature of Pyrats, and accordingly to make prize of ſhips, goods, and men which ſhall attempt to ſayle that vaſt Ocean, or offer Trade in any of thoſe Habitations! But leauing that to conſideration of my Betters, in the Eaſt both Engliſh and Dutch haue maintayned their iuſt Trade by force, which by vniuſt force was denied, and haue paid themſelues largely for all loſſes ſuſtayned by the Inſultings or Aſſaultings of thoſe Monopolians, with gaine, with honour: that trade being almoſt denied to thoſe iniurious deniers, their owne reputation and traffique now bleeding, which would haue cut the throates of all others aduentures, of all other aduenturers. I neither propheſie, nor exhort vnto the like in the Weſt: Our prudent and potent Mother Elizabeth wan renowne and wealth in their owne harbours and Cities at home, and no leſſe in the remoteſt of their Lands and Seas. Yea, the South Sea by furtheſt compaſſe was neere to her long and iuſt armes, and their Cacaplata and Saint Anne, with other their richeſt Ships and Ports were ranſacked by Engliſh Cacafuegos, and the charges of thoſe warres borne by thoſe enemies which cauſed them. Nulla ſalus bello, pacem te poſcimus omnes. He whoſe words and workes hath euer beene Beati pacifici, knowes beſt when and how to exact his and the Worlds right, in the World, of which God hath granted a Monopoly to no man; and (if others can embrace the whole Globe with diſperſed habitations) not to ſuffer his long arme to

Digitized by Google

to be shortned, and the strong armes of his to be pinioned, and forced to accept of a bounded and limited commerce in a little corner at others pleasure. Once, in iust and euen peace, Virginia stands fit to become Englands Factor in America; if warr should happen, both it and Bermuda are fit Sentinels and Scouts, yea fit Searchers and Customers, fit Watch-towers and Arsenals to maintaine right against all wrong-doers. And for the South Sea, if a passage be found neere vnto Virginia, as Master Dermer was confident vpon relations (as he writ to me) of a thousand witnesses, wee then see Virginias lap open, yeelding her Ports and Harbours for the Easterne treasures to be the neerest way conueied by the West. Yea if it be more remote, as Chacke and Fuca relate, yet hath Virginia an vsefull neighbourhood both for sicke men, weatherbeaten Ships, and prouisions exhaust in long Voyages, to make them fitter for returne. And if such passage were not at all, yet the Mountaines of Virginia cannot but send Riuers to that Sea; so that as the wealth of Peru is brought to Panama, and thence by Land conueied to the Ports of this Sea, so may the wealth of the South Sea, and the Regions of the West of America be that way passed to English hands. The like may be said of the Ilands of Salomon, the South vnknowne Continent, which after-times may discouer (probably as rich as the rest) that I mention not the knowne Regions of the East already traded. And although the passage be not yet perfectly knowne, yet may the seasons and fittest opportunities and prouisions for that discouery be most easie from Virginia: and there, if crossed with stormes or other diasters, they may finde securest refuge and refreshing. And if (which God auert) we may not haue the wares of peace, yet the peace of warres (that is, a fit rendeuous and retiring place, where to cheere and hearten, to repaire and supply vpon all occasions) is there offered, by the aduantages of both Seas. For in both, that vast body must needes be of slow motion, where the limmes are so disioynted, and one member vnfit to helpe another by remoteneese. And if it should but force the aduersary to maintaine Garrisons in his Ports on both sides, to secure them from inuasion, and a double Nauie of War in both Seas, the one to secure the Coasts, the other to secure his Shippes in the South Sea passing from the Philippinas, or from one Port to another; and in the North Sea to wafte his Treasures and Merchandise into Europe, the wings of that Eagle would be so pulled with such costs, that hee could not easily make inuasiue flight vpon his neighbours in these parts; yea, both those and these Dominions would be exposed to the easier inuasions of others. Tam Marte, quam Mercurio, in Peace and Warre, so vsefull may Virginia and Bermuda be to this Kingdome.

Now if any say Medice cura teipsum, and alleadge that they themselues are not able to stand against an enemy: I answere, first, for Bermuda, or Summer Ilands, that little body is all heart, and hath the strength of Nature and Art conspiring her impregnableneese. For the Rockes euery way haue so fortified the scituation, that she would laugh at an Armada, at a World of Ships; where the straight passage admits not two Ships abreast to enter, and hath ten Forts with Ordnance to entertaine them. She feares no rauishment, and as little needes she famishment, so that vnlesse God for our sinnes, or the Diuell by the worst of sinnes, treason, and the worst of his Sonnes, some Iudas, expose her to the Enemy, she can know no other loue or Lord but English. And for Virginia against the Sauages greatest fright, Captaine Smith maintained himselfe without losse, with saine with thirty eight men: against others she hath so fit places for fortification; so fit meanes and materials to secure her, as eye-witnesses report, that the worst of enemies to be feared is English backwardneese or frowardneese, like Sampsons Foxes either drawing backe, or hauing fire at their tongues ends.

Now if Queene Elizabeth of glorious memory, were able from England onely to annoy her enemies, so great and potent, so much and farre: what may we in Gods name hope of a New England, New found Land, Bermuda and Virginia already planted with English? When vpon newes of the fall of that great Northen Starre, the Duke of Braganzas brother, spake of her as the Iesuites had slandered; hold your peace brother, said the Duke himselfe (one* then present related this to me) had it not beene for her Religion (for which wee most honour her, for which God did most blesse her) she might iustly haue beene ranked with the ancients Romans: England is a small thing, as the Map sheweth, to Spaine, and yet we durst not looke out of doores for her and hers. Thus worthily that worthy man, of the Worthy of women in her time. Great and glorious Elizabeth! how didst thou contemne the Iberian threates? How didst thou inuert, diuert, subuert their attempts? How victoriously didst thou euade their ininsible Inuasion? how didst thou inuade the Inuaders, at their gates, in their ports? how didst thou meete them in the Atlanticke, pursue them to the South, to the Indian Seas, and round about the World? How did the skie, windes, waues serue to a higher prouidence in thy deliueries, in thy triumphs? how often were the prodigious Carrikes of the East, and prodigall Vessels of the West, either staid at home for feare, or driuen to fort-couert by the way, or costly wafted on their way, or burned in the way, or sunke out of the way, or carried quite away to visite the English shoares, and adorne the Trophees of great and glorious Elizabeth? Rouze vp your braue spirits English hearts in loyall subiection to your Royall Soueraign: be ready to offer right, feare not to suffer wrong: seeke the good, and see the goods which Virginia offers. Here could I wilder my selfe in thickets of arguments,

* M. Thomas Turner an English Merchant liuing then in Portugall in name of an Almaine.

Q. Elizabeths praises.

ments, and could Muſter more motiues and more neceſſarily concluding for Virginias aduancement, if that which we deſire not be enforced on vs, then I haue already numbred in plantation and commerce: Yea almoſt all thoſe former arguments are preſſed of neceſſity, or offer their ſeruice voluntarily, ſome more, others no leſſe ſeruiceable that way, then to publike peace and traffique, which alſo are ſecureſt when they neede not feare a Warre.

The honour of Religion defended by the Defender of the Faith; of our Nation, King, Kingdome; the Materials of Ships, Mariners, Armes, Victuals; Fiſhing, Merchandiſe, and Prize ſubſeruent to each Voyage, that one may ſupply if the other faile; in croſſed Voyages, a conuenient receptacle for refreſhing; fit place of ſtay in not fitting and vnſeaſonable ſeaſons: a ſafe repoſitory for ſpoiles gotten in expectation of greater purchaſe: a redreſſe to weatherbeaten and ſtorme-diſtreſſed Ships: a refuge to ſuch as the enemy hath battered and endangered: an Hoſpitall for ſicke, wounded, and preſently vnſeruiceable Mariners and Souldiers: a ſtorehouſe to repaire Timbers, Tackling, and other prouiſions to Ships and Men: a fit meane (in ſupplying vs from thence with neceſſaries) to keepe thoſe Monies in our owne hands, whereby we are deſtitute of the principall ſinewes of warre, yea perhaps the enemy armed againſt vs: a ſchoole and training place for our youth to endure labour and hardſhip, and to prepare them like the Iewes in Nehemiahs time, to vſe the Sword with one hand, and inſtruments of labour in the other: an exerciſe to breede Men for longer Voiages: a backedoore to breake out ſuddenly on the enemy: an ambuſhment, whiles Ships from hence & thence ſhal at once be expected, and he which flees the one ſhall fall into the other: a redoubling of our forces when they meete: a ſafe harbour in Bermuda or in Virginia for a hundred ſailes, or many more, to awaite all opportunities: a place likely to yeelde to men of merit entertainment and reward: a place yeelding opportunity by trade there to weaken our poſſible or probable enemies, to whom now wee ſeeke for trade, and conſequently to weaken them by the want of our Commodities, and to adde a double ſtrength to our ſelues: a place commodious to preuent warre by diuerting it, to diuert it by preuenting: to ſubuert the enemies Plantations by ſudden aſſaults, or force them to coſtly Gariſons: to euert their Merchandiſing by trade ſuſpended, ſurprized, or defended with chargeable wattage: to interuert their intelligence and profits: to inuert the hearts of Malecontents, and thoſe hands which feare now curbeth and bridleth: to conuert to our parts thoſe which maintaine a fugitiue and wilde enmity with them: to auert the profits of their Mines by other imployments: and in a word, to make that vſe of others againſt them, which their examples haue taught vs in acquiring the great Empires of Mexico and Peru, with other parts of America, which without the helpe of Indians againſt Indians, banding themſelues with a contrary faction, ſuch handfuls had neuer beene able to haue effected: What ſhall I ſay more? If others impotence and importunities force a War, Virginia and Summer Ilands ſeeme to this Engliſh body as two American hands, eares, feete; two eyes for defence: two Keyes (as before is ſaid) for offence: two Armes to get, encompaſſe, embrace: two Fiſts to ſtrike: the Sword and Dagger; Ship and Pinnace; Caſtle and Rampire, Canon & Muſket, Arſenale and Peere, and whatſoeuer God ſhall pleaſe to giue to humaine induſtry, who giues all things of free grace, but to ſuch to whom he hath giuen grace freely to ſeeke them; and is alway a facile and eaſie giuer, but to them onely which loue not their eaſe and idle pleaſure. And although I am no Secretary of Gods Counſell for the Indies, yet euent hath reuealed thus much of his will, that no other Chriſtian Nation hath yet gotten and maintained poſſeſſion in thoſe parts, but the Engliſh: to whom therefore wee may gather their decreed ſeruiceableneſſe in Peace, aduantagiouſneſſe in Warre, and opportunity for both, to be both Magazine and Bulwarke, and ready euen by naturall ſcituation to ſit on the skirts of whatſoeuer enemies, which paſſe from America to Europe.

Acoſta l.3.c.4. 5.6.7. Oniedo Summary & Gen. hiſt. l.2. Herera. Deſcri. of Ind. c.2.3.

Three Spaniſh witneſſes, Acoſta, Oniedo, and Herrera, haue related this, in deſcribing the courſe of that Nauigation; yea, all experience, the Heauens alſo and Elements ſubſcribe to it. For ſuch is the ſtatute of the windes, which all Shipping in that Sea muſt obey: they muſt goe one way and returne another. To the Indies the courſe from Europe is by the Canaries, and thence entring the Tropike, they meete with the Briſes, which are perpetuall Eaſterne windes, or I know not what impetuoſity by the motion of the heauens breathed into the lower aire betwixt the Tropikes, and preſſing all vapours and exhalations vnto that ſeruice in one or other point Eaſterly: which force the Ships to returne neerer the American coaſt there to ſeeke as it were ſome alloy of that impetuous motion (euen as you ſee Water-men in the Thames rowing againſt the tide, to couet neere the ſhoare where the tide is weakeſt) and thence paſſing the Tropike to ſeeke Weſterly windes, which from twenty ſeuen to thirty ſeuen doe there vſually remaine, as wee ſee in Eddies cauſed by ſtronger motions. Thus the Spaniſh Ships on the South Sea make one way from Acapulco to the Philippinas, which is the Tropicke; and another without in the height of Iapan, to returne. And thus in the Atlanticke the Ships from their ſeuerall ports come to the Hauana in Cuba, and thence muſt take their courſe neere to Virginia and Summer Ilands, to finde the Azores: in which way, from thence it is eaſie for Engliſh Ships (not far from their owne home or Ports) to diſperſe themſelues in expectation of a ſurpriſall.

The briſes and courſe of Nauigation.

Eddy windes.

The want of ſuch helpes in Queene Elizabeths glorious times, enforced our men of Warre ſtill to awaite both for the Indian Carrickes, and all American Ships, houering about the Azores Ilands subiect to the Spanish Crowne, where they neither had harbour in stormes, nor could in any wanes refresh themselues with water, victuals, or other prouisions but by force; where a greater and stronger Armada of the enemy waited to wafte home their Ships returning; where it often hapned that the Ships could not so soone be descried, but they gat either into some Port, and vnder some Fort which secured them; or else there ran themselues aground, and sauing what they could with their persons, fired the rest, so to sacrifice it to Neptune or Vulcan, rather then permit it to English hands. Neither had the English any neere Port where to supply themselues in any distresse, or exhaustion of prouisions, but must necessarily returne home for England, if not (as sometimes) perishing in the way, with little or perhaps no prize attained. Likewise in long Voyages, as to the East Indies, and to the South Sea, hauing no harbour to friend, euery disease proued mortall to their Voyage, and forced at lest a returne, that is, a miscarrying of the designe, if not of themselues: whereas, such a refuge as Virginia and Summer Ilands might either haue recouered the Voyage intended, or refreshed and inabled them to make as good a purchase vpon the enemy, making him to pay their charges, perhaps with more gaine then the first intents could haue produced. Examples will make this more euident.

to

Disaduantage to our Ships of warre by want of some such Plantation as this is and may be: whence many Voyages were frustrated in part or wholly.

S. Seb. Sabot.

And first to begin with the first of our great Discouerers; Sir Sebastian Cabot, and Sir Thomas Pert, were set forth by King Henry the eight (as before is mentioned) in a Voyage of American Discouery, a Ship of which Fleete comming from the coast of Brasil to Domingo (Ouiedo mentions it in the Spanish stile, branding them with Piracy, yet laieth nothing to their charge but discouery and offer of trade, paying with Pewter dishes for what they tooke) was thence repelled Anno 1517. and obtained some prouisions at Saint Iohn, from whence in their returne to England, Ouiedo thinkes they perished: at least the Voyage miscarried, as appeareth by Master Thornes and Master Edens testimony thereof, for want of prouisions. The like happened to Master Hores Voyage, described in Master Hakluit Anno 1536. when want of victuals made them eate one another, and at last to steale a French Ship, in which they returned.

Anno 1517. Ouiedo. Gen. hist. l. 19. c. 13.

Master Hore. 1536.

Anno 1564. Sir Iohn Hawkins hauing made a profitable Voyage by sale of Negros on the coast Townes of America, was driuen to seeke relieue of the French (then planted in Florida, rooted thence not long after by Spanish butchery) And in another Voyage 1567. incurred by perfidious treachery of the Spaniards, a most lamentable disaster. He then sailed in the Iesus of Lubecke, hauing to his consorts, the Minion, the William and Iohn, the Iudith, the Angell and the Swallow. Hauing gotten Negros in Guinnee and made his market in the Spanish Indies, he put in for relieue at Saint Iohn de Vlhua. Whiles his Fleete was there, the Spanish Fleete came thither with their new Viceroy, which he could easily haue kept out of the harbour; but there being then no Warres betwixt England and Spaine, certaine Articles were concluded betwixt them; from which the Viceroy perfidiously resulting, with close trechery (contrary to his faith plighted) assaulted the English with a strong power on the sudden: the issue whereof was the firing, drowning, taking many of the English, whom they put also to execrable tortures. Onely the Minion and Iudith of that whole Fleete escaped, if it be an escaping to auoide Scylla and rush on Charibdis. For they were so shaken in fight first, after with stormes, lastly and worst of all, with famine, that they were forced to expose a hundred and foureteene men to the mercy of cruell elements, crueller Sauages, cruellest Spaniards, who exercised in the Inquisition with bondage, rackes, whips, fires, famishments, & plurima mortis imago, what the other had spared; so that of a hundred and foureteene not aboue the odde foure, and those foure after Odysses of wandrings, and Iliades of miseries returned home from the foure corners of the World. Had Sir Iohn Hawkins had a Virginian opportunity of refreshing, the first danger should not haue needed, and the last had not proued worse then the first: that exposing being not farre from the Virginian shoare, and the current fitting to carry him thither. Sir Francis Drake was then Captaine of the Iudith, and repaied that courtesie to the Spaniards after, who to shew the fesibility of such refreshing Anno 1585. hauing sacked Saint Iago, Domingo, Carthagena, and Saint Augustine, returned by Virginia to relieue the Colony there planted by Sir W. Raleigh.

Sir Io. Hawkins. 1564. 1567.

Spanish perfidie

Spanish cruelties

Anno 1591. Captaine George Raymund in the Penelope, Captaine Foxcroft in the Merchant Royall, and Captaine Lancaster in the Edward Bonaduenture, set forth a Voyage intended for the East Indies. Their Company were so weakened with sickneſse, that the Viceadmirall was sent backe from Soldanha with sicke men. The Admirall was lost, the Rereadmirall returned, and for want of prouisions put ouer from Saint Helena to Trinidad, in hope of relieſe. Yet being there disappointed, they intended to get to Newfoundland, but being crossed with stormes in the way, and forced backe to Port Ricco, the Ship was driuen away and lost not far from Mona, whiles the famished Company were seeking refreshing (which how easily had a Bermuda or Virginia supplied, had an English plantation flourished there?) Sir Iames Lancaster and the rest being forced to return after much misery, in French Ships for France, and thence home.

Cap. Lancaster 1591.

Anno 1596. the Beare, the Beares Whelpe, and the Beniamin, were set forth for China vnder the command of Captaine Beniamin Wood. Frier Ioaen dos Santos mentions both the two former of Raymund and Lancaster, and two also of these seene on the coast of Mozambique. Bartolome Leonardo Cap. Ben. Wood 1596. Santos. Æthiopia Orientalis.

Digitized by Google

nardo de Argensola in his Booke, printed at Madrid 1609. hath published the Letter of the Chinese Visitor of Chinchéo, in which he writeth to Don Pedro de Acunna, Gouernour of the Philippinas, that the King of China had done two Sangleys to death, for shewing the hauen to these two English Ships: and Acunna describes that the English were Pyrates, &c. after the Spanish wont. These Ships were vnheard of in England, vntill a Letter of Alcasar de Villa Sennor, Auditor of Domingo, writ to the King his Master, being by an English Ship intercepted, gaue intelligence of one of those two Ships which distressed for want of necessaries, by mortality, had foure men only left aliue in her, which seeking reliefe, put themselues into their Boate, and comming on shoare in the Iland Vtias, not farre from Domingo, with Iewels and great riches, confessed that they had taken three Portugall prizes. The Spaniards at first receiued them on good conditions, but some villaines seeing their wealth, murthered them, for which this Auditor had sentenced Roderigo de Fuentes, with others, as his Letter to the King of Spaine importeth. Now had there then beene a Virginian or Bermudan Plantation, how easily might they haue attained thither (the Boat at least) and escaped that butchery? I could hither adde instructions from the English Indian Ships 1604. and 1608. from Captaine Fenton 1582. from the Earle of Cumberlands Voyages before related, in the yeares 86. 89. 91. 93. 96. 97. and from Master Candish, Master Davis, and others.

But we haue made too long a Virginian Voyage, hauing no better freight then Arguments, which the Times doe now promise, if not worthy wise mens approbation, yet good mens indulgence; where in a weake body, and manifold weighty imployments, the willingnesse of a heart truely English, sincerely Christian, may seeme tolerable, if not commendable; pardonable if not plausible.

East Indie societie.

Another labour remaines to set downe rules and proiects of best fecibility and accomplishing this noble worke, but I am onely a Freeman, no Councellour of that Plantation, and haue neither Lands there, nor other aduenture therein, but this of my loue and credit, which with the allegiance to my Soueraigne, and desire of the publike good of this Kingdome, is more to me then all the treasures of America. I seeke the good and not the goods of England and Virginia. I follow the hand of God, which haue giuen England so many rights in Virginia, right naturall, right nationall, right by first discouery, by accepted trade, by possession surrendred voluntarily, continued constantly, right by gift, by birth, by bargaine and sale, by cession, by forfeiture in that late damnable trechery and massacre, and the fatal possession taken by so many murthered English. Gods bounty before, his iustice now hath giuen vs Virginia, that we should so in iudgement remember mercy, as to giue Virginia againe to God, in Christian acknowledgement of his goodnesse and mercy, of his word and workes, and in our owne more serious conuersion to prepare that of Virginia. God goeth before vs in making this designe honorable to Religion, to Humanity, to our Ancestors, to our King, to our Kingdome. God goeth before vs, and hath giuen Virginia so rich a portion, to allure and assure our loues; in multiplying our people, and thereby our necessities enforcing a vent: in endowing Virginia with so large a iointure, so temperate, so commodious for the climate compared with other Countries, beyond other Countries in her own diuerfified Lands, Seas, Riuers; in so fertile a soyle, in so strong, sweete, stately, delicate Woods and Timbers, in her naturall hopes of Wines, of Silkes, of the bodies of Natiues seruile and seruiceable: in Drugges, Irons, and probability also of other Mines; in all materials for Shipping, and other buildings: God goeth before vs in offering that meane to saue that which wee seeke and spend in other (perhaps enemies) Countries; to breede vp Marriners, to train vp Souldiers, to exercise labourers, by transportation of English and European creatures to plant another England in America, enriched with the best things of Europe; to giue vs Fish, Tobacco, and other present improuements as earnest of future better hopes; and that in these times, which haue so manifold necessities thereof, in regard of monies, men, and trades decayed, in regard of neighbour plantations, in the probabilities of a South-Sea glory, and in the case of obtruded warre, obtruding on vs absolute necessity, and including and concluding euery way so manifold vse. God the Father, Sonne and holy Ghost, which goe before vs in these things, if not in miraculous fire and cloudy pillars, (as when Israel went to Canaan) yet in the light of reason, and right consequence of arguments; come into vs and fillvs with the spirit of wisedome and vnderstanding, the spirit of counsell and of fortitude, the spirit of knowledge, and the feare of the Lord (I may adde the spirit of vnity and counsell) that he may vouchsafe to goe with vs, and we with him, and after him to Virginia, Amen, O Amen. Be thou the Alpha and Omega of Englands Plantation in Virginia O GOD.

The Conclusion.

Briefe recapitulation of the most remarkable premisses.

Ex. 13.

Esa. 11.

The end of the ninth Booke.

Digitized by Google

ENGLISH DISCOVERIES AND PLANTATIONS IN NEW ENGLAND AND NEW-FOVND-LAND; WITH THE PATENT AND VOYAGES TO NEW-SCOTLAND: Relations also of the Fleets set forth by Queene Elizabeth against the Spaniards.

THE TENTH BOOKE.

CHAP. I.

A briefe Relation of the Discouerie and Plantation of New-England; and of sundry Accidents therein occurring, from the yeere of our Lord 1607. to this present 1622. Published by the President and Counsell, and dedicated to the Princes Highnesse here abbreuiated.

WHen this Designe was first attempted, some of the present Company were therein chiefly interessed; who being carefull to haue the same accomplished, did send to the discouery of those Northern parts a braue Gentleman, Cap. Henry Challons, with two of the Natiues of that Territorie, the one called Maneday, the other Assecomet. But his misfortunes did expose him to the power of certaine strangers, enemies to his proceedings, so that by them, his Company were seized, the ships and goods confiscated, and that Voyage wholly ouerthrowne.

This losse, and vnfortunate beginning, did much abate the rising courage of the first Aduenturers; but immediately vpon his departure, it pleased the Noble Lord Chiefe Iustice, Sir Iohn Popham Knight, to send out another shippe, wherein Captayne Thomas Hanam went Commander, and Martine Prinne of Bristow Master, with all necessary supplyes, for the seconding of Captayne Challons and his people; who arriuing at the place appointed, and not finding that Captayne there, after they had made some Discouerie, and found the Coasts Hauens, and Harbours answerable to our desires, they returned. Vpon whose Relation the Lord Chiefe Iustice, and we all waxed so confident of the businesse, that the yeere following euery man of any worth, formerly interessed in it, was willing to ioyne in the charge for the sending ouer a competent number of people to lay the ground of a hopefull Plantation.

1. Cap. Challons.
2. Cap. Hanam sent by Lord Chiefe Iustice Popham.

Hereupon Captaine Popham, Captaine Rawley Gilbert, and others were sent away with two ships, and an hundred Landmen, Ordnance, and other prouisions necessary for their sustentation and defence; vntill other supply might be sent. In the meane-while, before they could returne,

3. Cap. Popham & Cap. Gilbert.

Digitized by Google

Sir Iohn Pophams death.

it pleased God to take vs from this worthy member, the Lord Chiefe Iustice, whose sudden death did so astonish the hearts of the most part of the Aduenturers, as some grew cold, and some did wholly abandon the businesse. Yet Sir Francis Popham his Sonne, certaine of his priuate friends, and other of vs, omitted not the next yeere (holding on our first resolution) to ioyne in sending forth a new supply, which was accordingly performed.

But the ships arriuing there, did not only bring vncomfortable newes of the death of the Lord Chiefe Iustice, together with the death of Sir Iohn Gilbert, the elder Brother vnto Captaine Rawley Gilbert, who at that time was President of that Councell: But found that the old Captaine Popham was also dead; who was the onely man (indeed) that died there that Winter, wherein they indured the greater extremities; for that, in the depth thereof, their Lodgings and stores were burnt, and they thereby wondrously distressed.

Captaine Pophams death.

This calamitie and euill newes, together with the resolution that Captaine Gilbert was forced to take for his owne returne (in that he was to succeed his Brother, in the Inheritance of his Lands in England) made the whole Company to resolue vpon nothing but their returne with the ships; and for that present to leaue that Countrey againe, hauing in the time of their abode there (notwithstanding the coldnesse of the season, and the small helpe they had) built a prettie Barke of their owne, which serued them to good purpose, as easing them in their returning.

Death of the Plantation.

The arriuall of these people here in England, was a wonderfull discouragement to all the first vndertakers, in so much as there was no more speech of setling any other Plantation in those parts for a long time after: only Sir Francis Popham hauing the ships and prouision, which remayned of the Company, and supplying what was necessary for his purpose, sent diuers times to the Coasts for Trade and fishing; of whose losse or gaines himselfe is best able to giue account.

Sir Fr. Popham.

Frenchmen plant there.

Our people abandoning the Plantation in this sort as you haue heard; the Frenchmen immediately tooke the opportunitie to settle themselues within our limits; which beeing heard of by those of Virginia, that discreetly tooke to their consideration the inconueniences that might arise, by suffering them to harbour there, they dispatched Sir Samuel Argall, with Commission to displace them, which he performed with much discretion, iudgement, valour, and dexteritie. For hauing seized their Forts, which they had built at Mount Mansell, Saint Croix, and Port Reall, he carried away their Ordnance; he also surprised their Ship, Cattle, and other Prouisions, which he transported to the Colonie in Virginia, to their great benefit. And hereby hee hath made a way for the present hopefull Plantation to be made in Noua Scotia, which we heare his Maiestie hath lately granted to Sir William Alexander Knight, one of his Maiesties most Honorable Councell of the Kingdome of Scotland, to be held of the said Crowne, and that not without some of our priuities, as by approbation vnder writing may and doth appeare. Whereby it is manifest that wee are so farre from making a Monopoly of all those Lands belonging to that Coast (as hath beene scandalously by some obiected) That wee wish that many would vndertake the like.

Sir Sa. Argall.

Noua Scotia.

In this Interim there were of vs who apprehended better hopes of good that might ensue by this attempt, being thereunto perswaded, both by the Relations of our people that had indured the many difficulties whereunto such actions are subiected, chiefly in the Winter Season; and likewise by the informations giuen them by certaine of the Natiues, that had beene kept a long time in their hands; wherefore we resolued once more to trie the veritie thereof, and to see if possibly we might finde some thing that might induce a fresh resolution to prosecute a Worke so pious and so honourable. And thereupon they dispatched Captayne Hobson, of the Ile of Wight, together with Captayne Herley, Master Iohn Matthew, Master Sturton, with two Sauages, the one called Epenow, the other Manawet; with Commission and directions fit for them to obserue and follow, the better to bring to passe what was expected. But as in all humane affaires, there is nothing more certaine, then the vncertaintie thereof; so fell it out in this; for a little before such time as they arriued vpon the Coast with the foresaid Sauages, who were Naturals of those parts, it happened there had beene one Hunt (a worthlesse fellow of our Nation, set out by certaine Merchants for loue of gaine, who, not content with the commoditie he had by the fish, and peaceable Trade he found among the Sauages, after he had made his dispatch, and was ready to set sayle more Sauage-like then they) seized vpon the poore innocent creatures, that in confidence of his honestie had put themselues into his hands. And stowing them vnder Hatches, to the number of twentie foure, carried them into the Straits, where he sought to sell them for slaues, and sold as many as he could get mony for. But when it was vnderstood from whence they were brought, the Friers of those parts took the rest from them, and kept them to be instructed in the Christian Faith; and so disappointed this vnworthy fellow of the hopes of gaine he conceiued to make by this new and Deuillish proiect.

Cap. Hobson imployed with Cap. Herley, &c. 1611.

Hunts Sauage hunting of Sauages.

Friers charitie.

This being knowne by our two Sauages, formerly spoken of, they presently contracted such an hatred against our whole Nation, as they immediately studied how to be reuenged; and contriued with their friends the best meanes to bring it to passe; but Manawet dying in a short time after the shippes arriuall there, and the other obseruing the good order, and strong guard our people people kept, ſtudied only how to free himſelfe out of our hands, and thereupon laid the plot very orderly, and indeed effected his purpoſe, although with ſo great hazard to himſelfe and friends, that laboured his reſcue, that Captayne Hobſon and his whole Company imagined hee had beene ſlaine. And though in the recouery of his bodie they wounded the Maſter of our ſhip, and diuers other of our Company, yet was not their Deſigne without the ſlaughter of ſome of their people, and the hurts of other, compaſſed, as appeared afterward.

Wicked effects of wickednes.

Hereupon Captaine Hobſon and his Company, conceiuing the end of their attempt to bee fruſtrate, reſolued without more adoe to returne, and ſo thoſe hopes, that charge and Voyage was loſt alſo, for they brought home nothing but the newes of their euill ſucceſſe of the vnfortunate cauſe thereof, and of a Warre now new begun betweene the Inhabitants of thoſe parts, and vs. A miſerable comfort for ſo weake meanes as were now left, to purſue the concluſion of ſo tedious, an Enterpriſe.

While this was a working, we found the meanes to ſend out Captaine Iohn Smith from Plimmouth, in a ſhip, together with Maſter Dermer, and diuers others with him, to lay the foundation of a new Plantation, and to try the fiſhing of that Coaſt, and to ſeeke to ſettle a Trade with the Natiues: But ſuch was his misfortune, as being ſcarce free of our owne Coaſt, he had his Maſts ſhaken ouer-boord by ſtormes and tempeſts, his ſhip wonderfully diſtreſſed, and in that extremitie forced to come backe againe; ſo as the ſeaſon of the yeere being almoſt ſpent, wee were of neceſſitie enforced to furniſh him with another ſhip, and taking out the prouiſion of the firſt, diſpatched him away againe, who comming to the height of the Weſterne Ilands, was chaſed by a French Pirate, and by him made Priſoner, although his ſhip in the night eſcaped away, and returned with the loſſe of much of her prouiſion, and the ouerthrow of that Voyage, to the ruine of that poore Gentleman Captayne Smith, who was detayned Priſoner by them, and forced to ſuffer many extremities, before he got free of his troubles. Cap. I. Smith

Notwithſtanding theſe Diſaſters, it pleaſed God ſo to worke for our incouragement againe, as he ſent into our hands Taſquantum, one of thoſe Sauages that formerly had beene betrayed by this vnworthy Hunt before named, by whoſe means there was hope conceiued to worke a peace betweene vs, and his friends, they beeing the principall Inhabitants of that Coaſt, where the fire was kindled. But this Sauage Taſquantum, being at that time in the New-found-land with Captaine Maſon, Gouernour there for the vndertakers of that Plantation: Maſter Dermer (who was there alſo, and ſometimes before imployed as wee haue ſaid by vs, together with Captayne Iohn Smith) found the meanes to giue vs intelligence of him, and his opinion of the good vſe that might bee made of his Employment, with the readineſſe of Captayne Maſon, to further any of our Attempts that way, eyther with Boates or other prouiſion neceſſarie, and reſoluing himſelfe to goe from thence, aduiſed vs to ſend ſome to meete with him at our vſuall place of fiſhing; to ayde him in his indeuour, that they ioyning together, might bee able to doe what he hoped would be very acceptable vnto all wel-wiſhers of that buſineſſe. Vpon this newes, we diſpatched the next ſeaſon Cap. Rocraft, with a company for that purpoſe, in hope to haue met with Captaine Dermer; but the care and diſcretion of Cap. Maſon was ſuch, finding Captayne Dermers reſolution to goe beyond his meanes, that he perſwaded him firſt to go for England, that prouiding himſelfe there, as was requiſite, hee might proceed in time expedient, which counſell he obſerued (as fit it was) although our expectation of his ioyning with Captaine Rocraft was thereby diſappointed. Yet ſo it happened, that Captaine Rocraft at his arriuall in thoſe parts, met with a French Barke that lay in a Creeke a fiſhing, and trading, which hee ſeized on, and ſent home the Maſter and Company in the ſame ſhip which hee went out in. Cap. Maſon Gouernor in New found land Plantation. Cap. Rocraft. French ſeized.

With this Barke and his owne Company, he meant to keepe the Coaſt that Winter quarter, being very well fitted both with Salt, and other neceſſaries for his turne: but as this was an Act of extremitie (the poore man being of our owne Religion) ſo ſucceeded it accordingly. For in a ſhort time after, certaine of this Captaynes Company, conſpired together to cut his throate, and to make themſelues Maſters of the whole ſpoyle, and ſo to ſeeke a new Fortune where they could beſt make it. This Conſpiracie being diſcouered to the Captayne, he let it go on, till the time that it ſhould haue beene put in execution, when hee caught them in their owne traine, and ſo apprehended them in the very inſtant that they were purpoſed to begin their Maſſacre. Conſpiracie.

But after hee had preuented the miſchiefe, and ſeized vpon the Malefactors, hee tooke to his conſideration what was beſt to bee done with them. And being loth by himſelfe to diſpatch them as they deſerued, hee reſolued to put them a ſhoare, thinking by their hazard, that it was poſſible they might diſcouer ſomething, that might aduance the publike; and ſo giuing them ſome Armes for their defence, and ſome victuall for their ſuſtentation, vntill they knew better how to prouide for themſelues, hee left them a place called Sawaguatock, where they remayned not long, but got from thence to Menehighon, an Iland lying ſome three leagues in the Sea, and fifteene leagues from that place, where they remayned all that Winter, with bad lodging, and worſe fare, yet came all ſafe home ſaue one ſickely man, which dyed there, the reſt returned with the Shippe wee ſent for Rocrafts ſupply and prouiſion, to make a Fiſhing Voyage. Conſpirators laſt Sawaguatock Menehighon.

After

After theſe fellowes were landed, the Captaine finding himſelfe but weakely man'd, and his Ship to draw too much water to Coaſt thoſe places, that by his inſtructions hee was aſſigned to diſcouer, hee reſolued to goe for Virginia, where he had liued a long time before, and had (as hee conceiued) many friends, that would helpe him with ſome things that hee had occaſion to vſe. Arriuing there, he was not deceiued of his expectation; for Sir Samuel Argall being their Gouernour, and one that reſpected him much for his owne ſake was the readier to helpe him, in regard of the good hee wiſhed to the buſineſſe wherein he was imployed.

But all this could not preuaile, for after that Sir Samuel Argall came from thence (his departure, being more ſudden then was expected) it fell out that the new Gouernour entred the Harbour: and finding Rocraft ready to bee gone, ſent to him to command him to come aboord to ſpeake with him, which hee readily obeyed, as ſoone as hee could fit his boat and men for that purpoſe. And ſo leauing his Barke with her great Anker at head, and taking with him the halfe of his company, he was forced to ſtay aboard the new Gouernors Ship that night. In the meane while a ſtorme ariſing, our Barke wanting hands to doe their labour, droue a ſhoare, and there ſunke. But yet the Gouernour and Captaine ſo laboured the next day, when they knew thereof, as that they freed her againe, but that occaſion forced our Captain to ſtay ſo long in the Countrey to fit himſelfe a new, as in the interim a quarrell fell out betweene him and another of that place; ſo as Rocraft was ſlaine, and the Barke ſunke the ſecond time, and finally diſabled from yeelding vs any benefit to this preſent.

Barke ſunke.

Rocraft ſlaine.

But we not knowing this diſaſter, and Captain Darmer arriuing with his Sauage out of Newfound land, diſpatched him away the next ſeaſon, in a Ship wee ſent againe for the fiſhing buſineſſe, and aſſigned him a company to ioyne with Rocraft and his people. Captain Darmer arriuing there, and not finding Rocraft, was a little perplexed, and in doubt what to doe: yet hearing by thoſe Mutiners which hee found there, that hee was gone for Virginia; he was hopefull of his returne; and liued in that expectation, till ſuch time as he heard (by a Ship that came from thence to fiſh for the Colony) the confuſion of his fortune, and the end of his miſery in this world. Then hee determined to take the Pinnace, that the yeere before was aſſigned to Rocraft, for him to make the Trade with, and with her to proceed on his deſigne, and ſo embarked himſelfe and his prouiſion and company in her. And leauing the Fiſher-men to their labour, he coaſted the ſhoare from thence, ſearching euery Harbour, and compaſſing euery Cape-land, till hee arriued in Virginia; where hee was in hope to meet with ſome of the prouiſion, or company of Rocraft, to help to ſupply him of what hee wanted; as alſo to lay a Decke vpon his Pinnace, that before had not any, and now was taught by experience the neceſſitie of hauing that defect ſupplied.

Cap. Darmers voiage.

Neceſſitie of a Deck in Pinnaces of diſcouerie.

But thoſe hopes failed him (all being before that time ruined and diſperſed) ſo farre, as he ſaw it in vaine to hope for helpe by that meanes, and therefore attempted to make the beſt of what hee had of his owne. And going to ſet his men a worke, they all in few dayes after their arriuall, fell ſicke of a diſeaſe which hapned at that time in the Countrey, ſo as now he was not onely forced to be without hope of their helping of him, but muſt labour himſelfe all hee could to attend and ſuſtaine them; but ſo God fauoured him, that they recouered, and in time conuenient he diſpatched his buſineſſe there, and put himſelfe to Sea againe, reſoluing to accompliſh in his iourney backe to New-England, what in his laſt Diſcouery he had omitted. In his paſſage he met with certaine Hollanders, who had a trade in Hudſons Riuer ſome yeeres before that time, with whom he had conference about the ſtate of that coaſt, and their proceedings with thoſe people: whoſe anſwere gaue him good content. Hee betooke himſelfe to the following of his buſineſſe, diſcouering many goodly Riuers, and exceeding pleaſant and fruitfull Coaſts and Ilands, for the ſpace of eightie leagues from Eaſt to Weſt, for ſo that Coaſt doth range along, from Hudſons Riuer to Cape Iames.

Hollanders in Hudſons Riuer.

Darmers diſcoueries.

Now after wee had found by Captaine Rocrafts relation made the yeere before, the hopes hee conceiued of the benefits that Coaſt would afford, towards the vpholding of the charge for ſetling our Plantation, by reaſon of the commodities ariſing by Fiſhing and Furres, if a courſe might bee taken for the managing of that buſineſſe, as was fit for ſuch a deſigne; as well as for the aduancement of the publike good of our whole Nation, and ſatisfaction of euery well diſpoſed perſon that had a will to be interreſſed therein. It was held to be moſt conuenient to ſtrengthen our ſelues by a new Grant to bee obtained from his Royal Maieſty: the rather, finding that thoſe of Virginia had by two ſeuerall Patents ſetled their bounds, and excluded all from intermedling with them that were not free of their Company; and had wholly altered the forme of their Gouernment, from the firſt ground layed for the managing the affaires of both Colonies, leauing vs as deſperate, and our buſineſſe as abandoned. Theſe conſiderations (as is ſaid) together with the neceſſitie of ſetling our affaires, bounds and limits, diſtinct from theirs, made vs reſolue to petition his Maieſtie for the renewing of our Grant. By which time the rumour of our hopes was ſo publikely ſpread abroad, and the commodities of the Fiſh and Trade ſo looked into, as it was deſired that all that Coaſt might bee made free, as well to thoſe of Virginia, as to vs to make their commoditie: How iuſt or vniuſt that motion was, wee will not argue, ſeeing the buſineſſe is ended. By this meanes our proceedings were interrupted, and wee queſtioned about it; firſt, by the New Patent thought on.

Counſell

Counsell of Virginia, whom wee thought to haue beene fully satisfied therein, before wee could haue way giuen vs for a new Patent, both parties hauing beene heard by certaine of the Lords of the Councell; and the businesse by them so ordered, as wee were directed to proceed and to haue our Grant agreeable to the libertie of the Virginia Company, the frame of our gouernment excepted; but this order not being liked of, it was againe heard and concluded. Lastly, the Patent being past the Seale, it was stopt vpon new suggestions to the King, and by his Maiesty referred to the Councel to be setled, by whom the former Orders were confirmed, the difference cleered, and we orderred to haue our Patent deliuered vs.

These disputes held vs almost two yeeres, so as all men were afraid to ioyne with vs, and we thereby left hopelesse of any thing more, than that which our owne fortunes would yeeld to aduance our proceedings, in which time so many accidents hapned vnto vs at home and abroad, that wee were faine to giue order by the Ships wee sent a fishing, for the retiring of Master Dermer and his people, vntill all things were cleered, and wee better prouided of meanes to goe through with our designe: But this worthy Gentleman confident of the good likely to ensue, and resolutely resoluing to pursue the ends he aymed at, could not be perswaded to looke backe, as yet; and so refusing to accept our offer, began againe to prosecute his Discouery, wherein he was betrayed by certaine new Sauages, who sodainly set vpon him, giuing him fourteene or fifteene wounds; but by his valour and dexteritie of spirit hee freed himselfe out of their hands, yet was constrained to retire into Virginia againe the second time, for the cure of his wounds, where he fell sicke of the infirmities of that place, and thereof dyed: so ended this worthy Gentleman his dayes, after he had remained in the discouery of that Coast two yeeres, giuing vs good content in all hee vndertooke; and after hee had made the peace betweene vs and the Sauages, that so much abhorred our Nation for the wrongs done them by others, as you haue heard: but the fruit of his labour in that behalfe wee as yet receiue to our great commoditie, who haue a peaceable Plantation at this present among them, where our people both prosper and liue in good liking, and assurednesse of their neighbours, that had beene formerly so much exasperated against vs, as will more at large appeare hereafter.

Dermer betrayed by Sauages. See sup. his owne letter to me.

His death.

Peaceable Plantation by his meanes.

But hauing passed all these storms abroad, and vndergone so many home-bred oppositions, and freed our Patent, which wee were by order of State assigned to renew, for the amendment of some defects therein contained, wee were assured of this ground more boldly to proceed on than before; and therefore wee tooke first to consideration, how to raise the meanes to aduance the Plantation. In the examination thereof, two wayes did first offer themselues: The one was the voluntary contribution of the Patentees; The other, by an easie ransoming of the freedomes of those that had a will to partake only of the present profits arising by the Trade and Fishing vpon the Coast. The first was to proceed from those Noble-men, and others that were Patentees, and they agreed by order among themselues to disburse a hundred pounds a piece, for the aduancement of such necessary businesse as they had in hand. The second was to bee accomplished by setling such liberties and orders in the Westerne Cities and Townes, as might induce euery reasonable man, in, and about them, affecting the publike good, or a regular proceeding in the businesse of Trade, to embrace an vniformitie, and to ioyne a communitie or ioynt stock together, &c.

Patent renewed.

BVt this Countrey, what by the generall and particular situation is so temperate, as it seemeth to hold the golden meane, and indeed is most agreeable to the nature of our owne, which is made manifest by experience, the most infallible proofe of all assertions; insomuch as our people that are setled, enioy their life and health much more happily then in other places; which can be imputed to no other cause, then to the temperature of the Climate. Now as the Clime is found to be so temperate, so delicate and healthfull, both by reason and experience; such is the soile also, some parts thereof yeelding wonderfull increase, both of Corne, the Natiues haue most vse of; as also of our owne, of all sorts: with infinite varietie of nourishing Rootes, and other Hearbs and Fruits common among them, but rare with vs. Besides, the Coast doth abound with most conuenient Hauens and Harbors, full of singular Ilands fit for Plantation; repleniſhed with Plants and Wood of all sorts; as Oake, Cedars, Spruce, Fir, Pyne, Walnut, Chestnut, Elme, Sassafras, Plum-trees, and Calamus Aromaticus, &c.

Temperate Climate.

Fertile Soile.

Commodious Coast.

The people are tractable (if they be not abused) to commerce and Trade withall, and as yet haue good respect of vs. The Seas are stored with all kindes of excellent Fish, and in many places vpon the Coast, fit to make Salt in. The Countrey aboundeth with diuersitie of wilde Fowle, as Turkies, Partridges, Swans, Cranes, wild Geese of al sorts, wild Ducks of three sorts, many Doues, especially when Strawberries are ripe.

Fowle.

There are seuerall sorts of Deere in those parts, and some that bring forth two, three, and foure young at once, which is a manifest proofe of the fertilitie of the Soile, or temper of the Clime, or both together. There is also a certaine Beast, that the Natiues call a Mosse, hee is as big bodied as an Oxe, headed like a fallow Deere, with a broad Palme, which hee mues euery yeere, as doth the Deere, and neck like a Red Deere, with a short Mane running downe along the Ranes of his back, his haire long like an Elke, but esteemed to be better then that for Sadlers vse, he hath likewise

Deere.

The Mosse a strange Beast described.

Digitized by Google

wiſe a great bunch hanging downe vnder his throat, and is of the colour of our blacker ſort of fallow Deere, his legs are long, and his feet as big as the feet of our Oxen, his taile is longer then the Single of a Deere, and reacheth almoſt downe to his Huxens, his skinne maketh very good Buffe, and his fleſh is excellent good food, which the Natiues vſe to Ierkin and keepe all the yeere to ſerue their turne, and ſo proues very ſeruiceable for their vſe. There haue beene many of them ſeene in a great Iland vpon the Coaſt, called by our people Mount Manſell, whither the Sauages goe at certaine ſeaſons to hunt them; the manner whereof is by making of ſeuerall fires, and ſetting the Countrey with people, to force them into the Sea, to which they are naturally addicted, and then there are others that attend them in their Boates with Bowes and weapons of ſeuerall kindes, wherewith they ſlay and take at their pleaſure. And there is hope that this kind of Beaſts may be made ſeruiceable for ordinary labour, with Art and Induſtry.

Mount Manſell

How they take the Moſſe or Muſſe.

Commodities.

The knowne Commodities of that Countrey are Fiſh of ſeuerall ſorts, rich Furres, as Beauers, Otters, Martins, blacke Fox, Sables, &c. There are likewiſe plentie of Vines, of three kinds, and thoſe pleaſant to the taſte, yet ſome better then other. There is Hempe, Flax, Silkgraſſe, ſeuerall veines of Ironſtone, commodities to make Pitch, Roſen, Tarre; Deale-boords of all ſorts, Spars, Maſts, for Ships of all burdens; in a word, there comes no commoditie out of France, Germany, or the Sound, but may be had there with reaſonable labour and induſtry.

Seuerall Plantations along the Coaſt.

Further, wee haue ſetled at this preſent ſeuerall Plantations along the Coaſt, and haue granted Patents to many more that are in preparation to bee gone with all conueniencie. Thoſe of our people that are there haue both health and plenty, ſo as they acknowledge there is no want of any thing, but of induſtrious people, to reape the commodities that are there to be had, and they are indeed ſo much affected to the place, as they are loth to bee drawne from thence, although they were directed to returne to giue ſatisfaction to thoſe that ſent them, but choſe rather to performe that office by Letters, together with there excuſe for breach of their duty in that behalfe. And thus you ſee there is no labour well imployed, but hath his reward at one time or other. Theſe incouragements haue imboldned vs to proceed to the ingaging of our ſelues for the building of ſome Ships of good burden, and extraordinary mould, to lie vpon the Coaſt for the defence of Merchants and Fiſhermen that are imployed there, as alſo to Waft the Fleets, as they goe to and from their Markets: and wee purpoſe from henceforth to build our ſhipping there, where wee find all commodities fit for that ſeruice, together with the moſt opportune places that can bee deſired.

Laſtly, finding that we haue ſo far forth preuailed, as to wind our ſelues into familiaritie with the Natiues (which are in no great number) along the Coaſt, for two hundred Leagues together, wee haue now diſpatched ſome of our people of purpoſe, to dyue into the bowels of the Continent, there to ſearch and finde out what Port, or Place, is moſt conuenient to ſettle our mayne Plantation in, where wee meane to make the Reſidencie of our State and Gouernment, as alſo to bee aſſured what other commodities may bee rayſed for the publike, and priuate benefit of thoſe that are dealers in that buſineſſe, and willing to bee intereſſed in any the Lands there: Whither is gone this yeere already, for Trade and Fiſhing onely, thirtie Saile of the better ſort of Ships belonging to the Weſterne parts, beſides thoſe who are gone for tranſportation of the Planters, or ſupply of ſuch as are already planted, whoſe returne (as is ſuppoſed) will amount (at the leaſt) to thirty thouſand pound, the greater part whereof comes home in Bullion. And therefore as touching the third happineſſe of theſe parts, which is the Sea, there needeth no other greater commendation, then this benefit of Fiſhing aſſured vnto vs by common Experience; although it affords many other hopes, both in regard of the facilitie of the Nauigation, the boldneſſe of the Coaſt, the conueniencie of Roades, Hauens and Harbors, for performance of all manner of imployments; yet is there alſo found Showes of Pearle, Ambergreece, great numbers of Whales, and other merchantable meanes to raiſe profit to the induſtrious Inhabitants or diligent Traders.

Thirtie ſaile 1622.

CHAP. II.

The Voyage of M. HENRY CHALLONS intended for the North Plantation of Virginia, 1606. taken by the way, and ill vſed by Spaniards: written by IOHN STONEMAN Pilot.

ON Tueſday the twelfth of Auguſt, 1606. M. Henry Challons Gentleman ſet forth from Plimouth, in our ſmall Ship of the burthen of fiftie fiue Tunnes or thereabout, called the Richard of Plimouth. Wherein went twentie nine Engliſhmen, and two of the fiue Sauages (whoſe names were Mannido and Aſſacomoit) which were brought into England the yeere before out of the North parts of Virginia, from our goodly Riuer by him thrice diſcouered, called in the Latitude of of 43. degrees, 20. minutes were imployed for a farther discouery of these Coasts: And if any good occasion were offered, to leaue as many men as wee could spare in the Country. Being victualled for eleuen or twelue moneths, at the charges of the Honourable Sir Iohn Popham Knight, Lord chiefe Iustice of England, Sir Ferdinando Gorges Knight, Captaine of the Fort of Plimouth, together with diuers other worshipfull Knights, Gentlemen and Merchants of the West Countrye: Iohn Stoneman of Plimouth being Pilot, who had beene in the foresaid parts of Virginia the yeere before, with George Waymouth: The Masters name was Nicholas Hine of Cockington, neere Dartmouth;

The last day of August wee fell with the Ile of Madera, where we watered and refreshed our selues, and stayed three dayes, being very kindly vsed by the Inhabitants. The third day of September wee departed from thence, passing betweene Gomora and Palma, two of the Canary Iles, and from thence were driuen by contrary winds, to take a more Southerly course then we intended, and so spent more then sixe weekes before wee could recouer any of the Ant-Iles. The first that wee could recouer, was the Ile of Saint Lucia, in the Latitude of 14. degrees, 20. minutes, where we refreshed our selues with Wood and Water. And saw certaine of the Sauages there, about fortie or fiftie, came vnto vs at our Ship in one of their Cannoas, bringing vnto vs Tobacco, Potatos, Plantins, and Cassaui Bread, the which Sauages had slaine more then fortie of our Nation, the yeere before 1605. as after wee vnderstood by Philip Glasco, and Miles Pett, being two of Captaine Nicholas, Saint Iohns company, which was there treacherously slaine among the rest.

Madera.

Saint Lucia.

Fortie English slaine by Sauages. 1605. See the storie, sup. pag. 1255.

Hauing stayed heare three dayes, about the two and twentieth of October we departed thence to the Northward. And in passing by the Ile of Dominica, wee chanced to see a white Flag put forth on the shoare, whereat maruelling, wee supposed that some Christians had sustained shipwrack their. And forthwith a Cannoa came off from the shoare towards vs, which when they came neere, being very little wind, we layed our Ship by the lee and stayed for them a little, and when they were come within a little distance of the Ship, wee perceiued in the Cannoa a Friar, who cried aloud in the Latine tongue, saying, I beseech, as you are Christians, for Christ his sake to shew some mercy and compassion on mee, I am a Preacher of the Word of God, a Friar of the Order of Franciscus in Smill, by name Friar Blasius. And that hee had beene there sixteene moneths a Slaue vnto those Sauages; and that other two Friars which were of his company they had murthered and throwne into the Sea. We demanded of him then, how he got so much fauour to preserue his life, his Brethren being murthered: Hee answered, because hee did shew the Sauages how to fit them Sayles for their Cannoas, and so to ease them of much labour often in rowing, which greatly pleased the Sauages as appeared, for wee saw them to vse sayles in their Cannoas, which hath not beene seene before.

Dominica.

Friar Blasius his request.

Then we demanded of him where they had this Linnen Cloth to make those Sayles: hee answered, That about two yeeres before that, three Gallions comming to the West Indies were cast away on the Ile of Gwadalupa, where abundance of Linnen Cloth and other Merchandise was cast on shoare. We demanded farther, what was the cause of his being in this place, and how he came thither: he answered, That the King of Spaine did euery yeere, send out of euery great Monastery certaine Friars into the remote parts of the Indies, both to seeke to conuert the Sauages, as also to seeke out what benefits or commodities might be had in those parts, and also of what force the Sauages were of, and what number of them were in the seuen Ant-Iles, viz. Saint Vincent Grenado, Saint Lucia, Matualina, Dominica, Gwadalupa, Aisey. The which the said Friar Blasius said he had diligently noted and obserued, and did hope to make perfect relation of such great benefits and riches as was to be drawne from thence, as he doubted not but would bee greatly accepted of his King, if hee might liue to returne to declare it: For, said hee, I haue seene in one Riuer discending from the Mountaines in the Ile of Dominica, the Sand to glitter like Gold or find Copper, whereupon I tooke some of it, and chewed it betweene my teeth, and found it perfect Mettall, the Sauages noting me, began to haue some iealousie of me, so as I durst not take any farther notice of it, neither would they suffer him forward to come neere to that place. And farther hee said, That if the great plentie of diuers Fruits and Roots fit for mans sustenance were perfectly knowne, together with the Sugar-canes that they haue in those Iles, and the fertilitie of the soyle he thought it would be very shortly inhabited; and as for the number of Sauages there, as neere as we could vnderstand, was scarce one thousand of all sorts of men, women, and children in all the said seuen Iles.

Three Gallions lost at Guadalupa.

Causes of yeerly sending of Friars out of Spaine.

Gold in Dominica.

Now, being moued with pitie at the lamentable complaint, and humble suit of this distressed Friar, wee tooke him into our Ship, and sent away the Sauages much discontented. And from thence wee sayled to the Ile of Saint Iohn De-port-rico, where on the nine and twentieth of October, wee arriued on the Southside, and forthwith sent the Friar on shoare, and deliuered him to two Headsmen, which most thankfully receiued him, and of their courtesie brought vs a fat Cow, and proferred vs more with Hogs, Calues, or any thing else that they could procure vs in recompence of the good deed done to the Friar.

They land the Friar on Port Rico.

Wee departed from thence, and sayled out betweene the Iles of Saint Iohn De-portrico, and

Hispa-

Digitized by Google

Hispaniola standing away to the Northward. And leauing the great shoalds called Abrioio, on our Larboord side, being in the Latitude of 21. and 22. degrees, from thence Westward, our course North North-west, and North-west and by North, vntill wee were in the Latitude of 27. degrees or better, and about one hundred and eightie leagues from Saint Iohn de Port Rico.

In this place hauing had a very great storme of Wind and Raine continuing fiftie sixe houres and more before on the tenth day of Nouember, about ten of the clocke in the morning, suddenly we found our selues in the middest of a Fleet of eight Sayle of ships in a very thicke fogge of mist and raine, so as we could not see them before they were very neere, and within shot of them, wherein three of them were on the wind-ward of vs, on a third and fourth more to lee-ward: those at the wind-ward came rome vnto vs, and shot at vs, requiring vs to speake with their Admirall. When we saw that by no meanes we could auoid them, but that they would speake with vs, we put abroad our Colours, and went toward the Admirall, before wee came vnto him, he likewise strooke downe our Sayle, and came vnder his lee, demanding his pleasure: the other ship which first shot vs, all our Sayles being downe, and shot our mayne Sayle in pieces lying on the Decke.

They by vnhappy hap fall amongst Spanish ships.

And forthwith the Admirall came on boord of vs, with two and twentie men in their ships Boate with Rapiers, Swords, and halfe-pikes. We being all in peace stood readie to entertayne them in peace. But assoone as they were entred on boord of vs, they did most cruelly beate vs all, and wounded two of our Company in the heads with their Swords, not sparing our Captayne nor any. Also they wounded Assacomoit, one of the Sauages aforesaid, most cruelly in seuerall places in the bodie, and thrust quite through the arme, the poore creature creeping vnder a Cabbin for feare of their rigour: and as they thrust at him, wounding him, he cried still. King Iames, King Iames, King Iames his ship, King Iames his ship. Thus hauing beaten vs all downe vnder the Deckes, presently they beat vs vp againe, and thrust vs ouer-boord into their Boate, and so sent vs on boord of the Admirall ship. Neither would they suffer any of vs to speake a word, to shew the cause of our passing the Seas in these parts. Neyther regarded they any thing, our Commission which the Captayne held forth vnto them in his hand: vntill that the Admirall with the Company of foure other of the ships, had rifled, spoyled, and deliuered all the Merchandize and goods of the ship among them: which beeing done, they also diuided vs beeing thirtie persons in all into the said fiue ships, by seuen, six, fiue, and foure to a ship.

They are borded, taken and abused.

King Iames his name little respected by Spaniards.

Three of the former eight Sayle made Sayle away, and neuer came neere vs, neither were partakers of our spoyle. Then they also repayred our Maine Sayle which was torne with the shot aforesaid, and put their men into her. And after because they could not make her to sayle well, they tooke two of our men, and put into her to helpe them, the other fiue ships and our ship kept company two or three dayes together. After this they separated themselues either from other, not through any tempest or storme, but through wilfull negligence or simple Ignorance, by shaping contrary courses the one from the other. So as not two of them kept company together. My selfe and sixe more of our company in the Vice-Admirall (of the burthen of one hundred and eightie tunnes; called the Peter of Siuill, the Captaynes name was Andreas Barbesa) beeing alone, and hauing lost the company of the Fleet, continued our course vntill the middle of December: at which time being about twentie leagues off from the Ile of Santa Maria, one of the Iles of the Azores, the Vice-Admiral and the whole company disliking the great Ignorance of the Pilot, because he had told them ten dayes before that he was very neere the Hands, and had waited all this time, and could find any of them, entreated me very earnestly to shew my skill. And the Pilot himselfe brought mee his Instruments, and besought mee most earnestly to assist him, and to appease the company. Whereunto by there much importunitie I yeelded. And by Gods assistance on Christmasse Eeue, after our English account, I brought them safe to the Barre of Saint Lucas, being the first ship of the whole Fleet that arriued there.

One of the ships of this Fleet, by the great Ignorance of the Spanish Masters, Pilots, and Mariners was driuen beyond all the Coast of Spaine, into Burdeaux in Gascoyne, In which shippe the Officers of the Admiraltie of France, finding foure of our Englishmen prisoners vnder the Deckes in hold; to wit, Master Daniell Tucker, who was our Cape Merchant, Pierce Gliddon and two others, did very friendly set them at libertie; and the said Daniel Tucker presently arrested the Spanish ship and goods beeing of great value, which of long time remayneth vnder arrest.

French courtesie.

The good Duke of Medina hearing of the arriuall of certaine English prisoners taken here, the Coast of the West Indies, sent command to the Captaynes of the Spanish ships, to bring foure of the chiefest to be brought before him. Whereupon my selfe, Master Thomas Saint Iohn, Iohn Walrond our Steward, and William Stone our Carpenter were brought before him. The ship wherein Master Challons was, was not yet come.

Master Danid Newill an Englishman dwelling in Saint Lucas, was appointed our Interpretor. And then the Duke required me vpon my oath to yeeld a true and faithfull answere, according to the whole state and manner of our Voyage and proceedings, which I did, according to the former Relation afore written, whereupon his Excellencie replyed vnto the Spanish Captaynes which had brought vs, saying, if this bee true which this Englishman affirmeth, you haue greatly wronged these men. And so commanded them to prouide meate, drinke, and fit lodging for vs, and to bring vs againe the next day before him. They sent vs neuertheleſſe to Sivill, where wee were brought to a Dutchmans house, called Signior Petro, where we were reasonably lodged, and entertayned that night.

which

The next morning being New yeeres day we were brought before the President of Sivill, at the Contractation, who hearing of our comming, and not vouchsafing to speake with vs, sent foure Officers to vs, and cast vs into Prison. Where for the space of fiue dayes wee had publike allowance, but such as poore men which were there Prisoners, also did of their mercie bestow on vs. At length after many humble Sutes, and earneſt Petitions exhibited to the President, we had a Riall of Plate allowed to each man a day, which is sixe pence English, which by reason of the dearth of all sorts of victuall in those parts, will not goe so far as three pence in England. Their imprisonment.

And so at seuerall times, within one moneth after eleuen more of our Company were committed to Prison, as they came home, whereof our Captaine was one. Notwithstanding that the good Duke of Medina had discharged both him and all those of his Company, which came into Spaine with him, and willed him to goe home to the Court of England, or to the Court of Spaine where he thought to haue best reliefe for his poore imprisoned Company. Whereupon Nicholas Hine our Master, and two more of our men wisely foreseeing what was like to bee the issue, made haste away out of the Citie, and so got passage and escaped into England.

Before the comming of our Captaine to Sivill, my selfe and eleuen more of my Company were examined before the President of the Contractation: who finding no iust cause of offence in vs, did often earnestly examine me of the manner and situation of the Countrie of Virginia, together with the Commodities and benefit thereof. And after the comming of our Captaine, they likewise examined him to the same purpose. We answered both to one purpose, according to our Commission in writing, which the Spaniards at our taking at Sea, had preserued and deliuered vp vnto the hands of the President. Within few dayes after, they gaue our Captaine and Master Thomas, Saint Iohn, libertie of mayne Prison, vpon the securitie of two English Merchants, which were Master William Rapier, and Master Iohn Pocksford, whereof the later is dwelling and maried in Sivill. The rest of the Company being one and twentie in Prison, continued still in miserable estate. And about two moneths after, Robert Cooke of London one of our Company fell sick of a Flixe, whereof he languished three moneths and more, and by no meanes that wee could make, could get him forth to bee cured, although wee spent more then sixtie Rials in Supplicaues and Sites to get him out. At length being dead, they caused his bodie to bee drawne vp and downe the Prison by the heeles, naked, in most contemptible manner, crying, Behold the Lutheran, as fiue others of our Company beeing then in Prison beheld: and so laid him vnder the Conduit, and powred water into his dead bodie. This done, they cut off his Eares, Nose and Members, as the Spaniards themselues confessed vnto vs, and so conueyed his bodie wee could neuer learne whether, although we proffered them money to haue his dead corps to burie it. Hard hearted Spaniard. Cruell inhumanitie.

Shortly after Nathaniel Humfrie our Boatswaine was stabbed into the belly with a Knife by a Spaniard, which was a slaue in the Prison, and fourteene dayes after dyed, who beeing dead I went vnto the Keeper of the Prison, desiring to buy his dead bodie to burie it, and so for twenty Rials I bought his bodie, and buried it in the field. Then we besought the President for Iustice on this slaue which had slaine our Boatswaine: he demanded what we would haue of the slaue. And we requested, that as he had slaine an honest and worthy man of ours causeleſſe, that hee might die for it according to the Law. The President answered no, but if we would haue him condemned for two or three yeares more to the Gallies he should. For said hee, The King of Spaine will not giue the life of the worſt Slaue that he hath, for the beſt Subiect the King of England hath, and so sent vs away with this answere. Whereupon being out of all hope of Iustice with the President, we repaired vnto the Regent being an Eccleſiasticall man, one of the chiefest Iudges of the Citie, desiring likwise Iustice on the Murtherer aforesaid; who in kind tearmes promised vs Iustice, and so willed vs to retaine Counsell and Atturnies to prosecute our Sute; which wee did accordingly, and so after two moneths Sute, and the cost of more then two hundred Rials on Lawyers, Scribes and other Officers at length we had him hanged by the fauour of the Regent, which otherwise we had neuer obtained. Spaniſh Presidents respect to the Engliſh. Honeſt Spaniards.

And now I may not omit to shew how I got the libertie to haue the scope of the Citie for my Race to come, and go. Hauing beene three moneths in close Prison with our poore company as aforesaid. At length I got the fauour of two Englishmen inhabiting in Sivill named Constantine Collins, and Henry Roberts who did ingage themselues for me. The Spaniards were very desirous to haue me to serue their State, and proffered me great wages, which I refused to doe, affirming, that this imployment which I had in hand, was not yet ended vntill which time I would not determine any.

Then the Alcadie maior of the Contractation House and diuers others Merchants perswaded me to make them some descriptions and Maps of the Coast and parts of Virginia, which I also refused to doe. They being discontent with me, sent mee againe to Prison, where I continued two and twentie dayes, and then I making meanes vnto my good friends borrowed money, and so gaue diuers bribes vnto the keepers of the Prison, whereupon they gaue mee libertie to goe abroad againe into the Citie at my pleasure. And waiting euery day for some order from the Court of Spaine of our discharge, there came none but delayes and prolonging of our troubles and miseries. So as we began almost to despaire of libertie.

At length an honest Dutch Merchant dwelling in Siuill, named Hanse Eloyse, sent vnto mee to speake with me, which when I came vnto him, signified vnto me what he had learned of one of the Iudges of the Contractation: who told him as he reported vnto me, that the Spaniards had a great hate vnto me aboue all others, because they vnderstood that I had beene a former Discouerer in Virginia, at the bringing into England of those Sauages; and that they thought it was by my instigation to perswade our State to inhabit those parts. And because they had receiued so small knowledge of those parts by my confession: and that they could not perswade mee to serue that State, neither would make them any note draught, or descriptions of the Countrie. They resolued to bring to the Racke and torment me, whereby to draw some further knowledge by confession from me, before any discharge might come for vs. The which this honest Merchant considering, and the Innocencie of our case, gaue me to vnderstand. And, wished mee rather to flie and preserue my selfe, then to stand to their mercie on the Racke. I hearing this the next morning, being the three and twentieth of October, suddenly fled from Siuill, and with me Master Thomas Saint Iohn aforesaid, and one other of our Company named Iames Stoneman my Brother, whom through great cost and charges bestowed on the Keepers of the Prison a little before I had got forth to bee cured of a Callenture. Thus wee fled from Siuill; leauing Master Henry Challons our Captaine at libertie vpon sureties, and sixteene more of our Company in close Prison.

From thence on the fiue and twentieth of October, wee came to a Mount in the Cundado, where finding no passage by any shipping into England, France or Flanders. Wee trauelled through Algarnie, to the Port of Setunall, and finding no passage there, wee trauelled to Lisbone in Portugall. Where wee arriued the one and thirtieth of October, and there found ships readie bound to goe to England, but the wind was contrary for fourtgene dayes.

At the time of our abode at Lisbone, wee vnderstood that three Carrickes were come from the East Indies: whereof one was arriued safely at Lisbone tenne dayes before our comming thither. Another was driuen to leeward, and put in Vego, as wee heard. The third Carracke beeing at the Ile of Tercera, was so leake that they could not bring her home into Portugall, but vnloaded her into three of the King of Spaines great Armadoes, to bring the goods more safely to Lisbone. Which Ships at there comming before the mouth of the Riuer of Lisbone in the night within three dayes after my comming thither, were all cast away on certaine shoaldes there called Oscacbopes, or as wee commonly call them the Cachops, where of nine hundred men, as the Portugalls reported, but only thirtie seuen were saued, and of the goods very little at all: because the said ships being cast away on the ebbe. The goods were driuen off into the Sea, the dead bodies of many that were drowned, I my selfe saw cast on the shore with the sundry wrackes of the parts of the Ships Masts and Yards, with other wracke of Caske, Chists, and such like in great abundance.

Three ships cast away.

The fourteenth day of November the winde being faire, wee tooke passage from Lisbone in a small Barke belonging to Bidiford, called the Marget, and on the foure and twentieth of the same we were landed at Saint Ines in Cornwall, and from thence I hasted to Plimmouth, where I shewed vnto Sir Ferdinando Gorges and diuers others the Aduenturers, the whole Discourse of our vnhappie Voyage together with the miseries that wee had, and did indure vnder the Spaniards hands. And then hasted with all the speed I could toward the Court of England, where I was assured to my great comfort, that they either were alreadie, or very shortly should bee deliuered.

Before my departure from Siuill, I should haue remembred, that about Whitsontide last there were brought into the Prison of the Contractation there, two young men brought out of the West Indies, in one of the Kings Gallions, which were of Captaine Iohn Legats company of Plimmouth, which departed out of England, about the latter end of July 1606. bound for the Riuer of Amazons, as hee told me before his going forth, where hee had beene two yeeres before. And comming on the Coast of Brasil as those young men (the name of one of them is William Adams borne in Plimpton neere Plimmouth) reported vnto mee, whether falling to the leeward of the Riuer of Amazons, or deceiued by his Master they knew not. And not being able to recouer the said Riues, were constrayned to refresh in the West Indies, in which time there fell a great disorder betweene the said Captaine Legat and his company, so as one of his company, in a broyle within themselues aboard there ship, slue the said Captaine Legat, whether in his owne priuate quarrell or with the consent of the rest of the Company, they could not tell mee. But this is the more to bee suspected for that he alwayes in former Voyages dealt very straitly with his company. After his death his company comming to the Ile of Pinos, on the Southside of Cuba, to refresh themselues, being eighteene persons were circumuented by the trecherie of the Spaniards, and were there betrayed, and taken Prisoners: and within foure dayes after, of eigheighteene persons, fourteene were hanged the other foure being youths were saued to serue the Spaniards, whereof, two of them, refusing to serue longer in there ships, were put into the Prison at Smith, the other two remayne still as slaues to the Spaniards.

Cap. Iohn Legat of Plimmouth. Mutines Cap. Legat slaine by his mutinous crew, which knew not when they had done to bring home their ship, and so stumbled on Spanish Iusticers. I haue heard him much commended for a proper and expert Sea-man.

This I had the rather noted to the end, that it may be the better considered what numbers of ships and men haue gone out of England, since the conclusion of peace betweene England and Spaine, in the way of honest Trade and Traffique, and how many of them haue miserably miscarried. Hauing beene slaine, drowned, hanged or pittifully captiued, and thrust out of their ships and all their goods.

READER, I had by me the Voyage of Captaine Thomas Hanham, (written by himselfe) vnto Sagadahoc: also the written Iournals of Master Raleigh Gilbert which stayed and fortified there in that vnseasonable Winter (fit to freeze the heart of a Plantation) of Iames Dauies, Iohn Eliot, &c. but our voluminousnesse makes me afraid of offending nicer and queasier stomackes: for which cause I haue omitted them, euen after I had with great labour fitted them to the Presse: as I haue also done a written large Tractate of Mawaushen, and the Voyage of Master Edward Harlie (one of the first Planters with Cap. Popham) and Nicholas Hobson to those parts 1611. with diuers Letters from Cap. Popham and others. You must obserue, that it was in those times called by the name of Virginia, and the Northerne Plantation or Colonie. But Captaine Smith (a man which hath so many Irons in our fire) presented a Booke of the Countrie to Prince Charles his Highnesse, with a Map of the Countrey, who stiled it (as our hopes are, he will one day make it) New England, and altered the Sauage names of places to English. Hee made one Voyage thither, Anno 1614. and the next yeere beganne another, which taken by Frenchmen, he was not able to make vp: but in testimonie of his loue to his Countrey here, and of his hopes there hath written diuers Bookes, One called A Description of New England (in which his said Voyages are described, with the description of the Countrey and many Arguments to incite men to that vndertaking; which I had also prepared for the Presse, but for the former feares haue omitted) the other called New Englands Trials twice or thrice printed, out of which I haue added thus much, that the World may see the benefit to bee made by fishing, and may also be better acquainted with the successe and succession of New Englands Affaires.

CHAP. III.

Extracts of a Booke of Captaine IOHN SMITH, printed 1622. called New Englands tryalls, and continuing the Storie thereof, with Motiues to the businesse of fishing there.

The benefit of fishing, as Master Dee reporteth in his Brittish Monarchie.

HE saith that it is more then foure and fortie yeeres agoe, and it is more then fortie yeeres since he writ it, that the Herring Busses out of the Low-countries, vnder the King of Spaine, were fiue hundred, besides one hundred Frenchmen, and three or foure hundred Sayle of Flemmings.

The Coasts of Wales and Lancashire was vsed by three hundred Sayle of strangers.

Ireland and Baltemore fraughted yeerly three hundred Sayle of Spaniards, where King Edward the Sixt intended to haue made a strong Castle, because of the Strait, to haue Tribute for fishing.

Blacke Rocke was yeerely fished by three or foure hundred Sayle of Spaniards, Portugals, and Biskiners.

Master Gentleman, and many Fisher-men and Fish-mongers, with whom I haue conferred, reports

The Hollanders raise yeerely by Herring, Cod, and Ling, 3000000. pounds.

English and French by Salt-fish, Poore Iohn, Salmons, and Pilchards, 300000. pounds.

Hamborough and the Sound, for Sturgion, Lobsters and Eeles, 100000. pounds.

Cape Blanke for Tunny and Mullir, by the Biskiners and Spaniards, 30000. pounds.

But diuers other learned experienced Obseruers say, though it may seeme incredible, That the Duke of Medina receiueth yeerely tribute of the Fishers for Tunny, Mullit and Purgos, more then 10000. pounds.

Lubeck hath seuen hundred Ships: Hamborough six hundred: Embden lately a Fisher Towne, one thousand foure hundred, whose Customes by the profit of fishing hath made them so powerfull as they bee.

Holland and Zealand, not much greater then Yorkeshire, hath thirtie walled Townes, foure hundred Villages, 20000. saile of Ships and Hoyes; thirtie sixe thousand are Fisher-men, whereof one hundred are Doggers, seuen hundred Pinkes and Wel-boates, seuen hundred Frand Boates, Britters and Tode-boats, with one thousand three hundred Busses, besides three hundred that yeerely fish about Yarmouth, where they sell their Fish for Gold; and fifteene yeeres ago they had more then 116000. Sea-faring men.

Digitized by Google

The fishing shippes doe take yeerely two hundred thousand Last of fish, twelue barrels to a Last, which amounted to 3000000. pounds by the Fishermens price, that fourteene yeeres agoe did pay for their Tenths 300000. pound; which venting in Pumerland, Sprussia, Denmarke, Lefland, Russia, Swethland, Germany, Netherlands, England, or else-where, &c. make their returnes in a yeere about 7000000. pounds; and yet in Holland they haue neither matter to build ships, nor Merchandize to set them forth; yet by their industrie they as much increase, as other Nations decay. But leauing these vncertainties as they are, of this I am certaine:

That the Coast of England, Scotland, and Ireland, the North Sea, with Ireland and the Sound, New-found-land, and Cape Blanke, doe serue all Europe, as well the Land Townes as Ports, and all the Christian shipping, with these sorts of Staple fish which is transported, from whence it is taken, many a thousand mile, viz. Herring, Salt-fish, Poore Iohn, Sturgion, Mullit, Tunny, Porgos, Cauiare, Buttargo.

Now seeing all these sorts of fish, or the most part of them, may be had in a Land more fertile, temperate, and plentifull of all necessaries for the building of ships, Boates, and houses, and the nourishment of man; the Seasons are so proper, and the fishings so neere the habitations, we may there make, that New England hath much aduantage of the most of those parts, to serue all Europe far cheaper then they can, who at home haue neither Wood, Salt, nor Food, but at great rates; at Sea nothing but what they carrie in their ships, an hundred or two hundred leagues from their habitation.

But New Englands fishings is neere land, where is helpe of Wood, Water, Fruites, Fowles, Corne, or other refreshings needfull; and the Terceras, Mederas, Canaries, Spaine, Portugall, Prouance, Sauoy, Sicilia, and all Italy, as conuenient Markets for our dry fish, greene fish, Sturgion, Mullit, Cauiare, and Buttargo, as Norway, Swethland, Littuania, or Germany, for their Herring, which is here also in abundance for taking; they returning but Wood, Pitch, Tarre, Sope-ashes, Cordage, Flaxe, Waxe, and such like Commodities: we, Wines, Oyles, Sugars, Silkes, and such Merchandize as the Straits affoord, whereby our profit may equalize theirs; besides the increase of shipping and Mariners. And for proofe hereof:

Proofe 1. 1614. With two ships sent out at the charge of Captaine Marmaduke Roydon, Captaine George Langam, Master Iohn Buley and W. Skelton, I went from the Downes the third of March, and arriued in New England the last of April, where I was to haue stayed but with ten men to keepe possession of those large Territories. Had the Whales proued, as curious information had assured mee and my Aduentures, (but those things failed.) So hauing but fortie fiue men and boyes, we built seuen Boates, thirtie seuen did fish; my selfe with eight others ranging the Coast, I tooke a plot of what I could see, got acquaintance of the Inhabitants; 1100. Beuer skinnes, a hundred Martines, and as many Otters. Fortie thousand of dry fish wee sent for Spaine, with the Salt-fish, traine Oyle and Furres, I returned for England the eighteenth of Iuly, and arriued safe with my Company the latter end of August. Thus in sixe moneths I made my Voyage out and home; and by the labour of fiue and fortie, got neere the value of fifteene hundred pounds in those grosse Commodities. This yeere also one went from Plimmouth, set out by diuers of the Ile of Wight, and the West Countrie, by the directions and instructions of Sir Ferdinando Gorge, spent their victuals, and returned with nothing.

Proofe 2. 1615. The Virginia Company vpon this sent foure good ships; and because I would not vndertake it for them, hauing ingaged my selfe to them of the West, the Londoners entertained the men that came home with me. They set sayle in Ianuary, and arriued there in March; they found fish enough vntill halfe Iune, fraughted a ship of three hundred tunnes, went for Spaine, which was taken by the Turkes; one went to Virginia to relieue that Colonie, and two came for England with the greene fish, traine Oyle and Furres within six moneths.

Proofe 3. 1615. In Ianuary with two hundred pounds in cash for aduenture, and six Gentlemen well furnished, I went from London to the foure Ships was promised, prepared for mee in the West Countrey, but I found no such matter; notwithstanding at the last, with a labyrinth of trouble I went from Plimoth, with a Ship of two hundred Tunnes, and one of fiftie: when the fishing was done onely with fifteene I was to stay in the Countrey; but ill weather breaking all my Masts, I was forced to returne to Plimoth, where rather then lose all, reimbarking my selfe in a Barke of sixtie Tuns, how I escaped the English Pyrats and the French, and was betrayed by foure Frenchmen of War, I refer you to the description of New England: but my Vice-Admirall, notwithstanding the lateneese of the yeere, setting forth with me in March, the Londoners in Ianuary, shee arriued in May, they in March, yet came home well fraught in August, and all her men well, within fiue moneths, odde dayes.

Proofe 4. 1616. The Londoners ere I returned from France, for all their losse by the Turkes, which was valued about bout foure thousand pounds sent two more in Iuly; but such courses they tooke by the Canaries to the West Indies, it was ten moneths ere they arriued in New England, wasting in that time their seasons, victuall, and health, yet there they found meanes to refresh themselues, and the one returned, neere fraught with Fish and Traine, within two moneths after.

From Plimoth went foure Ships, onely to Fish and Trade, some in February, some in March, one of two hundred Tuns got thither in a moneth, and went full fraught for Spaine, the rest returned to Plimoth well fraught, and their men well, within fiue moneths, odde dayes. Proofe 5. 1616.

From London went two more, one of two hundred Tuns, got thither in sixe weekes, and within sixe weekes after, with fortie foure men and boyes was full fraught, and returned againe into England within fiue moneths and a few dayes; the other went to the Canaries with dry fish, which they sold at a great rate, for Rials of eight, and as I heard turned Pyrats. Proofe 6. 1616.

I being at Plimoth prouided with three good Ships, yet but fifteene men to stay with me in the Countrey, was Wind-bound three moneths, as was many a hundred saile more, so that the season being past, the Ships went for New-found-land, whereby my designe was frustrate; which was to me and my friends no small losse, in regard whereof here the Westerne Commissioners, in the behalfe of themselues and the rest of the Company, contracted with me by Articles indented vnder our hands, to be Admirall of that Country during my life, and in the renewing of their Letters Patents so to be nominated, halfe the fruites of our endeuours theirs, the rest our owne; being thus ingaged; now the businesse doth prosper, some of them would willingly forget mee; but I am not the first they haue deceiued. Proofe 7. 1617.

There was foure good Ships prepared at Plimoth, but by reason of their disagreement, the season so wasted, as onely two went forward, the one being of two hundred Tunnes, returned well fraught for Plimoth, and her men in health, within fiue moneths; the other of eightie Tuns, went for Bilbow with dry fish, and made a good returne. In this voyage Edward Rowcroft, alias Stallings, a valiant Souldier, that had beene with mee in Virginia, and seuen yeeres after went with mee from Plimoth towardes New England, with Thomas Darmer, an vnderstanding and an industrious Gentleman to inhabite it; all whose names, with our proceedings, you may read at large in my description of New England, vpon triall before the Iudge of the Admiraltie, how when wee had past the worst, for pure cowardise the Master and Sailer ran away with the Ship and all I had, and left mee alone among eight or nine Frenchmen of War, in the yeere 1615. This Stallings went now againe in these Ships, and hauing some wrong offered him in New England by a Frenchman, he tooke him, and as he writ to mee, he went with her to Virginia with fish, to trade with them for such commodities as they might spare; hee knew both these Countries well, yet hee promised mee the next Spring to meete mee in New England; but the Ship and he perished in Virginia. Proofe 8. 1618.

This yeere againe, diuers Ships intending to goe from Plimoth, so disagreed, as there went but one of two hundred Tunnes, who stayed in the Countrey about six weekes, with thirtie eight men and boyes, had her fraught, which shee sold at the first peny, for two thousand one hundred pounds, besides the Furs: so that euery poore Sayler, that had but a single share, had his charges, and sixteene pound ten shillings, for his seuen moneths worke. M. Thomas Darmer, hauing liued about a yeere in New-found-land, returning to Plimoth, went for New England in this Ship, and not onely confirmes what I haue writ, but so much more approued of it, that he stayed there with fiue or six men in a little Boat; finding two or three Frenchmen among the Sauages, who had lost their Ships, augmented his company, with whom hee ranged the Coast to Virginia, where he was kindly welcommed and well refreshed; thence returned to New England againe, where hauing beene a yeere, in his backe returne to Virginia, he was so wounded by the Sauages, hee dyed vpon it, them escaped were relieued at Virginia. Let not men attribute their great aduentures and vntimely deaths to vnfortunatenesse, but rather wonder how God did so long preserue them, with so small meanes to doe so much, leauing the fruites of their labours, to bee an encouragement to those our poore vndertakings; and this for aduantage as they writ vnto mee, that God had laid this Countrey open for vs, and slaine the most part of the Inhabitants by cruell Wars and a mortall disease; for where I had seene one hundred or two hundred people, there is scarce ten to bee found. From Pembrocks Bay, to Harrintons Bay, there is not twentie; from thence to Cape Anne, some thirtie; from Taulbuts Bay to the Riuer Charles, about fortie, and not any of them touched with any sicknesse, but one poore Frenchman that dyed. Proofe 9. 1619.

For to make triall this yeere, there is gone sixe or seuen sayle from the West Countrey, onely to fish, three of whom are returned, and as I was certainly informed, made so good a voyage, that euery Sayler for a single share had twentie pounds for his seuen moneths worke, which is more then in twentie months hee should haue gotten, had he gone for wages any where. Now, though all the former Ships haue not made such good voyages, as they expected, by sending opinionated vnskilfull men, that had not experienced diligence to saue that they tooke, nor take that there was; which now patience and practise hath brought to a reasonable kinde of perfection: in despite of all detractors and calumniations, the Country yet hath satisfied all, the defect hath bin in their vsing or abusing it, not in it selfe nor mee. Proofe 10. 1620

Digitized by Google

A Plantation in New England. Proofe 11. 1620

VPon these inducements, some few well disposed Gentlemen and Merchants of London and other places prouided two Ships, the one of one hundred and sixtie Tuns, the other of seuentie; they left the Coast of England the three and twentieth of August, with about one hundred and twentie persons, but the next day the lesser Ship sprung a leake, that forced their returne to Plimouth, where discharging her and twentie Passengers, with the great Ship, and a hundred persons besides Sailers, they set saile againe the sixth of September, and the ninth of Nouember fell with Cape Iames; but being pestred nine weekes in this leaking vnwholsome Ship, lying wet in their Cabbins, most of them grew very weake and weary of the Sea, then for want of experience ranging to and againe sixe weekes before they found a place they liked to dwell on, forced to lie on the bare ground without couerture in the extremitie of Winter, fortie of them dyed, and sixtie were left in very weake estate at the Ships comming away, about the fifth of April following, and arriued in England the sixth of May.

Proofe 12. 1620 Immediately after her arriuall from London, they sent another of fiftie fiue Tuns to supply them, with thirtie seuen persons, they set saile in the beginning of Iuly, but being crossed by Westerly winds, it was the end of August ere they could passe Plimouth, and arriued at New Plimouth in New England the eleuenth of Nouember, where they found all the people they left in April, as is said, lusty and in good health, except six that dyed. Within a moneth they returned here for England, laden with Clapboord, Wainscot, and Walnut, with about three Hogsheads of Beauer skins, and some Saxefras, the thirteenth of December, and drawing neere our Coast, was taken by a Frenchman, set out by the Marquis of Cera Gouernour of Ile Dew, on the Coast of Poyton, where they kept the Ship, imprisoned the Master and Companie, tooke from them to the value of about fiue hundred pounds; and after fourteene dayes sent them home with a poore supply of Victuall, their owne being deuoured by the Marquis and his hungry seruants; they arriued at London the fourteenth of Februarie, leauing all them they found and carried to New England, well and in health, with victuall and Corne sufficient till the next Harueſt.

The Copie of a Letter sent by this Ship.

A Letter from New Plimoth.

LOuing Cousin, at our arriuall at New Plimoth in New England, wee found all our Friends and Planters in good health, though they were left sicke and weake with very small meanes, the Indians round about vs peaceable and friendly, the Countrey very pleasant and temperate, yeelding naturally of it selfe great store of fruits, as Vines of diuers sorts in great abundance; there is likewise Walnuts, Chesnuts, Small-nuts and Plums, with much varietie of Flowers, Roots, and Herbs, no lesse pleasant then wholsome and profitable: no place hath more Goose-berries, and Straw-berries, nor better; Timber of all sorts you haue in England, doth couer the Land, that affords Beasts of diuers sorts, and great flockes of Turkies, Quailes, Pigeons and Partridges: Many great Lakes abounding with Fish, Fowle, Beauers, and Otters. The Sea affoords vs a great plentie of all excellent sorts of Sea-fish, as the Riuers and Iles doth varietie of wild Fowle of most vsefull sorts. Mynes we find to our thinking, but neither the goodnesse nor qualitie wee know. Better Grasse cannot be then the Indian Corne, of we will plant it vpon as good ground as a man need desire. Wee are all Free-holders, the rent day doth not trouble vs, and all those good blessings we haue, of which and what wee list in their seasons for taking. Our company are for most part very religious honest people; the Word of God sincerely taught vs euery Sabbath: so that I know not any thing a contented mind can here want. I desire your friendly care to send my Wife and Children to mee, where I wish all the Friends I haue in England, and so I rest

Your louing Kinsman William Hilton.

Proofe 13. 1622 From the West Countrey went ten or twelue Ships to Fish, which were all well fraughted; those that came first at Bilbow, made seuenteene pounds a single share, besides Beauer, Otters, and Martins skins; but some of the rest that came to the same Ports, that were already furnished, so glutted the Market, their price was abated, yet all returned so well contented, they are a preparing to goe againe.

For this yeere 1622. There is gone from the West of England onely to fish, thirtie fiue Ships, and about the last of April two more from London, the one of one hundred Tuns, the other of thirtie, with some sixtie Passengers to supply the Plantation with all necessary prouisions. Now though the Turke and French hath beene somewhat too busie, would all the Christian Princes but bee truly at vnitie, as his Royall Maiesty our Soueraigne Lord and King desireth, seuentie saile of good Ships were sufficient to fire, the most of his Coasts in the Leuant, and make such a guard in the straits of Hellespont, as would make the Great Turke himselfe more afraid in Constantinople, then the smallest Red Crosse, crosses the Seas would be, either of any French, Piccaroon, or the Pyrates of Argere.

An Abstract of Letters sent from the Colony in New England, Iuly sixteene, 1622.

Since the newes of the Massacre in Virginia, though the Indians continue their wonted friendship, yet we are wee more wary of them then before; for their hands haue beene embrued in much English bloud, onely by too much confidence, but not by force.

Here I must intreat a little your fauours to digresse. They did not kill the English, because they were Christians, but for their weapons and commodities, that were rare nouelties; but now they feare we may beat them out of their Dens, which Lions and Tygers would not admit but by force. But must this be an argument for an Englishman, or discourage any either in Virginia or New England? No: for I haue tried them both. For Virginia, I kept that Countrey, with thirtie eight, and had not to eate but what we had from the Sauages. When I had ten men able to goe abroad, our Common-wealth was very strong: with such a number I ranged that vnknowne Countrey fourteene weekes; I had but eighteen to subdue them all, with which great Army I stayed sixe weeks before their greatest Kings habitations, till they had gathered together all the power they could; and yet the Dutchmen sent at a needlesse excessiue charge did helpe Powhatan how to betray mee.

Of their numbers wee were vncertaine; but those two honourable Gentlemen, Captaine George Percie, and Captaine Francis West, two of the Phittiplaces, and some other such noble Gentlemen and resolute spirts bore their shares with me, and now liuing in England, did see me take this murdering Opechankanough, now their Great King by the long lock on his head, with my Pistoll at his breast, I led him among his greatest forces, and before wee parted, made him fill our Barke of twentie Tuns with Corne. When their owne wants was such, I haue giuen them part again in pitty, & others haue bought it again to plant their fields. For wronging a Souldier but the value of a peny, I haue caused Powhatan send his own men to Iames Town to receiue their punishment, at my discretion. It is true in our greatest extremity they shot me, slue three of my men, and by the folly of them that fled tooke me prisoner; yet God made Pocahontas the Kings Daughter the meanes to deliuer me: and thereby taught mee to know their treacheries to preserue the rest. It was also my chance in single combate to take the King of Paspahegh prisoner, and by keeping him, forced his subiects to worke in Chaines, till I made all the Countrey pay contribution, hauing little else whereon to liue.

Opechancanough taken in the midst of his armie, as Atabalipa was by Pizarro.

Twice in this time I was their President, & none can say in all that time I had a man slain: but for keeping them in that feare I was much blamed both there and heere: yet I left fiue hundred behind mee that through their confidence in sixe monethes came most to confusion, as you may reade at large in the description of Virginia. When I went first to those desperate designes, it cost me many a forgotten pound to hire men to goe; and procrastination caused more runne away then went. But after the Ice was broken, came many braue Voluntaries: notwithstanding since I came from thence, the Honorable Company haue beene humble Suters to his Maiestie to get Vagabonds and condemned men to goe thither; nay, so much scorned was the name of Virginia, some did chuse to be hanged ere they would goe thither, and were: yet for all the worst of spite, detraction and discouragement, and this lamentable Massacre, there are more honest men now suters to goe, then euer haue been constrained knaues; and it is not vnknowne to most men of vnderstanding, how happy many of those Callumners doe thinke themselues, that they might bee admitted, and yet pay for their passage to goe now to Virginia: and had I but meanes to transport as many as would goe, I might haue choice of ten thousand that would gladly bee in any of those new places, which were so basely contemned by vngratefull base minds.

To range this Countrie of New England, in like manner I had but eight, as is said, and amongst their bruite conditions I met many of their silly incounters, and without any hurt, God be thanked: when your West Countrie men were many of them wounded, and much tormented with the Sauages that assaulted their Ship, as they did say themselues, in the first yeare I was there 1614. and though Master Hunt then Master with me, did most basely in stealing some Sauages from that coast to sell, when he was directed to haue gone for Spaine, yet that place was so remote from Capawuck, where Epenow should haue fraughted them with Gold Ore, that his fault could be no cause of their bad successe, howeuer it is alledged for an excuse. I speake not this out of vain glory, as it may be some gleaners, or some was neuer there, may censure mee: but to let all men be assured by those examples, what those Sauages are that thus strangely doe murder and betray our Countrie men. But to the purpose.

What is already writ of the healthfulnesse of the ayre, the richnesse of the soyle, the goodnesse of the Woods, the abundance of Fruits, Fish, and Fowle in their season, they still affirme that haue beene there now neer two yeeres, and at one draught they haue taken one thousand Basses, and in one night twelue hogsheads of Herring. They are building a strong Fort, they hope shortly to finish, in the interim they are well prouided: their number is about a hundred persons, all in health, and well neere sixtie Acres of ground well planted with Corne, besides their Gardens well replenished with vsefull fruits; and if their Aduenturers would but furnish them with necessaries for fishing, their wants would quickly bee supplied. To supply them this sixteenth of October, is going the Paragon, with sixtie seuen persons, and all this is done by priuate mens purses. And to conclude in their owne words, should they write of all plenties they haue found, they thinke they should not be beleeued.

For the twentie sixe sayle of Ships, the most I can yet vnderstand is M. Ambrose Iennens of London, and and Master Abraham Iennens of Plimmoth sent (their Abraham) a Ship of two hundred and twentie Tunn, and the Nightingale of Porchmouth of a hundred: whose fish at the first penie came to 3150 pounds: in all they were fiue and thirty saile: and wherein New found Land they shared sixe or seuen pounds for a common man, in New England they shared foureteene pounds; besides six Dutch and French Ships made wonderfull returnes in Furres.

Digitized by Google

1622. Thus you may see plainely the yearely successe from New England (by Virginia) which hath bin so costly to this Kingdome, and so deare to me, which either to see perish or but bleede, pardon me though it passionate me beyond the bounds of modesty, to haue bin sufficiently able to foresee it, and had neither power nor meanes how to preuent it. By that acquaintance I haue with them, I may call them my children, for they haue bin my Wife, my Hawkes, my Hounds, my Cards, my Dice, and in totall my best content, as indifferent to my heart as my left hand to my right: and notwithstanding all those miracles of disasters haue crossed both them and me, yet were there not one Englishman remaining (as God be thanked there is some thousands) I would yet begin againe with as small meanes as I did at the first; not for that I haue any secret encouragement from any I protest, more then lamentable experiences: for all their Discoueries I can yet heare of, are but Pigs of my owne Sowe; nor more strange to me then to heare one tell mee he hath gone from Billings gate and discouered Greenwich, Graues end, Tilberry, Quinborow, Lee and Margit, which to those did neuer heare of them, though they dwell in England, might be made seeme some rare secrets and great Countries vnknowne, except the Relation of Master Dirmer. But to returne: It is certaine, from Cannada and New England within these sixe yeares, hath come neere 20000. Beuer Skins. Now had each of those Ships transported but some small quantitie of the most increasing Beasts, Fowles, Fruites, Plants and Seedes, as I proiected, by this time their increase might haue bin sufficient for a thousand men. But the desire of present gaine (in many) is so violent, and the endeuours of many vndertakers so negligent, euery one so regarding their priuate gaine, that it is hard to effect any publicke good, and impossible to bring them into a body, rule, or order, vnlesse both authority and money assist experiences. It is not a worke for euery one to plant a Colony; but when a House is built, it is no hard matter to dwell in it. This requireth all the best parts of art, iudgement, courage, honesty, constancy, diligence and experience to doe but neere well: your home-bred ingrossing proiectors shall finde there a great difference betwixt saying and doing. But to conclude, the Fishing will goe forward if you plant it or no; whereby a Colonie may be transported with no great charge, that in a short time might prouide such fraughts to buy of vs there dwelling, as I would hope no Ship should goe or come empty from New England.

The charge of this is onely Salt, Nets, Hookes, Lines, Kniues, Irish Rugs, course Cloath, Beades, Glasse, and such like trash, onely for fishing and trade with the Sauages, beside our owne necessary prouisions, whose endeuours will quickly defray all this charge: and the Sauages haue intreated me to inhabite where I will. Now all these Ships, till this last yeare, haue bin fished within a square of two or three leagues, and not one of them all would aduenture any further, where questionlesse fiue hundred saile may haue their fraught better then in Island, New found Land, or elsewhere, and be in their markets before the other can haue their fish in their Ships, becaus New Englands fishing begins with February, the other not till mid May: the progression hereof tends much to the aduancement of Virginia and the Bermudas, whose emptie Ships may take in their fraught there, and would be a good friend in time of neede to the Inhabitants of New found Land, &c.

CHAP. IIII.

A Relation or Iournall of a Plantation setled at Plimoth in New England, and proceedings thereof; Printed 1622. and here abbreuiated.

Sep. 6. 1620. WEdnesday the sixt of September, the Winde comming East North-east, a fine small gale, we loosed from Plimoth, hauing bin kindely entertained and curteously vsed by diuers friends there dwelling, and after many difficulties in boisterous stormes, at length by Gods prouidence vpon the ninth of Nouember following,

No. 9. Cape Cod. by breake of the day we espied Land, which we deemed to be Cape Cod, and so afterward it proued. Vpon the eleuenth of Nouember, we came to an anchor in the Bay, which is a good harbour and pleasant Bay, circled round, except in the entrance, which is about foure miles ouer from land to land, compassed about to the verie Sea with Oakes, Pines, Iuniper, Sassafras, and other sweete Wood: it is a harbour wherein 1000. saile of Ships may safely ride; there wee relieued our selues with Wood and Water, and refreshed our people, while our Shallop was fitted to coast the Bay, to search for an habitation: there was the greatest store of Fowle that euer we saw.

And

Digitized by Google

And euerie day we ſaw Whales playing hard by vs, of which in that place, if wee had inſtruments and meanes to take them, we might haue made a verie rich returne, which to our great griefe we wanted. Our Maſter and his Mate, and others experienced in fiſhing, proteſſed, wee might haue made three or foure thouſand pounds worth of Oyle; they preferred it before Greenland Whale-fiſhing, and purpoſe the next winter to fiſh for Whale here: for Cod we aſſaied, but found none, there is good ſtore no doubt in their ſeaſon. Neither got we anie fiſh all the time we lay there, but ſome few little ones on the ſhoare. We found great Muſsles, and verie fat and full of Sea Pearle, but we could not eate them, for they made vs all ſicke that did eate, as well ſailers as paſſengers; they cauſed to caſt and ſcoure, but they were ſoone well againe. The Baie is ſo round and circling, that before we could come to anchor, we went round all the points of the Compaſſe. We could not come neere the ſhoare by three quarters of an Engliſh mile, becauſe of ſhallow water, which was a great preiudice to vs, for our people going on ſhoare were forced to wade a Bow ſhoote or two in going aland, which cauſed manie to get colds and coughs, for it was manie times freezing cold weather. Ill Landing.

This day before we came to harbour, obſeruing ſome not well affected to vnitie and concord, but gaue ſome appearance of faction, it was thought good there ſhould be an aſſociation and agreement, that we ſhould combine together in one bodie, and to ſubmit to ſuch gouernment and Gouernours, as we ſhould by common conſent agree to make and chooſe, and ſet our hands to this that followes word for word.

IN the name of God, Amen. We whoſe names are vnderwritten, the loyall Subiects of our dread Soueraigne Lord King Iames, by the grace of God of Great Britaine, France, and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c. Hauing vndertaken for the glorie of God, and aduancement of the Chriſtian faith, and honor of our King and Countrie, a Voiage to plant the firſt Colonie in the Northerne parts of Virginia, doe by theſe preſents ſolemnely and mutually in the preſence of GOD and one of another, couenant and combine our ſelues together in a ciuill bodie politike, for our better ordering and preſeruation, and furtherance of the ends aforeſaid; and by vertue hereof to enact, conſtitute, and frame ſuch iuſt and equall Lawes, Ordinances, acts, conſtitutions, offices from time to time, as ſhall be thought moſt meete and conuenient for the generall good of the Colonie: vnto which wee promiſe all due ſubmiſſion and obedience. In witneſſe whereof we haue here vnder ſubſcribed our names. Cape Cod eleuenth of Nouember, in the yeare of the raigne of our Soueraigne Lord King IAMES, of England, France and Ireland, 18. and of Scotland 54. Anno Domini 1620.

The ſame day ſo ſoone as we could we ſet aſhoare fifteene or ſixteene men, well armed, with ſome to fetch Wood, for we had none left; as alſo to ſee what the Land was, and what Inhabitants they could meete with, they found it to be a ſmall necke of Land: on this ſide where we lay is the Bay, and the furtheſt ſide the Sea: the ground or earth, ſand hils, much like the Downes in Holland, but much better: the cruſt of the earth a Spits depth, excellent blacke earth: all woodded with Oakes, Pines, Saſſafras, Iuniper, Birch, Holly, Vines, ſome Aſh, Walnut; the Wood for the moſt parts open and without vnder-wood, fit either to goe or ride in: at night our people returned, but found not anie perſon, nor habitation, and laded their Boate with Iuniper, which ſmelled verie ſweete and ſtrong, and of which wee burnt the moſt part of the time we lay there.

Munday the thirteenth of Nouember, we vnſhipped our Shallop, and drew her on land, to mend and repaire her, hauing bin forced to cut her downe in beſtowing her betwixt the decks, and ſhe was much opened with the peoples lying in her, which kept vs long there, for it was fixteene or ſeuenteene daies before the Carpenter had finiſhed her: our people went on ſhoare to refreſh themſelues, and our women to waſh, as they had great neede: but whileſt wee lay thus ſtill, hoping our Shallop would be readie in fiue or ſix daies at the furtheſt, but our Carpenter made ſlow worke of it, ſo that ſome of our people impatient of delay, deſired for our better furtherance to trauaile by Land into the Countrie, which was not without appearance of danger, not hauing the Shallop with them, nor meanes to carrie prouiſion, but on their backes, to ſee whether it might be fit for vs to ſeate in or no, and the rather becauſe as we ſailed into the Harbour, there ſeemed to be a Riuer opening it ſelfe into the maine Land; the willingneſſe of the perſons was liked, but the thing it ſelfe, in regard of the danger was rather permitted then approued, and ſo with cautions, directions, and inſtructions, ſixteene men were ſet out with euery man his Musket, Sword, and Corſlet, vnder the conduct of Captaine Miles Standiſh, vnto whom was adioyned for counſell and aduiſe, William Bradford, Stephen Hopkins, and Edward Tilley.

Wedneſday the fifteenth of Nouember, they were ſet a ſhoare, and when they had ordered themſelues in order of a ſingle File, and marched about the ſpace of a mile, by the Sea they eſpied fiue or ſix people, with a Dogge, comming towards them, who were Sauages, who when they ſaw them, ran into the Woods and whiſtled the Dogge after them, &c. Firſt, they ſuppoſed them to be Maſter Iones, the Maſter and ſome of his men, for they were a ſhoare, and knew of their comming: but after they knew them to be Indians they marched after them into the Wood, Sight of Sauages.

Digitized by Google

Woods, least other of the Indians should lye in Ambush: but when the Indians saw our men following them, they ran away with might and maine; and our men turned out of the Wood after them, for it was the way they intended to goe, but they could not come neere them. They followed them that night about ten miles by the trace of their footings, & saw how they had come the same way they went, and at a turning perceiued how they ranne vp an hill, to see whether they followed them. At length night came vpon them, and they were constrained to take vp their lodging, so they set forth three Sentinels, and the rest, some kindled a fire, and others fetched Woods & there held our Randeuous that night. In the morning so soone as we could see the trace, we proceeded on our iournie, and had the tracke vntill wee had compassed the head of a long creake, and there they tooke into another Wood, and we after them, supposing to finde some of their dwellings, but we marched thorow Boughes and Bushes, and vnder Hils and Vallies, which tore our verie Armour in peeces, and yet could meete with none of them, nor their houses, nor finde any fresh water, which we greatly desired, and stood in neede off, for we brought neither Beere nor Water with vs, and our victuals was onely Bisket and Holland Cheese, and a little Bottell of Aquauite, so as we were sore a thirst. About ten a clocke we came into a deepe Valley, full of brush, wood-gaile, and long grasse, through which wee found little paths or tracts, and there we saw a Deere, and found Springs of fresh Water, of which we were hartily glad, and sat vs downe and drunke our first New England Water, with as much delight as euer we drunke drinke in all our liues.

A Deere and water.

When we had refreshed our selues, we directed our course full South, that wee might come to the shoare, which within a short while after we did, and there made a fire, that they in the Ship might see where we were (as wee had direction) and so marched on towards this supposed Riuer: and as we went in another Valley, we found a fine cleere Pond of fresh water, being about a Musket shot broad, and twise as long: there grew also many small Vines, and Fowle and Deere haunted there; there grew much Safafras: from thence we went on and found much plain ground about fiftie Acres, fit for the Plow, and some signes where the Indians had formerly planted, their Corne: after this, some thought it best for neareneese of the Riuer to goe downe and trauaile on the Sea sands, by which meanes some of our men were tired, and lagged behinde, so we stayed and gathered them vp, and strucke into the Land againe; where we found a little path to certaine heapes of Sand, one whereof was couered with old Mats, and had a woodden thing like a Morter whelmed on the top of it, and an earthen pot laid in a little hole at the end thereof; we musing what it might be, digged and found a Bowe, and as we thought, Arrowes, but they were rotten; We supposed there were many other things, but because we deemed them graues, we put in the Bow againe and made it vp as it was, and left the rest vntouched, because we thought it would be odious vnto them to ransacke their Sepulchers. We went on further and found new stubble of which they had gotten Corne this yeare, and many Walnut trees full of Nuts, and great store of Strawberries, and some Vines; passing thus a field or two, which were not great, we came to another, which had also bin new gotten, and there wee found where an house had beene, and foure or fiue old Plankes laied together; also we found a great Kettle, which had beene some Ships kettle and brought out of Europe; there was also an heape of sand, made like the former, but it was newly done, wee might see how they had padled it with their hands, which we digged vp, and in it we found a little old Basket full of faire Indian Corne, and digged further, and found a fine great new Basket full of very faire Corne of this yeare, with some sixe and thirty goodly eares of Corne, some yellow, and some red, and others mixt with blew, which was a very goodly sight: the Basket was round, and narrow at the top, it held about three or foure bushels, which was as much as two of vs could lift vp from the ground, and was very handsomely and cunningly made: But whilst we were busie about these things, we set our men Sentinell in a round ring, all but two or three which digged vp the Corne. Wee were in suspence, what to doe with it, and the Kettle, and at length after much consultation, we concluded to take the Kettle, and as much of the Corne as wee could carry away with vs: and when our Shallop came if we could finde any of the people, and came to parley with them, wee would giue them the Kettle againe, and satisfie them for their Corne.

Sepulchers.

Kettle and Corne found.

So we tooke all the Eares, and put a good deale of the loose Corne in the Kettle, for two men to bring away one Staffe; besides, they that could put away into their Pockets filled the same; the rest wee buried againe, for we were so laden with Armour that we could carry no more. Not farre from this place we found the remainder of an old Fort, or Palizado, which as we conceiued had beene made by some Christians, this was also hard by that place which we thought had been a Riuer, vnto which we went and found it so to be, diuiding it selfe into two armes by an high banke, standing right by the Cut or Mouth which came from the Sea, that which was next vnto vs was the lesse, the other arme was more then twice as big, and not vnlike to bee an Harbour for Ships; but whether it be a fresh Riuer, or onely an indraught of the Sea, wee had no time to discouer, for we had commandement to be out but two dayes. Here also we saw two Canoas, the one on the one side, the other on the other side, we could not beleeue it was a Canoa, till we came neere it, so we returned, leauing the further discouery hereof to our Shallop, and came that night backe

Palizado.

They returne.

backe againe to the fresh water pond, and there we made our randeuous that night, making a great fire, and a Baricado to windward of vs, and kept good watch with three Sentinels all night, euery one standing when his turne came, while fiue or sixe inches of Match was burning. It proued a very rainie night. In the morning we tooke our Kettle and sunke it in the Pond, and trimmed our Muskets, for few of them would goe off because of the wet, and so coasted the Wood againe to come home, in which we were shrewdly puzled, and lost our way; as we wandred we came to a tree, where a yong Spire was bowed downe ouer a Bowe, and some Acornes strewed vnderneath; Stephen Hopkins said, it had beene to catch some Deere, so, as we were looking at it, William Bradford being in the Reare, when he came looking also vpon it, and as he went about, it gaue a sodaine ierke vp, and he was immediately caught by the legge: It was a very pretty deuise, made with a Roape of their owne making, and hauing a noose as artificially made, as any Roper in England can make, and as like ours as can be, which wee brought away with vs. In the end wee got out of the Wood, and were fallen about a mile too high aboue the creake, where we saw three Buckes, but we had rather haue had one of them. We also did spring three couple of Partridges; and as we came along by the creake, we saw great flockes of wilde Geese and Duckes, but they were very fearefull of vs. So we marched some while in the Woods, some while on the Sands, and other while in the Water vp to the knees, till at length we came neere the Ship, and then we shot off our Peeces, and the long Boate came to fetch vs: Master Iones and Master Carwer being on the shoare, with many of our people, came to meete vs. And thus wee came both weary and welcome home, and deliuered in our Corne into the store, to be kept for seede, for we knew not how to come by any, and therefore was very glad, purposing so soone as we could meete with any of the Inhabitants of that place, to make them large satisfaction.

Deuise to catch Deere.

When our Shallop was fit indeede, before she was fully fitted, for there was two daies worke after be stowed on her, there was appointed some foure and twenty men of our owne, and armed, then to goe and make a more full discouery of the Riuers before mentioned. Master Iones was desirous to goe with vs, and tooke such of his Saylers as he thought vsefull for vs, so as we were in all about foure and thirty men. We made Master Iones our Leader, for we thought it best herein to gratifie his kindnesse and forwardnesse. When we were set forth, it proued rough weather and crosse windes, so as we were constrained, some in the Shallop, and others in the long Boate, to row to the neerest shoare the winde would suffer them to goe vnto, and then to wade out aboue the knees; the winde was so strong as the Shallop could not keepe the water, but was forced to harbour there that night, but we marched six or seuen miles further, and appointed the Shallop to come to vs as soone as they could. It blowed and did snow all that day and night, and frose withall; some of our people that are dead tooke the originall of their death here. The next day about eleuen a clocke our Shallop came to vs, and we shipped our selues, and the winde being good, we sailed to the Riuer we formerly discouered, which we named Cold Harbour, to which when we came we found it not Nauigable for Ships, yet we thought it might be a good harbour for Boates, for it flowes there twelue foot at high water. We landed our men betweene the two creekes, and marched some foure or fiue miles by the greater of them, and the Shallop followed vs vntill night grew on, and our men were tired with marching vp and downe the steepe Hils, and deepe Vallies, which lay halfe a foote thicke with Snow: Master Iones wearied with marching, was desirous we should take vp our lodging, though some of vs would haue marched further, so we made there our Randeuous for that night, vnder a few Pine trees, and as it fell out we got three Geese and six Duckes to our Supper, which we eate with Souldiers stomacks, for we had eaten little all that day. We marched to the place where we had the Corne formerly, which place we called Corne-hill, & digged & found the like, of which we were very glad: we also digged in a place a little farther off, & found a bottle of Oyle, we went to another place which we had seen before & digged and found more Corn, viz. two or three Baskets full of Indian wheat, and a bag of Beans, with a good many of faire wheat-eares; whilst some of vs were digging vp this, some others found another heape of Corn, which they digged vp also, so as we had in all about ten Bushels, which will serue vs sufficiently for Seede. And sure it was Gods good prouidence that we found this corn, for else we knew not how we should haue done, for we knew not how we should finde, or meete with any of the Indians, except it be to doe vs a mischiefe. Also we had neuer in all likelihood seene a graine of it, if we had not made our first iourney; for the ground was now couered with Snow, and so hard frosen, that we were faine with our Curtlaxes and shore Swords, to hew and carue the ground a foote deepe, and then wrest it vp with leauers, for we had forgot to bring other Tooles: whilst we were in this imploiment, foule weather being towards, M. Iones was earnest to goe aboord, but sundry of vs desired to make further discouery, and to finde out the Indians habitations, so we sent home with him our weakest people, and some that were sicke, and all the Corne, and eight more of vs staied still, and lodged there that night, & desired that the Shallop might returne to vs next day, and bring vs some Mattockes and Spades with them.

Cold Harbour.

Note.

Frost and Snow.

When we had marched fiue or six miles into the Woods, and could find no signes of any people, wee returned againe another way, and as we came into the plaine ground, wee found a place like a grauе, but it was much bigger and longer then any wee had yet seene. It was also couered with boords, so as wee mused what it should be, and resolued to dig it vp; where we found, first a

Mat,

Sepulchre opened.

Mat, and vnder that a faire Bow, and there another Mat, and vnder that a Boord about three quarters long, finely carued and painted, with three Tynes, or broches on the top, like a Crowne; also betweene the Mats we found Bowles, Trayes, Dishes, and such like Trinkets; at length wee came to a faire new Mat, and vnder that two Bundles, the one bigger, the other lesse, we opened the greater and found in it a great quantitie of fine and perfect Red Powder, and in it the bones and skull of a man. The skull had fine yellow haire still on it, and some of the flesh vnconsumed; there was bound vp with a Knife, a Packneedle, and two or three old Iron things. It was bound vp in a Saylers Canuas Casacke, and a payre of Cloth Breeches; the Red Powder was a kind of Embaulment, and yeelded a strong, but no offensiue smell; It was as fine as any Flower. We opened the lesse bundle likewise, and found of the same Powder in it, and the bones and head of a little childe, about the legges, and other parts of it was Bound strings, and Bracelets of fine white Beads; there was also by it a little Bow, about three quarters long, and some other olde knackes: we brought sundry of the pretiest things away with vs, and couered the Corps vp againe. After this, we digged in sundry like places, but found no more Corne, nor any things else but graues: Whilest we were thus ranging and searching, two of the Saylers, which were newly come on the shoare, by chance espied two houses, which had beene lately dwelt in, but the people were gone. They hauing their Peeces, and hearing no body, entred the houses, and tooke out some thing, and durst not stay but came again & told vs; so some seuen or eight of vs went with them, and found how wee had gone within a flight shot of them before. The houses were made with long young Sapling Trees bended, and both ends stucke into the ground; they were made round, like vnto an Arbour, and couered downe to the ground with thicke and well wrought Mats, and the doore was not ouer a yard high, made of a Mat to open: the Chimney was a wide open hole in the top, for which they had a Mat to couer it close when they pleased, one might stand and goe vpright in them; in the midst of them were foure little Trunches knockt into the ground, and small sticks laid ouer, on which they hung their Pots, and what they had to seeth: round about the fire they lay on Mats, which are their Beds. The Houses were double matted, for as they were matted without, so were they within, with newer and fairer Mats. In the Houses wee found Woodden Bowles, Trayes and Dishes, Earthen Pots, Hand-baskets made of Crab-shells, wrought together: also an English Payle or Bucket, it wanted a Baile, but it had two Iron Eares: there was also Baskets of sundry sorts, bigger, and some lesser, finer, and some courser: some were curiously wrought with Blacke and White in prettie workes, and sundry other of their household stuffe: wee found also two or three Deeres Heads, one whereof had been newly killed, for it was still fresh; there was also a company of Deeres Feete, stucke vp in the Houses, Harts Hornes, and Eagles Clawes, and sundry such like things there was: also two or three Baskets full of parched Acornes, pieces of Fish, and a piece of a broyled Herring. We found also a little Silke Grasse, and a little Tobacco Seed, with some other Seeds which wee knew not: without was sundry bundles of Flags, and Sedge, Bull-rushes, and other stuffe to make Mats; there was thrust into an hollow Tree, two or three pieces of Venison, but wee thought it fitter for the Dogges then for vs: some of the best things wee tooke away with vs, and left the houses standing still as they were. Much disputation fell out about the place where wee should abide; and a Company was chosen to goe out vpon a third Discouery (whilest some were imployed in this Discouery, it pleased God that Mistris White was brought a bed of a Sonne, which was called Peregrine.)

Two houses.

Houshold stuffe.

Third discouerie.

Wednesday the 6xt of December we set out, being very cold and hard weather, we were a long while after wee launched from the Ship, before wee could get cleere of a Sandy Point, which lay within lesse then a furlong of the same. In which time, two were very sicke, and Edward Tilley had like to haue sounded with cold; the Gunner was also sicke vnto Death (but hope of trucking made him to goe) and so remained all that day, and the next night; at length wee got cleare of the Sandy Point, and got vp our Sayles, and within an houre or two wee got vnder the weather shoare, and then had smoother water and better sayling, but it was very cold, for the water froze on our clothes, and made them many times like coats of Iron: wee sayled sixe or seuen leagues by the shoare, but saw neither Riuer nor Creeke, at length wee met with a tongue of Land, being flat off from the shoare, with a Sandy point, wee bore vp to gaine the Point, and found there a faire Income or Rode, of a Bay, being a league ouer at the narrowest, and some two or three in length, but wee made right ouer to the Land before vs, and left the discouerie of this Income till the next day: as wee drew neere to the shoare, wee espied some ten or twelue Indians, very busie about a blacke thing, what it was wee could not tell, till afterwards they saw vs, and ran to and fro, as if they had beene carrying something away, wee landed a league or two from them, and had much adoe to put a shoare any where, it lay so full of flat Sands: when wee came to shoare, we made vs a Barricado, and got fire Wood, and set out our Sentinells, and betooke vs to our lodging, such as it was; wee saw the smoake of the fire which the Sauages made that night, about foure or fiue miles from vs: in the morning wee diuided our Company, some eight in the Shallop, and the rest on the shoare went to discouer this place, but we found it onely to be a Bay, without either Riuer or Creeke comming into it. This place the most were minded wee should call, the Grampus Bay, because wee found many of them there: we followed the track of the Indians bare Extreme cold.

Grampus Bay. They found Grampuses dead, two inches thicke of fat, and fiue or six paces long.

Digitized by Google

feet a good way on the Sands, at length we saw here they strucke into the Woods by the side of a Pond, as we went to view the place, one said, he thought he saw an Indian-house among the Trees, so went vp to see: and here we and the Shallop lost sight one of another till night, it being now about nine or ten a clocke; so we lite on a path, but saw no house, and followed a great way into the Woods, at length we found where Corne had been set, but not that yeere; anon we found a great burying place, one part whereof was incompassed with a large Palizado, like a Church-yard, with young spires foure or fiue yards long, set as close one by another as they could two or three foot in the ground; within it was full of Graues, some bigger and some lesse, some were also paled about, and others had like an Indian-house made ouer them, but not matted; those Graues were more sumptuous then those at Corne-hill, yet we digged none of them vp, only viewed them and went our way: without the Palizado were Graues also, but not so costly. We went ranging vp and downe till the Sunne began to draw low, and then we hasted out of the Woods, that we might come to our Shallop. By that time we had done, and our Shallop come to vs it was within night, and we fed vpon such victualls as we had, and betooke vs to our rest after we had set out our watch. About midnight we heard a great and hideous cry, and our Sentinell called, Arme, Arme. So we bestirred our selues and shot off a couple of Muskets and noise ceased: we concluded, that it was a company of Wolues & Foxes, for one told vs he had heard such a noise in New-found-land. About fiue a clocke in the morning we began to be stirring, vpon a sudden wee heard a great & strange cry which we knew to be the same voices, though they varied their notes; one of the company being abroad came running in, and cried, They are men, Indians, Indians; and withall, their Arrowes came flying amongst vs, our men ran out with all speed to recouer their Armes. The cry of our enemies was dreadfull, especially, when our men ran out to recouer their Armes, their note was after this manner, Woath woach ha ha hach woach: our men were no sooner come to their Armes, but the enemy was readie to assault them.

There was a lustie man, and no whit lesse valiant, who was thought to be their Captain, stood behind a Tree within halfe a Musket shot of vs, and there let his Arrowes flie at vs; hee stood three shots off a Musket, at length one tooke as he said full ayme at him, after which he gaue an extraordinarie cry and away they went all, wee followed them about a quarter of a mile, but wee left sixe to keepe our Shallop, for wee were carefull of our businesse. Wee tooke vp eighteene of their Arrowes, which wee had sent to England by Master Iones, some whereof were headed with brasse, others with Harts horne, and others with Eagles clawes; many more no doubt were shot, for these wee found were almost couered with leaues: yet by the speciall prouidence of God, none of them either hit or hurt vs. On Munday we found a very good Harbour for our shipping, we marched also into the Land, and found diuers corne Fields and little running Brookes, a place verie good for scituation, so we returned to our Ship againe with good newes to the rest of our people, which did much comfort their hearts. A good Harbour.

This Harbour is a Bay greater then Cape Cod, compassed with a goodly Land, and in the Bay two fine Ilands vninhabited, wherein are nothing but Woods, Okes, Pines, Wal-nut, Beech, Sasifras, Vines, and other Trees which we know not. This Bay is a most hopefull place, innumerable store of Fowle, and excellent good, and cannot but be of Fish in their seasons: Skote, Cod, Turbot and Herring we haue tasted of, abundance of Musles the greatest and best that euer we saw; Crabs and Lobsters, in their time infinite: It is in fashion like a Cikle or Fish-hooke.

The eighteenth we went along the Coast in the Woods, some seuen or eight mile, but saw not an Indian, nor an Indian house, onely we found where formerly had beene some Inhabitants, and where they had planted their Corne: wee found not any Nauigable Riuer, but foure or fiue small running Brookes of very fresh water, that all run into the Sea. The Land for the crust of the earth is a spits depth, excellent blacke mould and fat in some places; two or three great Okes, but not very thicke, Pines, Walnuts, Beech, Ash, Birch, Hasell, Holley, Asp, Sasifras, in abundance, and Vines euery where, Cherry-trees, Plum-trees, and many other which we know not; many kinds of Hearbs we found here in Winter, as Strawberry leaues innumerable, Sorrell, Yarow, Caruell, Brook-lime, Liuer-wort, Water-cresses, great store of Leeks and Onyons, and an excellent strong kind of Flax and Hempe. Here is Sand, Grauell, and excellent Clay, no better in the World, excellent for Pots, and will wash like Sope, and great store of Stone, though somewhat soft, and the best water that euer we drunke, and the Brookes now begin to be full of Fish; that night many being weary with marching, we went aboord againe.

The nineteenth of December, after our landing and viewing of the places, so well as we could we came to a conclusion, by most voyces, to set on the Maine Land, on the first place, on an high ground, where there is a great deale of Land cleered, and hath beene planted with Corne three or foure yeeres agoe, and there is a very sweet Brook runs vnder the Hill side, and many delicate Springs of as good water as can be drunke, and where wee may harbour our Shallops and Boates exceeding well, and in this Brooke is much good Fish in their seasons. On the further side of the Riuer also much Corne ground cleered, in one Field is a great Hill, on which wee point to make a plat-forme, and plant our Ordnance, which will command all round about, from thence we may see into the Bay, and far into the Sea, and we may see thence Cape Cod.

Digitized by Google

Saturday the three and twentieth, ſo many of vs as could went on ſhore, felled and carried timber, to prouide themſelues ſtuffe for building. Munday the fiue and twentieth, wee went on ſhoare, ſome to fell timber, ſome to ſawe, ſome to riue, and ſome to carry, ſo no man reſted all that day.

Munday the fiue and twentieth, being Chriſtmaſſe day, we began to drinke water aboord, but at night the Maſter cauſed vs to haue ſome Beer, and ſo on boord we had diuers times now & then ſome Beere, but on ſhoare none at all. Wee tooke notice how many Families they were, willing all ſingle men that had no wiues to ioyne with ſome Family as they thought fit, that ſo wee might build fewer houſes, which was done, and we reduced them to nineteene Families; to greater Families we allotted larger plots, to euery perſon halfe a Pole in breadth, and three in length, and ſo Lots were caſt where euery man ſhould lie, which was done, and ſtaked out; we thought this proportion was large enough at the firſt, for Houſes and Gardens to impale them round, conſidering the weakeneſſe of our people, many of them growing ill with colds, for our former Diſcoueries in froſt and ſtormes, and the wading at Cape Cod had brought much weakneſſe amongſt vs, which increaſed euery day more and more, and after was the cauſe of many of our deaths.

Friday and Saturday wee fitted our ſelues for our labour, but our people on ſhoare were much troubled and diſcouraged with rayne and wet that day, being very ſtormy and cold; wee ſaw great ſmoakes of fire made by the Indians, about ſix or ſeuen miles from vs as wee coniectured.

Thurſday the fourth of Ianuarie, Captaine Miles Standiſh, with foure or fiue more, went to ſee if they could meete with any of the Sauages in that place where the fires was made, they went to ſome of their houſes, but not lately inhabited, yet could they not meet with any; as they came home, they ſhot at an Eagle and killed her, which was excellent meat; It was hardly to be diſcerned from Mutton.

Tueſday the ninth of Ianury, was a reaſonable faire day, and wee went to labour that day in the building of our Towne, in two rowes of houſes for more ſafetie: wee diuided by lot the plot of ground whereon to build our Towne: After the proportion formerly allotted, we agreed that euery man ſhould build his owne houſe, thinking by that courſe men would make more haſt then working in common: the common houſe, in which for the firſt we made our Rendeuous, being neere finiſhed, wanting only couering, it being about twentie foot ſquare, ſome ſhould make morter, and ſome gather thatch, ſo that in foure daies halfe of it was thatched, froſt and foule weather hindered vs much; this time of the yeare ſeldome could we worke halfe the weeke.

On the twelfth day, Iohn Goodman and Peter Browne at dinner time tooke their meat in their hands, and would go walke and refreſh themſelues, ſo going a little off they find a Lake of water, and hauing a great Maſtiffe bitch with them, and a Spannell; by the water ſide they found a great Deere, the Dogs chaſed him, and they followed ſo far as they loſt themſelues, and could not find the way backe, they wandred all that afternoone being wet, and at night did freeze and ſnow, they were ſlenderly apparelled, and had no weapons but each one his Cicle, nor any victualls, they ranged vp and downe and could finde none of the Sauages habitations. When it drew to night they were much perplexed, for they could find neither harbour nor meat, but in froſt and ſnow, were forced to make the Earth their bed, and the Element their couering, and another thing did very much terrifie them; they heard as they thought two Lions roaring exceedingly for a long time together, and a third, that they thought was very neere them: ſo not knowing what to doe, they reſolued to climbe vp into a Tree as the ſafeſt refuge, though that would proue an intollerable cold lodging. They ſtood at the Trees roote, that when the Lions came they might take their opportunitie of climbing vp, the Bitch they were faine to hold by the necke, for ſhee would haue beene gone to the Lion; but it pleaſed God ſo to diſpoſe, that the wild Beaſts came not: ſo they walked vp and downe vnder the Tree all night, it was an extreame cold night; ſo ſoone as it was light they trauelled againe, paſſing by many Lakes, and Brookes, and Woods, and in one place where the Sauages had burnt the ſpace of fiue miles in length, which is a fine Champion Countrey, and euen. In the afternoon it pleaſed God from an high Hill, they diſcouered the two Iles in the Bay, and ſo that night got to the Plantation, being ready to faint with trauell and want of victualls, and almoſt famiſhed with cold, Iohn Goodman was faine to haue his ſhooes cut off his feet they were ſo ſwelled with cold, and it was a long while after ere hee was able to goe. The houſe was fired occaſionally by a ſparke that flew into the thatch, which inſtantly burnt it all vp, but the roofe ſtood and little hurt; the moſt loſſe was Maſter Carners and William Bradfords, who then lay ſicke in bed, and if they had not riſen with good ſpeed, had beene blowne vp with powder: but through Gods mercy they had no harme; the houſe was as full of beds as they could lie one by another, and their Muskets charged, but bleſſed be God there was no harme done Munday the fifteenth day, it rained much all day, that they on ſhip-boord could not goe on ſhoare, nor they on ſhoare doe any labour but were all wet. Tueſday, Wedneſday, Thurſday, were very faire Sun-ſhiny daies, as if it had beene in April, and our people ſo many as were in health wrought chearefully. The nineteenth day wee reſolued to make a Shed, to put our common prouiſion in, of which ſome were already ſet on ſhoare, but at noone it rained that wee could not worke.

Digitized by Google

worke. This day in the euening, Iohn Goodman went abroad to vse his lame feet, that were pitty-fully ill with the cold hee had got, hauing a little Spannell with him, a little way from the Plantation, two great Wolues ran after the Dog, the Dog ran to him, and betwixt his legs for succour, he had nothing in his hand, but tooke vp a sticke and threw at one of them and hit him, and they presently ran both away, but came againe; he got a Paile boord in his hand, and they sate both on their tailes, grinning at him a good while and went their way and left him. Two great Wolues.

Saturday the seuenteenth day in the morning, we called a meeting for the establishing of Military Orders amongst our selues, and we chose Miles Standish our Captaine, and gaue him authoritie of command in affayres.

Saturday the third of March, the wind was South, the morning mystie, but towards noone warme and faire weather: the Birds sang in the Woods most pleasantly; at one of the clocke it thundred, which was the first we heard in that Countrey, it was strong and great claps, but short, but after an houre it rayned very sadly till midnight. Wednesday the seuenth of March, the wind was full East, cold, but faire. Thunder.

Friday the sixteenth, there presented himselfe a Sauage, which caused an Alarum, he very boldly came all alone and along the houses straight to the Randeuous, where we intercepted him, not suffering him to goe in, as vndoubtedly he would out of his boldnesse hee saluted vs in English, and bad vs welcome, for he had learned some broken English amongst the Englishmen that came to fish at Monhiggon, and knew by name the most of the Captaines, Commanders, and Masters, that vsually come; he was a man free in speech, so farre as he could expresse his minde, and of a seemly carriage, we questioned him of many things, he was the first Sauage we could meet with, all; hee said he was not of those parts, but of Morattiggon, and one of the Sagamores or Lords thereof, had beene eight moneths in these parts, it lying hence a daies saile with a great wind, and fiue dayes by Land: he discoursed of the whole Countrey, and of euery Prouince, and of their Sagamores, and their number of men, and strength. The wind beginning to rise a little, wee cast a Horsemans Coat about him, for he was starke naked, only a leather about his waste, with a fringe about a span long, or little more; he had a Bow and two Arrowes, the one headed, and the other vnheaded; he was a tall straight man, the haire of his head blacke, long behind, only short before, none on his face at all; he asked some Beere, but we gaue him Strong-water and Bisket, and Butter, and Cheese, and Pudding, and a piece of a Mallerd; all which he liked wel, and had bin acquainted with such amongst the English, he told vs the place where we now liue, is called, Patuxet, and that about foure yeeres agoe all the Inhabitants died of an extraordinary plague, and there is neither man, woman, nor child remaining, as indeed we haue found none, so as there is none to hinder our possession, or to lay claime vnto it. All the afternoone we spent in communication with him, we would gladly haue been rid of him at night, but he was not willing to goe this night, then we thought to carry him on ship-boord, wherwith hee was wel content and went into the Shallop, but the wind was high and water scant, that it could not returne backe. We lodged that night at Steuen Hopkins house, and watched him: the next day he went away back to the Massoyts, from whence he said he came, who are our next bordering neighbours; they are sixtie strong, as he saith. The Nausites are as neere South-east of them, and are a hundred strong, and those were they of whom our people were encountered, as we before related. They are much incensed and prouoked against the English, and about eight moneths agoe slew three Englishmen, and two more hardly escaped by flight to Monhiggon; they were Sir Ferdinando Gorge his men, as this Sauage told vs, as he did likewise of the Huggery, that is, Fight, that our discouerers had with the Nausites, and of our Tooles they were taken out of the Woods, which we willed him should be brought againe, otherwise we would right our selues. These people are ill affected towards the English, by reason of one Hunt, a Master of a Ship, who deceiued the people, and got them vnder colour of trucking with them, twentie out of this very place where we inhabite, and seuen men from the Nausites, and carried them away and sold them for Slaues, like a wretched man (for twentie pound a man) that care not what mischiefe he doth for his profit. Conference with Sauages. Patuxet. People all dead of a plague. Massoyts. Nausites. Hunts wickednesse.

Saturday in the morning we dismissed the Sauage, and gaue him a Knife, a Braceler, and a Ring; he promised within a night or two to come again, & to bring with him some of the Massoyts our neighbours, with such Beauers skins as they had to trucke with vs. Saturday and Sunday reasonable faire dayes. On this day came againe the Sauage, and brought with him fiue other tall proper men, they had euery man a Deeres skin on him, and the principall of them had a wild Cats skin, or such like on the one arme: they had most of them long hosen vp to their groynes, close made; and aboue their groynes to their waste another leather, they were altogether like the Irish trouses; they are of complexion like our English Gipseys, no haire or very little on their faces, on their heads long haire to the shoulders, onely cut before; some trussed vp before with a feather, broad wise, like a fan, another a Fox taile hanging out: these left (according to our charge giuen him before) their Bowes and Arrowes a quarter of a mile from our Towne, we gaue them entertainment as we thought was fitting them. They did eate liberally of our English victuals, they made semblance vnto vs of friendship and amitie; they sang and danced after this manner like Anticks; they brought with him in a thing like a Bow-case (which the principall of them had about Sauages described.

about his waſt) a little of their Corne pounded to powder, which put to a little water they eate: he had a little Tobacco in a bag, but none of them drunke but when he liſted, ſome of them had their faces painted blacke, from the forehead to the chin, foure or fiue fingers broad; others after other faſhions, as they liked: they brought three or foure Skins, but wee would not trucke with them all that day, but wiſhed them to bring more, and we would trucke for all, which they promiſed within a night or two, and would leaue theſe behind them, though wee were not willing they ſhould, and they brought all our Tooles againe which were taken in the Woods, in our mens abſence, ſo becauſe of the day we diſmiſſed them ſo ſoone as we could. But Samoſet our firſt acquaintance, either was ſicke, or fained himſelfe ſo, and would not goe with them, and ſtaied with vs till Wedneſday morning: Then we ſent him to them, to know the reaſon they came not according to their words, and we gaue him an Hat, a paire of Stockings and Shooes, a Shirt, and a piece of Cloth to tye about his waſt.

Thurſday the 22. of March, was a very faire warme day. About noone we met againe about our publike buſineſſe, but we had ſcarce beene an houre together, but Samoſet came againe, and Squanto, the onely Natiue of Patuxat, where wee now inhabite, who was one of the twentie Captiues that by Hunt were carried away, and had beene in England, and dwelt in Cornhill with Maſter Iohn Slanie a Merchant, and could ſpeake a little Engliſh, with three others, and they brought them ſome few Skins to trucke, and ſome Red Herrings newly taken and dried, but not ſalted, and ſignified vnto vs, that there Great Sagamore Maſſaſoyt was hard by, with Quadequina his brother, and all their men. They could not well expreſſe in Engliſh what they would, but after an houre the King came to the top of an Hill ouer againſt vs, and had in his trayne ſixtie men, that we could well behold them, and they vs: wee were not willing to ſend our Gouernour to them, and they vnwilling to come to vs, ſo Squanto went againe vnto him, who brought word that wee ſhould ſend one to parley with him, which we did, which was Edward Winſloe, to know his mind, and to ſignifie the mind and will of our Gouernor, which was to haue trading and peace with him. Wee ſent to the King a paire of Kniues, and a Copper Chaine, with a Iewell at it. To Quadequina we ſent likewiſe a Knife and a Iewell to hang in his eare, and withall a Pot of ſtrong water, a good quantitie of Bisket, and ſome Butter, which were all willingly accepted: our Meſſenger made a ſpeech vnto him, that King IAMES ſaluted him with words of Loue and Peace, and did accept of him as his Friend and Alley, and that our Gouernour deſired to ſee him and to trucke with him, and to confirme a Peace with him, as his next neighbour: hee liked well of the ſpeech, and heard it attentiuely, though the Interpreters did not well expreſſe it; after hee had eaten and drunk himſelfe, & giuen the reſt to his company, he looked vpon our Meſſengers Sword and Armor which he had on, with intimation of his deſire to buy it, but on the other ſide, our Meſſenger ſhewed his vnwillingneſſe to part with it: In the end he left him in the cuſtodie of Quadequina his brother, and came ouer the Brook, and ſome twenty men following him, leauing all their Bowes and Arrowes behind them. We kept ſix or ſeuen as Hoſtages for our Meſſenger; Cap. Standiſh and M. Williamſon met the King at the Brook, with halfe a dozen Musketiers, they ſaluted him and he them, ſo one going ouer, the one on the one ſide, and the other on the other, conducted him to an houſe then in building, where wee placed a greene Rug, and three or foure Cuſhions. Then inſtantly came our Gouernour, with a Drum and Trumpet after him, and ſome few Musketiers. After ſalutations, our Gouernour kiſſing his hand, the King kiſſed him, and ſo they ſate downe. The Gouernour called for ſome ſtrong water, and drunke to him, and he drunke a great draught that made him ſweate all the while after; hee called for a little freſh meate, which the King did eate willingly, and did giue his followers. Then they treated of Peace, which was;

The agreements of peace betweene vs and Maſſaſoyt.

First, That neither he nor any of his ſhould iniure or do hurt to any of our people. Secondly, & if any of his did hurt to any of ours, he ſhould ſend the offender, that we might puniſh him. Thirdly, that if any of our tooles were taken away when our people were at work, he ſhould cauſe them to bee reſtored, and if ours did any harme to any of his, we would doe the like to them. Fourthly, If any did vniuſtly war againſt him we would aide him; If any did war againſt vs, he ſhould aide vs. Fifthly, He ſhould ſend to his neighbor Confederates, to certifie them of this, that they might not wrong vs, but might be likewiſe compriſed in the conditions of Peace. Sixthly, That when their men came to vs, they ſhould leaue their Bowes and Arrowes behind them, as wee ſhould doe our Peeces when we came to them. Laſtly, that doing thus, King IAMES would eſteeme of him as his Friend and Ally: all which the King ſeemed to like well, and it was applauded of his followers; all the while he ſate by the Gouernour hee trembled for feare. In his perſon hee is a very luſty man, in his beſt yeeres, an able body, graue of countenance, and ſpare of ſpeech: In his attyre little or nothing differing from the reſt of his followers, onely in a great Chaine of white bone Beades about his neck, & at it behind his neck hangs a little bag of Tobacco, which he drank and gaue vs to drinke; his face was painted with a ſad Red like Murry, and oyled both head and face, that hee looked greaſily: All his followers likewiſe, were in their faces in part or in whole painted, ſome Blacke, ſome Red, ſome Yellow, and ſome White, ſome with Croſſes, and other Antick workes, ſome had Skins on them, and ſome naked, all ſtrong, tall men in appearance. The King had his boſome hanging in a ſtring, a great long Knife; he maruelled much at our Trumpet, and ſome of his men would ſound it as well as they could, Samoſet and Squanto, ſtayed all night with vs, and the King and all his men lay all night in the Wood, not aboue halfe an Engliſh mile from vs, and all their wiues and women with them, they ſaid, that within eight or nine daies, they would come and ſet Corne on the other ſide of the Brooke, and dwell there all Summer, which is hard by vs. That night wee kept good watch, but there was no appearance of danger; the next morning diuers of our people came ouer to vs, hoping to get ſome victualls as wee imagined, ſome of them told vs the King would haue ſome of vs come ſee him; Captaine Standiſh, and Iſaac Allerton went venterouſly, who were welcommed of him after their manner: he gaue them three or foure ground Nuts, and ſome Tobacco. Wee cannot yet conceiue, but that hee is willing to haue peace with vs, for they haue ſeene our people ſometimes alone two or three in the Woods at worke and Fowling, when as they offered them no harme, as they might eaſily haue done, and eſpecially becauſe hee hath a potent Aduerſarie, the Narowhiganſets, that are at warre with him, againſt whom hee thinkes wee may bee ſome ſtrength to him, for our Peeces are terrible vnto them. This morning they ſtaied till ten or eleuen of the clocke, and our Gouernour bid them ſend the Kings Kettle, and filled it full of Peaſe, which pleaſed them well, and ſo they went their way.

and

Friday was a very faire day, Samoſet and Squanto ſtil remained with vs, Squanto went at noon to fiſh for Eeles, at night he came home with as many as hee could well lift in one hand, which our people were glad of, they were fat and ſweete, hee trod them out with his feete, and ſo caught them with his hands without any other Inſtrument. This day we proceeded on with our common buſineſſe, from which we had bin ſo often hindred by the Sauages comming, and concluded both of Militarie Orders, and of ſome Lawes and Orders as we thought behoouefull for our preſent eſtate, and condition, and likewiſe chuſe our Gouernour for this yeere, which was Maſter Iohn Carver, a man well approued amongſt vs.

A Iourney to Packanokik, the Habitation of the Great King Maſſaſoyt.

IT ſeemed good to the Company for many conſiderations, to ſend ſome amongſt them to Maſſaſoyt, the greateſt Commander amongſt the Sauages, bordering about vs; partly to know where to find them, if occaſion ſerued, as alſo to ſee their ſtrength, diſcouer the Countrey, prevent abuſes in their diſorderly comming vnto vs, make ſatisfaction for ſome conceiued iniuries to be done on our parts, and to continue the league of Peace and Friendſhip betweene them and vs. For theſe, and the like ends, it pleaſed the Gouernour to make choice of Steven Hopkins, and Edward Winſlow to goe vnto him, and hauing a fit opportunitie, by reaſon of a Sauage, called Tiſquantum (that could ſpeake Engliſh) comming vnto vs: with all expedition prouided a Horſemans Coat, of Red Cotton, and laced with a ſlight Lace for a Preſent, that both they and their meſſage might bee the more acceptable amongs them.

1621.

Wee ſet forward the tenth of Iune, about nine a clock in the morning, our guide reſoluing that night to reſt at Namaſchet, a Towne vnder Maſſaſoyt, and conceiued by vs to be very neere, becauſe the Inhabitants flocked ſo thicke vpon euery ſlight occaſion amongſt vs: but wee found it to bee ſome fifteene Engliſh miles. On the way wee found ſome ten or twelue men, women, and children, which had peſtered vs, till wee were wearie of them, perceiuing that (as the manner of them all is) where victuall is eaſilieſt to be got, there they liue, eſpecially in the Summer: by reaſon whereof, our Bay affording many Lobſters, they reſort euery Spring Tide thither: and now returned with vs to Namaſchet. Thither we came about three a clocke after noone, the Inhabitants entertaining vs with ioy, in the beſt manner they could, giuing vs a kind of bread, called by them Maizium, and the ſpawne of Shads, which then they got in abundance, in ſo much as they gaue vs ſpoones to eate them, with theſe they boyled muſtie Acornes, but of the Shads wee eate heartily. After this they deſired one of our men to ſhoot at a Crow, complaining what damage they ſuſtained in their Corne by them, who ſhooting ſome foureſcore off and killing, they much admired it, as other ſhots on other occaſions. After this Tiſquantum told vs wee ſhould hardly in one day reach Pakanokick, mouing vs to go ſome eight miles further, where we ſhould find more ſtore and better victuals then there: Being willing to haſten our iourney we went, and came thither at Sunne ſetting, where we found many of the Namaſchencks (they ſo calling the men of Namaſchet) fiſhing vpon a Ware which they had made on a Riuer which belonged to them, where they caught abundance of Baſſe. Theſe welcommed vs alſo, gaue vs of their fiſh, and we them of our victualls, not doubting but we ſhould haue enough where ere we came. There we lodged in the open fields: for houſes they had none, though they ſpent the moſt of the Summer there. The head of this Riuer is reported to bee not farre from the place of our abode, vpon it are, and haue beene many Townes, it being a good length. The ground is very good on both ſides, it being for the moſt part cleered: Thouſands of men haue liued there, which died in a great plague not long ſince: and pittie it was and is to ſee, ſo many goodly fields, and ſo well ſeated, without men to dreſſe and manure the ſame. Vpon this Riuer dwelleth Maſſaſoyt.

Great plague.

The next morning wee brake our faſt, tooke our leaue and departed, being then accompanied with ſome ſixe Sauages, hauing gone about ſixe miles by the Riuer ſide, at a knowne ſhoale place, it being low water, they ſpake to vs to put off our breeches, for wee muſt wade thorow. Here let me not forget the valour and courage of some of the Sauages, on the opposite side of the Riuer, for there were remaining aliue onely two men, both aged, especially the one being aboue three-score: These two espying a company of men entring the Riuer, ran very swiftly and low in the grasse to meet vs at the Banke, where with shrill voyces and great courage, standing charged vpon vs with their Bowes, they demanded what wee were, supposing vs to be enemies, and thinking to take aduantage on vs in the water: but seeing wee were friends, they welcommed vs with such food as they had, and we bestowed a small bracelet of Beads on them. Thus farre we are sure the Tide ebbes and flowes.

Digitized by Google

Hauing here againe refreshed our selues we proceeded in our Iourney, the weather being verie hot for trauell, yet the Countrey so well watered, that a man could scarce be drie, but hee should haue a Spring at hand to coole his thirst, beside small Riuers in abundance: But the Sauages will not willingly drinke, but at a Spring head. When we came to any small Brooke, where no Bridge was, two of them desired to carry vs through of their owne accords, also fearing wee were or would bee wearie, offered to carrie our Peeces, also if wee would lay off any of our clothes, wee should haue them carried: and as the one of them had found more speciall kindnesse from one of the Messengers, and the other Sauage from the other; so they shewed their thankfulnesse accordingly in affording vs all helpe, and furtherance in the Iourney.

As we passed along, we obserued that there were few places by the Riuer, but had beene inhabited, by reason whereof much ground was cleere, saue of weeds which grew higher then our heads. There is much good Timber, both Oake, Walnut-tree, Firre, Beech, and exceeding great Chesnut-trees.

After we came to a Towne of Massasoyts, where we eat Oysters and other Fish. From thence we went to Packanokick, but Massasoyt was not at home, there we staied, he being sent for: when newes was brought of his comming, our guide Tisquantum requested that at our meeting, wee would discharge our Peeces, but one of vs going about to charge his Peece, the women and children through feare to see them take vp his Peece, ran away, and could not be pacified, till he laid it downe againe, who afterward were better informed by our Interpreter. Massasoyt being come, wee discharged our Peeces, and saluted him, who after their manner kindly welcommed vs, and tooke vs into his house, and set vs downe by him, where hauing deliuered our Message and Presents, and hauing put the Coat on his backe, and the Chaine about his necke, hee was not a little proud to behold himselfe, and his men also to see their King so brauely attired. For answere to our Message, he told vs we were welcome, and he would gladly continue that Peace and Friendship which was betweene him and vs: and for his men they should no more pester vs as they had done: Also, that hee would send to Paomet, and would helpe vs with Corne for Seed, according to our request.

This being done, his men gathered neere vnto him, to whom hee turned himselfe, and made a great Speech; they sometime interposing, and as it were, confirming and applauding him in that he said. The meaning whereof was (as farre as wee could learne) thus; Was not hee Massasoyt Commander of the Countrey about them? Was not such a Towne his and the people of it? and should they not bring their skins vnto vs. After this manner, he named at least thirtie places, and their answere was as aforesaid to euery one: so that as it was delightfull, it was tedious vnto vs. This being ended, he lighted Tobacco for vs, and fell to discoursing of England, and of the Kings Maiestie, maruelling that hee would liue without a Wife. Also hee talked of the Frenchmen, bidding vs not to suffer them to come to Narohiganset, for it was King IAMES his Countrey, and he also was King IAMES his man. Late it grew, but victualls he offered none; for indeed he had not any, being he came so newly home. So we desired to goe to rest: hee laid vs on the bed with himselfe and his wife, they at the one end and wee at the other, it being onely plankes laid a foot from the ground, and a thinne Mat vpon them. Two more of his chiefe men for want of roome pressed by and vpon vs; so that wee were worse wearie of our lodging then of our iourney.

Royall entertainment.

The next day being Thursday, many of their Sachmis, or pettie Gouernours came to see vs, and many of their men also. There they went to their manner of Games for Skins and Kniues. There we challenged them to shoot with them for Skins: but they durst not; onely they desired to see one of vs shoot at a marke, who shooting with Haile-shot, they wondred to see the marke so full of holes. About one a clocke, Massasoyt brought two Fishes that he had shot, they were like Breame, but three times so bigge, and better meat. These being boyled, there were at least fortie looked for share in them, the most eate of them: This meale onely we had in two nights and a day, and had not one of vs bought a Partridge, we had taken our Iourney fasting: Very importunate hee was to haue vs stay with them longer: But wee desired to keepe the Sabbath at home, and feared wee should either bee light-headed for want of sleepe, for what with bad lodging, the Sauages barbarous singing (for they vse to sing themselues asleepe) Lice and Fleas within doores, and Muskeetoes without, wee could hardly sleepe all the time of our being there; we much fearing that if we should stay any longer, we should not bee able to recouer home for want of strength. So that on the Friday morning before Sun-rising, wee tooke our leaue and departed, Games.

Hungrie fare.

Massasoyt

Digitized by Google

Maſſaſoyt being both grieued and aſhamed, that he could not better entertaine vs; and retaining Tiſquantum to ſend from place to place to procure trucke for vs: and appointing another, called Tokamahamon in his place, whom we had found faithfull before and after vpon all occaſions.

A Voyage made by ten of our men o the Kingdome of Nauſet, to ſeek a Boy that had loſt himſelfe in the Woods; with ſuch accidents as befell vs in that Voyage.

THe eleuenth of Iune we ſet forth toward Nauſet, the weather being very faire: but ere we had bin long at Sea, there aroſe a ſtorme of winde and raine, with much lightning and thunder, in ſo much that a ſpout aroſe not farre from vs: but God be praiſed, it dured not long, and we put in that night for Harbour at a place called Cummaquid, where we had ſome hope to finde the Boy. Two Sauages were in the Boat with vs, the one was Tiſquantum our Interpreter, the other Tokamahamon, a ſpeciall friend. It being night before we came in, wee Anchored in the middeſt of the Bay, where we were dry at a low water. In the morning we eſpied Sauages ſeeking Lobſters, and ſent our two Interpreters to ſpeake with them, the channell being betweene them; where they told them what we were, and for what we were come, willing them not at all to feare vs, for we would not hurt them. Their anſwere was, that the Boy was well, but he was at Nauſet; yet ſince wee were there they deſired vs to come aſhoare and eate with them: which as ſoone as our Boate floated we did: and went ſixe aſhoare, hauing foure pledges for them in the Boate. They brought vs to their Sachim or Gouernour, whom they call Iyanough, a man not exceeding twenty ſix yeares of age, but very perſonable, gentle courteous, and faire conditioned; indeede not like a Sauage, ſaue for his attyre: his entertainment was anſwerable to his parts, and his cheare plentifull and various.

One thing was very grieuous vnto vs at this place: There was an old Woman, whom wee iudged to be no leſſe then an hundred yeares old, which came to ſee vs becauſe ſhee neuer ſaw Engliſh; yet could not behold vs without breaking forth into great paſſion, weeping and crying exceſſiuely. We demanding the reaſon of it, they told vs, ſhe had three Sonnes, who when Maſter Hunt was in theſe parts, went aboord his Ship to trade with him, and he carried them Captiues into Spaine (for Tiſquantum at that time was carried away alſo) by which meanes ſhee was depriued of the comfort of her children in her old age. We told them wee were ſorry that any Engliſhman ſhould giue them that offence, that Hunt was a bad man, and that all the Engliſh that heard of it condemned him for the ſame: but for vs, we would not offer them any ſuch iniury, though it would gaine vs all the Skins in the Countrie. So we gaue her ſome ſmall trifles, which ſomewhat appeaſed her.

After dinner we tooke Boate for Nauſet, Iyanough and two of his men accompanying vs. Ere we came to Nauſet, the day and tide were almoſt ſpent, in ſo much as we could not goe in with our Shallop: but the Sachim or Gouernour of Cummaquid went aſhoare and his men with him, we alſo ſent Tiſquantum to tell Aſpinet the Sachim of Nauſet, wherefore we came. After Sunſet Aſpinet came with a great traine, and brought the Boy with him, one bearing him through the water: he had not leſſe then an hundred with him, the halfe whereof came to the Shallop ſide vnarmed with him, the other ſtood aloofe with their Bowe and Arrowes. There he deliuered vs the Boy, behung with Beades, and made peace with vs, wee beſtowing a Knife on him, and likewiſe on another that firſt entertained the Boy and brought him thither. So they departed from vs.

The Boy is reſtored.

Here we vnderſtood that the Narrohiganſets had ſpoyled ſome of Maſſaſoyts men, and taken him. This ſtrucke ſome feare in vs, becauſe the Colony was ſo weakely guarded, the ſtrength thereof being abroad: But we ſet forth with reſolution to make the beſt haſte home we could; yet the winde being contrary, hauing ſcarce any freſh water left, and at leaſt ſixteene leagues home, we put in againe for the ſhoare. There we met againe with Iyanough the Sachim of Cummaquid, and the moſt of his Towne, both men, women and children with him. Hee being ſtill willing to gratifie vs, tooke a runlet and led our men in the darke a great way for water, but could finde none good; yet brought ſuch as there was on his necke with them. In the meane time the women ioyned hand in hand, ſinging and dancing before the Shallop, the men alſo ſhewing all the kindeneſſe they could, Iyanough himſelfe taking a Bracelet from about his necke, and hanging it vpon one of vs. By Gods prouidence we came ſafely home that night.

CHAP. V.

Good newes from New England: Or, A Relation of things remarkeable in that Plantation; written by E. WINSLOVV and here abbreuiated.

THe good Ship called the Fortune, which in the Moneth of Nouember 1621. (bleſſed be God) brought vs a new ſupply of fiue and thirty perſons, was not long departed our Coaſt, ere the Great people of Nanohigganſet, which are reported to be many thouſands ſtrong, began to breath forth many threats againſt vs, notwithſtanding their deſired and obtained peace with vs in the fore-going Summer. Inſomuch as the common talke of our neighbour Indians on all ſides was of the prepa-

Digitized by Google

preparation they made to come againſt vs, In reaſon, a man would thinke they ſhould haue now more cauſe to feare vs than before our ſupply came: but though none of them were preſent, yet vnderſtanding by others that they neither brought Armes nor other prouiſions with them, but wholly relied on vs, it occaſioned them to ſleight and braue vs with ſo many threats as they did. At length came one of them to vs, who was ſent by Conanacus their chiefe Sachim or King, accompanied with one Tokamahamon a friendly Indian. This Meſſenger inquired for Tiſquantum our Interpreter, who not being at home ſeemed rather to be glad then ſorry, and leauing for him a bundle of new Arrowes lapped in a rattle Snakes skinne, deſired to depart with all expedition.

Snakes skin defiance.

When Tiſquantum returned, and the Arrowes were deliuered, and the manner of the Meſſengers cariage related, he ſignified to the Gouernour, that to ſend the rattle Snakes skinne in that manner, imported enmitie, and that it was no better then a challenge. Hereupon, after ſome deliberation, the Gouernour ſtuffed the skin with Powder and Shot, and ſent it backe, returning no leſſe defiance to Conanacus, aſſuring him if he had Shipping now preſent thereby to ſend his men to Nanohigganſet (the place of his abode) they ſhould not neede to come ſo farre by Land to vs: yet withall, ſhewing that they ſhould neuer come vnwelcome or vnlooked for. This meſſage was ſent by an Indian, and deliuered in ſuch ſort, as it was no ſmall terrour to this Sauage King, inſomuch as he would not once touch the Powder and Shot, or ſuffer it to ſtay in his Houſe or Countrie. Whereupon the Meſſenger refuſing it, another tooke it vp, and hauing beene poſted from place to place a long time, at length came whole backe againe.

In the meane time, knowing our owne weakeneſſe, notwithſtanding our high words and loftie lookes towards them, and ſtill lying open to all caſualty, hauing as yet (vnder God) no other defence then our Armes, we thought it moſt needfull to impale our Towne, which with all expedition we accompliſhed in the moneth of February, and ſome few dayes, taking in the top of the Hill vnder which our Towne is ſeated, making foure Bulwarkes or ietties without the ordinary circuit of the Pale, from whence we could defend the whole Towne: In three whereof are Gates, and the fourth in time to be. This being done, Captaine Standiſh diuided our ſtrength into foure ſquadrons or companies, appointing whom he thought moſt fit to haue command of each: And at a generall Muſter or Training, appointed each his place, gaue each his Company, giuing them charge vpon euery alarum to reſort to their Leaders to their appointed place, and in his abſence, to be commanded and directed by them. That done according to his order, each drew his Company to his appointed place for defence, and there together diſcharged their Muskets. After which they brought their new Commanders to their houſes, where againe they graced them with their ſhot, and ſo departed. Fearing alſo leaſt the enemy at any time ſhould take any aduantage by firing our houſes, Captaine Standiſh appointed a certaine Company, that whenſoeuer they ſaw or heard fire to be cryed in the Towne, ſhould onely betake themſelues to their Armes, and ſhould incloſe the houſe or place ſo indangered, and ſtand aloofe on their guard, with their backes towards the fire, to preuent trechery, if any were in that kinde intended. If the fire were in any of the houſes of this guard, they were then freed from it, but not otherwiſe, without ſpeciall command.

Towne impaled.

Long before this time we promiſed the people of Maſſachuſet in the beginning of March to come vnto them, and trade for their Furres, which being then come, we began to make preparation for that Voyage. In the meane time, an Indian, called Hobbamocke, who ſtill liued in the Towne, told vs, that he feared the Maſſachuſets or Maſſachuſeuks (for they ſo called the people of that place) were ioyned in confederacie with the Nanohigganeucks, or people of Nanohigganſet, and that they therefore would take this opportunity to cut off Captaine Standiſh and his Company abroad: but howſoeuer in the meane time, it was to be feared that the Nanohigganeucks would aſſault the Towne at home, giuing many reaſons for his iealouſie, as alſo that Tiſquantum was in the confederacy, who we ſhould finde would vſe many perſwaſions to draw vs from our Shallops to the Indians houſes for their better aduantage.

Notwithſtanding the forenamed Captaine with ten men, accompanied with Tiſquantum and Hobbamocke, ſet forwards for the Maſſachuſets: but we had no ſooner turned the point of the Harbour, called the Gurnets noſe (where being becalmed we let fall our grapnell, to ſet things to rights, and prepare to row) but there came an Indian of Tiſquantums family, running to certaine of our people that were from home with all eagerneſſe, hauing his face wounded, and the bloud ſtill freſh on the ſame, calling to them to repaire home, oft looking behinde him, as if ſome others had him in chaſe, ſaying that at Namaſchet (a Towne ſome fifteene miles from vs) there were many of the Nanohigganſets, Maſſaſſowat our ſuppoſed friend; and Conbatant our feared enemy, with many others, with a reſolution to take aduantage on the preſent opportunity, to aſſault the Towne in the Captaines abſence, affirming that hee receiued the wound in his face for ſpeaking in our behalfe, and by ſleight eſcaped, looking oft backward, as if he ſuſpected them to be at hand. This he affirmed againe to the Gouernour, whereupon he gaue command that three peece of Ordnance ſhould be made ready and diſcharged, to the end that if wee were not out of hearing, we might returne thereat. Which we no ſooner heard, but we repaired homeward with all

all conuenient speede, arming our selues, and making all in readinesse to fight. When wee entred the Harbour, we saw the Towne likewise on their guard, whither we hasted with all conuenient speede. The newes being made knowne vnto vs, Hobbamock said flatly that it was false, assuring vs of Massassowats faithfulnesse; howsoeuer he presumed he would neuer haue vndertaken any such act without his priuitie, himselfe being a Pinse, that is, one of his chiefe Champions or men of valour, it being the manner amongst them not to vndertake such enterprises without the aduice and furtherance of men of that ranke.

The Gouernour caused Hobbamock to send his wife with all priuacie to Puckanokick, the chiefe place of Massassowats residence (pretending other occasions) there to informe her selfe, and so vs, of the right state of things. When she came thither, and saw all things quiet, and that no such matter was or had beene intended, she told Massassowat what had hapned at Plimoth (by them called Patuxet) which when he vnderstood, he was much offended at the carriage of Tisquantum, returning many thankes to the Gouernour for his good thoughts of him; and assuring him, that according to their first Articles of peace, hee would send word and giue warning when any such businesse was towards.

Thus by degrees we began to discouer Tisquantum, whose ends were onely to make himselfe great in the eyes of his Country-men, by meanes of his neerenesse and fauour with vs, not caring who fell, so he stood. In generall, his course was to perswade them hee could lead vs to peace or warre at his pleasure, and would oft threaten the Indians, sending them word in a priuate manner, we were intended shortly to kill them, that thereby he might get gifts to himselfe to worke their peace; insomuch as they had him in greater esteeme then many of their Sachims; yea, they themselues sought to him, who promised them peace in respect of vs; yea, and protection also, so as they would resort to him. So that whereas diuers were wont to relye on Massassowat for protection, and resort to his abode, now they began to leaue him, and seeke after Tisquantum. But when we vnderstood his dealings, we certified all the Indians of our ignorance and innocency therein, assuring them till they begun with vs, they should haue no cause to feare. And if any hereafter should raise any such reports, they should punish them as liers and seekers of their and our disturbance, which gaue the Indians good satisfaction on all sides. Tisquantums trechery.

After this we proceeded in our Voyage to the Massachusets, where we had good store of Trade and (blessed be God) returned in safety, though driuen from before our Towne in great danger and extremity of weather. At our returne, we found Massassowat at the Plantation, who made his seeming iust Apologie for all former matters of accusation, being much offended and inraged against Tisquantum, whom the Gouernour pacified as much as he could for the present. But not long after his departure, he sent a Messenger to the Gouernour, intreating him to giue way to the death of Tisquantum, who had so much abused him. But the Gouernour answered; Although he had deserued to dye both in respect of him and vs; yet for our sakes he desired he would spare him, and the rather because without him he knew not well how to vnderstand himselfe, or any other the Indians. With this answer the Messenger returned, but came againe not long after, accompanied with diuers others, demanding him from Massassowat their Master, as being one of his subiects, whom by our first Articles of peace we could not retaine: yet because hee would not willingly doe it without the Gouernors approbation, offered him many Beuers skins for his consent thereto, saying, that according to their manner, their Sachim had sent his owne Knife, and therewith, to cut off his head and hands, and bring them to him. To which the Gouernour answered; It was not the manner of the English to sell mens liues at a price, but when they had deserued iustly to die, to giue them their reward, and therefore refused their Beauers as a gift: but sent for Tisquantum, who though he knew their intent, yet offered not to flye, but came and accused Hobbamocke as the author and worker of his ouerthrow; yeelding himselfe to the Gouernour to be sent or not according as he thought meete. But at the instant, when our Gouernour was ready to deliuer him into the hands of his Executioners, a Boate was seene at Sea to crosse before our Towne, and fall behinde a head-land not farre off: whereupon, hauing heard many rumours of the French, and not knowing whether there were any combination betweene the Sauages and them, the Gouernour told the Indians, he would first know what Boate that was ere he would deliuer him into their custody. But being mad with rage, and impatient at delay, they departed in great heate.

Here let me not omit one notable (though wicked) practise of this Tisquantum, who to the end he might possesse his Countrimen with the greater feare of vs, and so consequently of himselfe, told them we had the plague buried in our store-house, which at our pleasure we could send forth to what place or people we would, and destroy them therewith, though wee stirred not from home. Being vpon the forenamed brabbles sent for by the Gouernour to this place, where Hobbamock was & some other of vs, the ground being broke in the middest of the house (whereunder certaine barrels of Powder were buried, though vnknowne to him) Hobbamock asked him what it meant? To whom he readily answered; That was the place wherein the plague was buried, whereof he formerly told him and others. After this Hobbamock asked one of our people whether such a thing were, and whether we had such command of it? Who answered no; But the Plagy conceit.

the God of the Engliſh had it in ſtore, and could ſend it at his pleaſure to the deſtruction of his and our enemies.

This was, as I take it, about the end of May, 1622. At which time our ſtore of victuals was wholly ſpent, hauing liued long before with a bare and ſhort allowance: The reaſon was, that ſupply of men before mentioned, which came ſo vnprouided, not landing ſo much as a barrell of Bread or Meale for their whole Company, but contrariwiſe receiued from vs for their Ships ſtore homeward. Neither were the ſetters forth thereof altogether to be blamed therein, but rather certaine amongſt our ſelues, who were too prodigall in their writing and reporting that plenty we enioyed. But that I may returne.

This Boate proued to be a Shallop that belonged to a fiſhing Ship, called the Sparrow, ſet forth by Maſter Thomas Weſton, late Merchant and Citizen of London, which brought ſix or ſeuen paſſengers at his charge, that ſhould before haue beene landed at our Plantation, who alſo brought no more prouiſion for the preſent then ſerued the Boats gang for their returne to the Ship, which made her Voyage at a place called Damarins Coue, neere Munhiggen, ſome forty leagues from vs North-eaſt-ward; about which place there fiſhed aboue thirty ſaile of Ships, and whither my ſelfe was imployed by our Gouernour, with orders to take vp ſuch victuals as the Shippes could ſpare; where I found kinde entertainment and good reſpect, with a willingneſſe to ſupply our wants: But being not able to ſpare that quantity I required, by reaſon of the neceſſitie of ſome amongſt themſelues, whom they ſupplied before my comming, would not take any Bils for the ſame, but did what they could freely, wiſhing their ſtore had beene ſuch as they might in greater meaſure haue expreſſed their owne loue, and ſupplied our neceſſities, for which they ſorrowed, prouoking one another to the vtmoſt of their abilities: which although it were not much amongſt ſo many people as were at the Plantation, yet through the prouident and diſcreete care of the Gouernours, recouered and preſerued ſtrength till our owne crop on the ground was ready.

Hauing diſpatched there, I returned home with all ſpeede conuenient, where I found the ſtate of the Colony much weaker then when I left it: for til now we were neuer without ſome Bread, the want wherof much abated the ſtrength and fleſh of ſome, and ſwelled others. But here it may be ſaid, if the Countrey abound with Fiſh and Fowle in ſuch meaſure as is reported, how could men vndergoe ſuch meaſure of hardneſſe, except through their owne negligence? I anſwere: Euery thing muſt be expected in its proper ſeaſon. No man, as one ſaid, will goe into an Orchard in the Winter to gather Cherries: ſo he that lookes for Fowle there in the Summer, will be deceiued in his expectation. The time they continue in plenty with vs, is from the beginning of October to the end of March: but theſe extremities befell vs in May and Iune. I confeſſe, that as the Fowle decreaſe, ſo Fiſh increaſe. And indeede their exceeding abundance was a great cauſe of increaſing our wants. For though our Bay and Creekes were full of Baſſe, and other fiſh, yet for want of fit and ſtrong Saynes, and other netting, they for the moſt part brake thorow and carried all away before them. And though the Sea were full of Cod, yet we had neither tackling nor harſeis for our Shallops. And indeede had we not beene in a place where diuers ſorts of Shelfiſh are that may be taken with the hand, we muſt haue periſhed, vnleſſe God had raiſed ſome vnknowne or extraordinary meanes for our preſeruation.

In the time of theſe ſtreits (indeede before my going to Munhiggen) the Indians began againe to caſt forth many inſulting ſpeeches, glorying in our weakeneſſe, and giuing out how eaſie it would be ere long to cut vs off. Now alſo Maſſaſſowat ſeemed to frowne on vs, and neither came or ſent to vs as formerly. Theſe things occaſioned further thoughts of Fortification. And whereas we haue a Hill called the Mount, incloſed within our Pale, vnder which our Towne is ſeated, we reſolued to erect a Fort thereon, from whence a few might eaſily ſecure the Town from any aſſault the Indians can make, whileſt the reſt might be imployed as occaſion ſerued. This worke was begun with great eagerneſſe, and with the approbation of all men, hoping that this being once finiſhed, and a continuall guard there kept, it would vtterly diſcourage the Sauages from hauing any hopes or thoughts of riſing againſt vs. And though it tooke the greateſt part of our ſtrength from dreſſing our Corne, yet (life being continued) wee hoped God would raiſe ſome meanes in ſtead thereof for our further preſeruation.

Maſter Weſtons planters; which plaid the waſps with Engliſh and Sauages.

In the end of Iune, or beginning of Iuly, came into our harbour two Ships of Maſter Weſtons aforeſaid, the one called the Charitie, the other the Swan, hauing in them ſome fiftie or ſixtie men ſent ouer at his owne charge to plant for him. Theſe we receiued into our Towne, affording them what ſoeuer curteſie our meane condition could afford. There the Charitie, being the bigger Ship, left them, hauing many paſſengers which ſhe was to land in Virginia. In the meane time, the body of them refreſhed themſelues at Plimoth, whileſt ſome moſt fit ſought out a place for them. That little ſtore of Corne we had, was exceedingly waſted by the vniuſt and diſhoneſt walking of theſe ſtrangers, who though they would ſometimes ſeeme to helpe vs in our labour about our Corne, yet ſpared not day and night to ſteale the ſame, it being then eatable, and pleaſant to taſte, though green and vnprofitable. And though they receiued much kindneſſe, ſet light both by it and vs. At length their Coaſters returned, hauing found in their iudgement a place fit for plantation, within the Bay of the Massachusets, at a place called by the Indians Wichaguscusset. To which place the body of them went with all conuenient speede, leauing still with vs such as were sicke and lame, by the Gouernours permission, though on their parts vndeserued; whom our Surgeon by the helpe of God recouered gratis for them, and they fetched home, as occasion serued. They had not beene long from vs, ere the Indians filled our eares with clamours against them, for stealing their Corne, and other abuses conceiued by them. At which we grieued the more, because the same men, in mine owne hearing, had beene earnest in perswading Captaine Standish, before their comming to solicite our Gouernour to send some of his men to plant by them, alledging many reasons how it might be commodious for vs. But wee knew no meanes to redresse those abuses, saue reproofe, and aduising them to better walking, as occasion serued.

for

In the end of August came other two Ships into our harbour, the one (as I take it) was called the Discouerie, Captaine Iones hauing the command thereof, the other was that Ship of Master Westons, called the Sparrow, which had now made her Voyage of Fish, and was consorted with the other, being both bound for Virginia. Of Captaine Iones we furnished our selues of such prouisions as we most needed, and he could best spare, who as he vsed vs kindely, so made vs pay largely for the things we had. And had not the Almighty, in his All-ordering Prouidence, directed him to vs, it would haue gone worse with vs, then euer it had beene, or after was: for, as we had now but small store of Corne for the yeere following: so for want of supply, we were worne out of all manner of trucking-stuffe, not hauing any meanes left to helpe our selues by trade; but through Gods good mercy towards vs, hee had wherewith, and did supply our wants on that kinde competently.

Two Ships.

Helpe from Master Iones.

In the end of September, or beginning of October, Master Westons biggest Ship called the Charitie, returned for England, and left their Colony sufficiently victualled, as some of most credit amongst them reported. The lesser, called the Swan, remained with his Colony for their further helpe. At which time they desired to ioyne in partnership with vs to trade for Corne; to which our Gouernour and his Assistant agreed vpon such equall conditions, as were drawne and confirmed betweene them and vs. The chiefe places aimed at were to the Southward of Cape Cod; and the more because Tisquantum, whose peace before this time was wrought with Massasowat, vndertooke to discouer vnto vs that supposed, and still hoped passage within the Sholes.

Both Colonies being thus agreed, our Gouernour in his owne person supplied the Captaines place, and in the month of Nouember set forth, hauing Tisquantum for his Interpreter and Pilot, who affirmed he had twice passed within the Sholes of Cape Cod, both with English and French. Neuertheless, they went so farre with him, as the Master of the Ship saw no hope of passage: but being (as he thought) in danger, bare vp, and according to Tisquantums directions, made for an harbour not farre from them, at a place called Manamoycke, which they found, and sounding it with their Shallop found the channell, though but narrow and crooked, where at at length they harboured the Ship. Here they perceiued that the Tide set in and out with more violence at some other place more Southerly, which they had not seene nor could discouer, by reason of the violence of the season all the time of their abode there. Some iudged the entrance thereof might be beyond the Sholes, but there is no certainty thereof as yet knowne. That night the Gouernour accompanied with others, hauing Tisquantum for his Interpreter went ashoare: At first the Inhabitants plaied least in sight, because none of our people had euer beene there before; but vnderstanding the ends of their comming, at length came to them, welcomming our Gouernour according to their Sauage manner, refreshing them very well with store of Venison and other victuals which they brought them in great abundance, promising to trade with them, with a seeming gladnesse of the occasion: yet their ioy was mixed with much iealousie, as appeared by their after practises: for at first they were loath their dwellings should be knowne, but when they saw our Gouernours resolution to stay on the shoare all night, they brought him to their houses, hauing first conuaied all their stuffe to a remote place, not farre from the same, which one of our men walking forth occasionally, espied; whereupon, on the sudden, neither it nor they could be found, and so many times after vpon conceiued occasions, they would be all gone, bag and baggage. But being afterwards (by Tisquantums meanes) better perswaded, they left their iealousie and traded with them; where they got eight hogsheads of Corne and Beanes, though the people were but few. This gaue our Gouernour and the Company good encouragement. Tisquantum being still confident in the passage, and the Inhabitants affirming, they had seene Ships of good burthen passe within the Sholes aforesaid. But here, though they had determined to make a second assay, yet God had otherwaies disposed, who strucke Tisquantum with sickneſse, in so much as he there died, which crossed their Southward trading, and the more, because the Masters sufficiency was much doubted, and the season very tempestuous, and not fit to goe vpon discouery, hauing no guide to direct them.

From thence they departed, and the winde being faire for the Massachusets, went thither, and the rather because the Sauages vpon our motion had planted much Corne for vs, which they promi-promiſed not long before that time. When they came thither, they found a great ſickneſſe to be A Plague. amongſt the Indians, not vnlike the Plague, if not the ſame. They renued their complaints to our Gouernour, againſt that other Plantation ſeated by them, for their iniurious walking. But Note. indeede the trade both for Furres and Corne was ouerthrowne in that place, they giuing as much for a quart of Corne, as we vſed to doe for a Beauers skin; ſo that little good could be there done. From thence they returned into the bottome of the Bay of Cape Cod, to a place called Nauſet, where the Sachim vſed the Gouernour very kindely, and where they bought eight or ten hogſheads of Corne and Beanes. Alſo at a place called Mattachieſt, where they had like kinde entertainment and Corne alſo. During the time of their trade in theſe places, there were ſo great and violent ſtormes, as the Ship was much endangered, and our Shallop caſt away, ſo that they had now no meanes to carry the Corne aboard that they had bought, the Ship riding by their report well neere two leagues from the ſame, her owne Boate being ſmall, and ſo leake (hauing no Carpenter with them) as they durſt ſcarce fetch wood or water in her. Hereupon the Gouernour cauſed the Corne to be made in a round ſtacke, and bought Mats, and cut Sedge to couer it, and gaue charge to the Indians not to meddle with it, promiſing him that dwelt next to it a reward, if he would keepe vermine alſo from it, which he vndertooke, and the Sachim promiſed to make good. In the meane time, according to the Gouernors requeſt, the Sachim ſent men to ſeek Honeſt Sauages. the Shallop, which they found buried almoſt in ſand at a high-water marke, hauing many things remaining in her, but vnſeruiceable for the preſent; whereof the Gouernour gaue the Sachim ſpeciall charge that it ſhould not be further broken. And hauing procured a Guide, it being no leſſe then fiftie miles to our Plantation, ſet forward, receiuing all reſpect that could be from the Indians in his iourney, and came ſafely home, though weary and ſurbated, whether ſome three dayes after the Ship alſo came. The Corne being diuided which they had got, Maſter Weſtons Company went to their owne Plantation, it being further agreed, that they ſhould returne with all conuenient ſpeede, and bring their Carpenter, that they might fetch the reſt of the Corne, and ſaue their Shallop.

Digitized by Google

At their returne Captaine Standiſh being recouered and in health, tooke another Shallop, and went with them to the Corne, which they found in ſafety as they left it: alſo they mended the other Shallop, and got all their Corne aboard the Ship. This was in Ianuary, as I take it, it being very cold and ſtormy, inſomuch as (the harbour being none of the beſt) they were conſtrained to cut both the Shallops from the Ships ſterne, and ſo loſt them both a ſecond time. Bnt the ſtorme being ouer, and ſeeking out, they found them both, not hauing receiued any great hurt. Whileſt they were at Nauſet, hauing occaſion to lye on the ſhoare, laying their Shallop in a Creeke not farre from them, an Indian came into the ſame, and ſtole certaine Beads, Ciſſers, and other trifles out of the ſame, which when the Captaine miſſed, he tooke certaine of his company with him, and went to the Sachim, telling him what had hapned, and requiring the ſame againe, or the party that ſtole them (who was knowne to certaine of the Indians) or elſe he would reuenge it on them before his departure, and ſo tooke leaue for that night being late, refuſing whatſoeuer kindneſſe they offered. On the morrow, the Sachim came to their randeuow, accompanied with many men, in a ſtately manner, who ſaluting the Captaine in this wiſe; He thruſt out his tongue, that one might ſee the roote thereof, and therewith licked his hand from the wriſt to the fingers end, withall bowing the knee, ſtriuing to imitate the Engliſh geſture, being inſtructed therein formerly by Tiſquantum: his men did the like, but in ſo rude and Sauage a manner, as our men could ſcarce forbeare to breake out in open laughter. After ſalutation, he deliuered the Beads, and other things to the Captaine, ſaying, he had much beaten the party for doing it, cauſing the women to make Bread, and bring them, according to their deſire, ſeeming to be very ſorry for the fact, but glad to be reconciled. So they departed, and came home in ſafety; where the Corne was equally diuided, as before.

Namaſket. Manomet. After this, the Gouernour went to two other inland Townes, with another Company, and bought Corne likewiſe of them, the one is called Namaſket, the other Manomet. That from Namaſket was brought home partly by Indian women; but a great ſickneſſe ariſing amongſt them, our owne men were inforced to fetch home the reſt. That at Manomet the Gouernour left in the Sachims cuſtody: this Towne lieth from vs South well neere twenty miles, and ſtands vpon a freſh Riuer, which runneth into the Bay of Nanobigganſet, and cannot be leſſe then ſixty miles from thence. It will beare a Boat of eight or ten tun to this place. Hither the Dutch, or French, or both vſe to come. It is from hence to the Bay of Cape Cod about eight miles; out of which Bay it floweth into a Creeke ſome ſix miles almoſt direct towards the Towne. The heads of the Riuer, and this Creeke, are not farre diſtant. This Riuer yeeldeth thus high, Oyſters, Muſcles, Clams, and other Shel-fiſh, one in ſhape like a Beane, another like a Clam, both good meate, and great abundance at all times; beſides it aboundeth with diuers ſorts of freſh fiſh in their ſeaſons. The Gouernour or Sachim of this place, was called Canacum, who had formerly, as well as many others (yea all with whom as yet we had to doe) acknowledged themſelues the Subiects of our Soueraigne Lord the King. This Sachim vſed the Gouernour very kindely, and it ſeemed was of good reſpect and authority amongſt the Indians. For whileſt the Gouernour was there within night in bitter weater, came two men from Mamamoick, before spoken of, and hauing set aside their Bowes and Quiuers, according to their manner, sat down by the fire, and tooke a pipe of Tobacco, not vsing any words in that time, nor any other to them, but all remained silent, expecting when they would speake: At length they looked toward Canacum, and one of them made a short speech, and deliuered a present to him from his Sachim, which was a basket of Tobacco, and many Beades, which the other receiued thankfully. After which, he made a long speech to him, the contents hereof was related to vs by Hobbamock (who then accompanied the Gouernour for his Guide) to be as followeth; It hapned that two of their men fell out as they were in game (for they vse gaming as much as any where, and will play away all, euen their skin from their backs, yea and for their wiues skins also, though it may be they are many miles distant from them, as my selfe haue seene) and growing to great heat, the one killed the other. The actor of this fact was a Pawaw, one of speciall note amongst them, and such an one as they could not well misse, yet another people greater then themselues threatned them with warre, if they would not put him to death. The partie offending was in hold, neither would their Sachim doe one way or other till their returne, resting vpon him for aduice and furtherance in so weightie a matter. After this there was silence a short time; at length men gaue their iudgement what they thought best. Amongst others, he asked Hobbamock what he thought? Who answered, he was but a stranger to them, but thought it was better that one should die then many, since he had deserued it, and the rest were innocent; whereupon he passed the sentence of death vpon him. Sauages great gamsters.

night

Not long after (hauing no great quantitie of Corne left) Captaine Standish went againe with a Shallop to Matachiest, meeting also with the like extremitie of weather, both of winde, Snow, and Frost, insomuch as they were frozen in the harbour the first night they entred the same. Here they pretended their wonted loue, and spared them a good quantitie of Corne to confirme the same: Strangers also came to this place, pretending onely to see him and his Companie, whom they neuer saw before that time; but intending to ioyne with the rest to kill them, as after appeared. But being forced through extremitie to lodge in their houses, which they much pressed, God possessed the heart of the Captaine with iust iealousie, giuing strait command, that as one part of his Companie slept, the rest should wake, declaring some things to them which he vnderstood, whereof he could make no good construction. Some of the Indians spying a fit opportunitie, stole some Beades also from him, which he no sooner perceiued, hauing not aboue six men with him, drew them all from the Boat, and set them on their guard about the Sachims house, where the most of the people were, threatning to fall vpon them without further delay, if they would not forthwith restore them, signifying to the Sachim especially, and so to them all, that as he would not offer the least iniurie, so he would not receiue any at their hands, which should escape without punishment or due satisfaction. Hereupon the Sachim bestirred him to finde out the partie, which when he had done, caused him to returne them againe to the Shallop, and came to the Captaine, desiring him to search whether they were not about the Boat, who suspecting their knauerie, sent one, who found them lying openly vpon the Boats cuddy; yet to appease his anger, they brought Corne afresh to trade, insomuch as he laded his Shallop, and so departed. This accident so daunted their courage, as they durst not attempt any thing against him. So that through the good mercy and prouidence of God they returned in safetie. At this place the Indians get abundance of Basse both Summer and Winter, for it being now February they abounded with them. Iust iealousie. Base Summer and Winter.

In the beginning of March, hauing refreshed himselfe, he tooke a Shallop, and went to Manomet, to fetch home that which the Gouernour had formerly bought, hoping also to get more from them, but was deceiued in his expectation, not finding that entertainment he found elsewhere, and the Gouernour had there receiued. The reason whereof, and of the trecherie intended in the place before spoken of, was not then knowne vnto vs, but afterwards; wherein may be obserued the abundant mercies of God working with his prouidence for our good. Captaine Standish being now farre from the Boat, and not aboue two or three of our men with him, and as many with the Shallop, was not long at Canacum the Sachims house, but in came two of the Massachusets men, the chiefe of them was called Wituwamat, a notable insulting villaine, one who had formerly imbrued his hands in the bloud of English and French, and had oft boasted of his owne valour, and derided their weakneſſe, especially because (as he said) they died crying, making sowre faces, more like children then men. This villaine tooke a dagger from about his necke (which hee had gotten of Master Westons people) and presented it to the Sachim, and after made a long speech in an audacious manner, framing it in such sort, as the Captaine (though he be the best Linguist amongst vs) could not gather any thing from it. The end of it was afterward discouered to be as followeth: The Massachusenewkes formerly concluded to ruinate Master Westons Colonie, and thought themselues, being about thirty or forty men strong, enough to execute the same: yet they durst not attempt it, till such time as they had gathered more strength to themselues to make their partie good against vs at Plimoth, concluding, that if wee remained (though they had no other Arguments to vse against vs) yet wee would neuer leaue the death of our Countrimen vnreuenged, and therefore their ſafetie could not be without the ouerthrow of both Plantations. To this end they had formerly ſolicited this Sachim, as alſo the other called Ianough at Mattachieſt, and many others to aſſiſt them, and now againe came to proſecute the ſame; and ſince there was ſo faire an opportunitie offered by the Captaines preſence, they thought beſt to make ſure him and his Company. After this meſſage was deliuered, his entertainment much exceeded the Captaines, inſomuch as hee ſcorned at their behauiour, and told them of it: after which, they would haue perſwaded him, becauſe the weather was cold, to haue ſent to the Boate for the reſt of his Company, but he would not, deſiring according to promiſe, that the Corne might be carried downe, and he would content the women for their labour, which they did. At the ſame time there was a luſty Indian of Paomet or Cape Cod then preſent, who had euer demeaned himſelfe well towards vs, being in his generall carriage very affable, courteous, and louing, eſpecially towards the Captaine. This Sauage was now entred into confederacie with the reſt, yet to auoide ſuſpition, made many ſignes of his continued affections, and would needes beſtow a Kettle of ſome ſix or ſeuen gallons on him, and would not accept of any thing in lieu thereof, ſaying, he was rich, and could afford to beſtow ſuch fauours on his friends whom he loued: alſo hee would freely helpe to carry ſome of the Corne, affirming he had neuer done the like in his life before, and the winde being bad would needes lodge with him at their Randeuow, hauing indeede vndertaken to kill him before they parted, which done they intended to fall vpon the reſt. The night proued exceeding cold, inſomuch as the Captaine could not take any reſt, but either walked or turned himſelfe to and fro at the fire: This the other obſerued, and asked wherefore he did not ſleepe as at other times, who anſwered he knew not well, but had no deſire at all to reſt. So that he then miſt his opportunity. The winde ſeruing on the next day, they returned home, accompanied with the other Indian, who vſed many arguments to perſwade them to go to Paomet, where himſelf had much Corne, and many other, the moſt wherof he would procure for vs, ſeeming to ſorrow for our wants. Once the Captaine put forth with him, and was forced backe by contrary winde; which winde ſerued for the Maſſachuſet, was fitted to goe thither. But on a ſudden it altered againe.

Dutch Ship. During the time that the Captaine was at Manomet, newes came to Plimoth that Maſſaſſowat was like to die, and that at the ſame time there was a Dutch Ship driuen ſo high on the ſhoare by ſtreſſe of weather, right before his dwelling, that till the tides encreaſed, ſhe could not be got off. Now it being a commendable manner of the Indians, when any (eſpecially of note) are dangerouſly ſicke, for all that profeſſe friendſhip to them, to viſit them in their extremity, either in their perſons, or elſe to ſend ſome acceptable perſons to them, therefore it was thought meete (being a good and warrantable action) that as we had euer profeſſed friendſhip, ſo we ſhould now maintaine the ſame, by obſeruing this their laudable cuſtome: and the rather, becauſe we deſired to haue ſome conference with the Dutch, not knowing when we ſhould haue ſo fit an opportunity. To that end my ſelfe hauing formerly beene there, and vnderſtanding in ſome meaſure the Dutch tongue, the Gouernour againe laid this ſeruice vpon my ſelfe, and fitted me with ſome cordials to adminiſter to him, hauing one Maſter Iohn Hamden a Gentleman of London (who then wintered with vs, and deſired much to ſee the Country) for my Conſort, and Hobbamocke for our guide. So we ſet forward, and lodged the firſt night at Namaſket, where we had friendly entertainment.

Viſitations of the ſicke.

Reports of Maſſaſſowats death. The next day about one of the clock, we came to a ferrie in Combatants Country, where vpon diſcharge of my Peece, diuers Indians came to vs from a houſe not far off. There they told vs, that Maſſaſſowat was dead, and that day buried, and that the Dutch would be gone before we could get thither, hauing houe off their Ship already. This newes ſtrucke vs blanke; but eſpecially Hobbamocke, who deſired we might returne with all ſpeede. I told him I would firſt thinke of it, conſidering now that he being dead, Combatant was the moſt like to ſucceede him, and that we were not aboue three miles from Mattapuyſt his dwelling place, although he were but a hollow-hearted friend towards vs, I thought no time ſo fit as this, to enter into more friendly tearmes with him, and the reſt of the Sachims thereabout, hoping (through the bleſſing of God) it would be a meanes in that vnſetled ſtate, to ſettle their affections towards vs, and though it were ſomewhat dangerous, in reſpect of our perſonall ſafety, becauſe my ſelfe and Hobbamocke had beene imployed vpon a ſeruice againſt him, which he might now fitly reuenge; yet eſteeming it the beſt meanes, leauing the euent to God in his mercy, I reſolued to put it in practiſe, if Maſter Hamden and Hobbamock durſt attempt it with me, whom I found willing to that or any other courſe might tend to the generall good. So we went towards Mattapuyſt. In the way, Hobbamocke manifeſting a troubled ſpirit, brake forth into theſe ſpeeches, Neen womaſu Sagimus, neen womaſu Sagimus, &c. My louing Sachim, my louing Sachim. Many haue I knowne, but neuer any like thee: And turning him to me ſaid; Whileſt I liued, I ſhould neuer ſee his like amongſt the Indians, ſaying, he was no lyer, he was not bloudy and cruell like other Indians; In anger and paſſion he was ſoone reclaimed, eaſie to be reconciled towards ſuch as had offended him, ruled by reaſon in ſuch meaſure, as he would not ſcorne the aduice of meane men, and that he gouerned his men better with few ſtroakes then others did with many; truely louing where he loued; yea, he feared we had not a faith

His commendation.

a faithfull friend left among the Indians, ſhewing how he oft-times reſtrained their malice, &c. continuing a long ſpeech with ſuch ſignes of lamentation and vnfeined ſorrow, as it would haue made the hardeſt heart relent.

At length we came to Matapuyſt, and went to the Sachims Comaco (for ſo they called the Sachims place, though they call an ordinary houſe Witeo) but Combatant the Sachim was not at home, but at Puckanokick, which was ſome fiue or ſix miles off; the Squa-ſachim (for ſo they call Sachims wife) gaue vs friendly entertainment. Here we enquired againe concerning Maſſaſſowat; they thought him dead, but knew no certainty; wherupon I hired one to goe with all expedition to Puckanokick, that we might know the certainty thereof, and withall to acquaint Combatant with our there being. About halfe an houre before Sun-ſetting, the meſſenger returned, and told vs that he was not yet dead, though there was no hope we ſhould finde him liuing. Vpon this we were much reuiued, and ſet forward with all ſpeede, though it was late within night ere we got thither. About two of the clock that afternoone the Dutchmen departed, ſo that in that reſpect our iournie was fruſtrate. When we came thither, we found the houſe ſo full of men, as we could ſcarce get in, though they vſed their beſt diligence to make way for vs. There were they in the middeſt of their charmes for him, making ſuch a helliſh noiſe, as it diſtempered vs that were well, and therefore vnlike to eaſe him that was ſicke. About him were ſix or eight women, who chafed his armes, legs, and thighes, to keep heat in him: when they had made an end of their charming, one told him that his friends the Engliſh were come to ſee him (hauing vnderſtanding left, but his ſight was wholly gone) he asked who was come, they told him Winſnow (for they cannot pronounce the letter l, but ordinarily n in the place thereof) he deſired to ſpeake with me: when I came to him, & they told him of it, he put forth his hand to me, which I took; then he ſaid twice, though very inwardly, keen Winſnow, which is to ſay, art thou Winſlow? I anſwered, ahhe, that is, yes; then he doubled theſe words, Matta neen wonckanet namen Winſnow; that is to ſay, O Winſlow I ſhall neuer ſee thee againe. Then I called Hobbamock, and deſired him to tell Maſſaſſowat, that the Gouernor hearing of his ſicknes, was ſorry for the ſame, & though by reaſon of many buſineſſes he could not come himſelfe, yet he ſent me with ſuch things for him as he thought moſt likely, to doe him good in this extremity, and whereof if he pleaſed to take, I would preſently giue him; which he deſired, and hauing a confection of many comfortable Conſerues, on the point of my Knife I gaue him ſome, which I could ſcarce get thorow his teeth; when it was diſſolued in his mouth, he ſwallowed the iuice of it, whereat thoſe that were about him much reioyced, ſaying, he had not ſwallowed any thing in two daies before. Then I deſired to ſee his mouth, which was exceedingly furred, and his tongue ſwelled in ſuch manner, as it was not poſſible for him to eat ſuch meat as they had, his paſſage being ſtopt vp. Then I waſhed his mouth, and ſcraped his tongue, & got abundance of corruption out of the ſame. After which, I gaue him more of the confection, which he ſwallowed with more readines; then he deſired to drinke, I diſſolued ſome of it in water, and gaue him thereof: within halfe an houre this wrought a great alteration in him in the eies of all that beheld him; preſently after his ſight began to come to him. In the meane time I inquired how he ſlept, and when he went to ſtoole? They ſaid he ſlept not in two daies before, & had not had a ſtoole in fiue; then I gaue him more, and told him of a miſhap we had by the way in breaking a bottle of drink, which the Gouernour alſo ſent him, ſaying, if he would ſend any of his men to Patuxet, I would ſend for more of the ſame, alſo for Chickens to make him broth, & for other things which I knew were good for him, and would ſtay the returne of the Meſſenger, if he deſired. This he tooke maruellous kindly, and appointed ſome, who were ready to go by two of the clock in the morning, againſt which time I made ready a Letter, declaring therein our good ſucceſſe, the ſtate of his body &c. deſiring to ſend ſuch things as I ſent for, and ſuch phyſicke as the Surgion durſt adminiſter to him. He requeſted me that the day following, I would take my Peece, and kill him ſome Fowle, and make him ſome Engliſh pottage, ſuch as he had eaten at Plimoth, which I promiſed: after his ſtomacke comming to him, I muſt needes make him ſome without Fowle, before I went abroad, which ſomewhat troubled me; but being I muſt doe ſomewhat, I cauſed a woman to bruiſe ſome Corne, and take the flower from it, and ſet ouer the grut or broken Corne in a Pipkin (for they haue earthen Pots of all ſizes.) When the day broke, we went out (it being now March) to ſeeke hearbes, but could not finde any but Strawberrie leaues, of which I gathered a handful & put into the ſame, and becauſe I had nothing to reliſh it, I went forth againe, and pulled vp a Saxafras root, and ſliced a peece thereof, and boiled it till it had a good reliſh, and then tooke it out againe. The broth being boiled, I ſtrained it thorow my handkerchiffe, and gaue him at leaſt a pinte, which he dranke, and liked it very well. After this, his ſight mended more and more, alſo he had three moderate ſtooles, and tooke ſome reſt: Inſomuch, as we with admiration bleſſed God for giuing his bleſſing to ſuch raw and ignorant meanes, making no doubt of his recouery, himſelfe and all of them acknowledging vs the inſtruments of his preſeruation. That morning he cauſed me to ſpend in going from one to another amongſt thoſe that were ſicke in the Town, requeſting me to waſh their mouthes alſo, and giue to each of them ſome of the ſame I gaue him, ſaying, they were good folke. This paines I tooke with willingneſſe, though it were much offenſiue to me, not being accuſtomed with ſuch poiſonous ſauours.

Miſerable comforters.

Digitized by Google

The Meſſengers were now returned, but finding his ſtomacke come to him, he would not haue the Chickens killed, but kept them for breede. Neither durſt we giue him any phyſicke which was then ſent, becauſe his body was ſo much altered ſince our inſtructions, neither ſaw we any neede, not doubting now of his recouery, if he were carefull. Many whileſt we were there came to ſee him, ſome by their report from a place not leſſe then an hundred miles. Vpon this his recouery, he brake forth into theſe ſpeeches; Now I ſee the Engliſh are my friends and loue me, and whileſt I liue I will neuer forget this kindeneſſe they haue ſhewed me. Whileſt wee were there, our entertainment exceeded all other ſtrangers. At our comming away, he called Hobbamocke to him, and priuately (none hearing ſaue two or three other of his Pueeſes, who are of his Counſell) reuealed the plot of the Maſſachenſeucks before ſpoken of, againſt Maſter Weſtons Colony, and ſo againſt vs, ſaying that the people of Nauſet, Paomet, Succonet Mattachieſt, Manomet Agowaywam, and the Ile of Capawack, were ioyned with them; himſelfe alſo in his ſickeneſſe was earneſtly ſollicited, but he would neither ioyne therein, nor giue way to any of his. Therefore as we reſpected the liues of our Countrimen, and our owne after-ſafety, he aduiſed vs to kill the men of Maſſachuſet, who were the authors of this intended miſchiefe. And whereas we were wont to ſay, we would not ſtrike a ſtroke till they firſt began; if ſaid he vpon this intelligence, they make that anſwer, tell them, when their Countrimen at Wichaguſcuſſet are killed, they being not able to defend themſelues, that then it will be too late to recouer their liues, nay through the multitude of aduerſaries they ſhall with great difficultie preſerue their own, & therefore he counſelled without delay to take away the principals, and then the plot would ceaſe. With this hee charged him thorowly to acquaint me by the way, that I might informe the Gouernour thereof at my firſt comming home. Being fitted for our returne, we tooke our leaue of him, who returned many thankes to our Gouernour, and alſo to our ſelues for our labour and loue: the like did all that were about him. So we departed.

He reuealeth the trechery of the Maſſachuſets.

That night, thorow the earneſt requeſt of Combatant, who till now remained at Sawams or Puckanukick, we lodged with him at Mattapuyſt. By the way I had much conference with him, ſo likewiſe at his houſe, he being a notable politician, yet full of merry ieſts and ſquibs, and neuer better pleaſed then when the like are returned againe vpon him. Amongſt other things he asked me, If in caſe he were thus dangerouſly ſicke, as Maſſaſſowat had beene, and ſhould ſend word thereof to Patuxet for Maskiet, that is, Phyſicke, whether then Maſter Gouernour would ſend it? and if he would, whether I would come therewith to him? To both which I anſwered yea; whereat he gaue me many ioyfull thankes. After that, being at his houſe, he demanded further, how we durſt being but two come ſo farre into the Country? I anſwered, where was true loue there was no feare, and my heart was ſo vpright towards them, that for mine owne part I was feareleſſe to come amongſt them. But, ſaid he, if your loue be ſuch, and it bring forth ſuch fruits, how commeth it to paſſe, that when we come to Patuxet, you ſtand vpon your guard, with the mouthes of your Peeces preſented towards vs? Whereupon I anſwered, it was the moſt honorable and reſpectiue entertainment we could giue them; it being an order amongſt vs ſo to receiue our beſt reſpected friends: and as it was vſed on the Land, ſo the Ships obſerued it alſo at Sea, which Hobbamock knew, and had ſeene obſerued. But ſhaking the head, he anſwered, that he liked not ſuch ſalutations.

Further, obſeruing vs to craue a bleſſing on our meate before we did eate, and after to giue thankes for the ſame, he asked vs what was the meaning of that ordinary cuſtome? Hereupon I tooke occaſion to tell them of Gods workes of Creation, and Preſeruation, of the Lawes and Ordinances, eſpecially of the ten Commandements, all which they hearkned vnto with great attention, and liked well of; onely the ſeuenth Commandement they excepted againſt, thinking there were many inconueniences in it, that a man ſhould be tied to one woman: about which we reaſoned a good time. Alſo I told them, that whatſoeuer good things we had, we receiued from God, as the Author and giuer thereof, and therefore craued his bleſſing vpon that we had, and were about to eate, that it might nouriſh and ſtrengthen our bodies, and hauing eaten ſufficient, being ſatisfied therewith, we againe returned thankes to the ſame our God for that our refreſhing, &c. This all of them concluded to be very well, and ſaid, they beleeued almoſt all the ſame things, and that the ſame power that we called God, they called Kietſtan. Much profitable conference was occaſioned hereby, which would be too tedious to relate, yet was no leſſe delightfull to them, then comfortable to vs. Here we remained onely that night, but neuer had better entertainment amongſt any of them.

Their name of God.

The day following, in our iourney, Hobbamocke told me of the priuate conference he had with Maſſaſſowat, and how he charged him perfectly to acquaint me therewith (as I ſhewed before) which hauing done, he vſed many arguments himſelfe to moue vs thereunto: That night we lodged at Namaſket, and the day following about the mid-way betweene it and home, we met two Indians, who told vs that Captaine Standiſh was that day gone to the Maſſachuſets: but contrary windes againe draue him backe, ſo that we found him at home; where the Indian of Paomet ſtill was, being very importunate that the Captaine ſhould take the firſt opportunitie of a faire winde to goe with him, but their ſecret and villanous purpoſes being through Gods mercy now

Digitized by Google

now made knowne, the Gouernour caused Captaine Standish to send him away without any distaste or manifestation of anger, that we might the better effect and bring to passe that which should be thought most necessary.

Before this iourney we heard many complaints both by the Indians and some others of best desert amongst Master Westons Colony, how exceedingly their Company abased themselues by vndirect meanes, to get victuals from the Indians, who dwelt not farre from them, fetching them wood & water, &c. and all for a meales meate, whereas in the meane time, they might with diligence haue gotten enough to haue serued them three or foure times. Other by night brake the earth, and robbed the Indians store, for which they had beene publiquely stocked and whipt, and yet was there small amendment. This was about the end of February, at which time they had spent all their Bread and Corne, not leauing any for Seede, neither would the Indians lend or sell them any more vpon any tearmes. Hereupon they had thought to take it by violence, and to that spiked vp euery entrance into their Towne (being well impaled) saue one, with a full resolution to proceede. But some more honestly minded, aduised Iohn Sanders their Ouer-seer first to write to Plimoth, and if the Gouernor aduised him thereunto, he might the better doe it. They sent, and our Gouernour writ diuers reasons of dislike. With these Letters wee dispatched the Messenger; Vpon the receipt whereof they altered their determination, resoluing to shift as they could, till the returne of Iohn Sanders from Munbiggen, who first comming to Plimoth, notwithstanding our owne necessities, the Gouernour spared him some Corne to carrie them to Munbiggen. But not hauing sufficient for the Ships store, he tooke a Shallop, and leauing others with instructions to ouer-see things till his returne, set forward about the end of February, so that he knew not of this conspiracie of the Indians before his going, neither was it knowne to any of vs till our returne from Sawaams or Paskunkick: as which time also another Sachim called Wassapinewat, brother to Obtakiest the Sachem of the Massachusets, who had formerly smarted for partaking with Conbatant, and fearing the like againe, to purge himselfe, reuealed the same thing.

The three and twentieth of March being now come, which is a yearely Court day, the Gouernour hauing a double testimony, and many circumstances agreeing with the truth thereof, not being to vndertake warre without the consent of the body of the Company; made knowne the same in publique Court. We came to this conclusion, That Captaine Standish should take so many men as he thought sufficient to make his party good against all the Indians in the Massachusets Bay; & because (as all men know that haue had to doe in that kinde) it is impossible to deale with them vpon open defiance, but to take them in such traps as they lay for others; therfore he should pretend trade as at other times: but first goe to the English, & acquaint them with the plot, & the end of his owne comming, that comparing it with their carriages towards them, he might better iudge of the certainty of it, and more fitly take opportunity to reuenge the same: but should forbeare if it were possible till such time as he could make sure Witiwamat, that bloudy & bold villain before spoken of, whose head he had order to bring with him, that hee might be a warning and terrour to all that disposition. Vpon this, Captaine Standish made choice of eight men, and would not take more because he would preuent iealousie, knowing their guilty consciences would soone be prouoked thereunto: but on the next day before he could goe, came one of Master Westons Company by land vnto vs, with his packe at his backe, who made a pittifull narration of their lamentable and weake estate, and of the Indians carriages, whose boldnesse increased abundantly, insomuch as the victuals they got, they would take it out of their Pots and eate before their faces, yea if in any thing they gaine-said them, they were ready to hold a Knife at their breasts; that to giue them content, since Iohn Sanders went to Munbiggen, they had hanged one of them that stole their Corne, and yet they regarded it not: that another of their Company was turned Sauage, that their people had most forsaken the Towne, and made their randeuous where they got their victuals, because they would not take paines to bring it home: that they had sold their cloathes for Corne, and were ready to starue both with cold and hunger also, because they could not indure to get victuals by reason of their nakednesse: and that they were dispersed into three Companies, scarce hauing any Powder and Shot left. As this Relation was grieuous to vs, so it gaue vs good encouragement to proceede in our intendments, for which Captaine Standish was now fitted, and the winde comming faire, the next day set forth for the Massachusets.

Indians insolence.

The Indians at the Massachusets missed this man, and suspecting his comming to vs, as wee conceiue, sent one after him, and gaue out there that he would neuer come to Patuxet, but that some Wolues or Beares would eate him: but we know not by our owne experience, and the report of others, that though they finde a man sleeping, yet so soone as there is life discerned, they feare and shun him. This Indian missed him but very little, and missing him passed by the towne and went to Manomet, whom we hoped to take at his returne, as afterward we did. Now was our Fort made fit for seruice and some Ordnance mounted; and though it may seeme long worke it being ten moneths since it begun, yet we must note, that where so great a worke is begun with such small meanes, a little time cannot bring to perfection: beside those workes which tend to the preseruation of man, the enemy of mankinde will hinder what in him lieth, sometimes blinding the iudgement, and causing reasonable men to reason against their own safety. The Indian last mentioned in his returne from Monomet, came through the Towne, pretending still friendship and in loue to see vs, but as formerly others, so his end was to see whether wee continued still in health and strength, or fell into weakenesse like their neighbours, which they hoped and looked for (though God in mercy prouided better for vs) and hee knew would be glad tydings to his Countrie men. But here the Gouernour staid him, and sending for him to the Fort, there gaue the Guard charge of him as their prisoner, where he told him hee must be contented to remaine till the return of Captain Standish from the Massachusets, so he was locked in a chaine to a staple in the Court of guard, and there kept. Thus was our Fort hanselled, this being the first day as I take it, that euer any watch was there kept.

Digitized by Google

The Captaine being now come to the Massachusets, went first to the Ship, but found neither man, or so much as a Dogge therein: vpon the discharge of a Musket the Master and some others of the Plantation shewed themselues, who were on the shore gathering ground-nuts, and getting other foode. After salutation, Captaine Standish asked them how they durst so leaue the Ship, and liue in such security, who answered like men senselesse of their owne misery, they feared not the Indians but liued and suffered them to lodge with them, not hauing Sword or Gunne, or needing the same. To which the Captaine answered, if there were no cause he was the gladder, but vpon further inquiry, vnderstanding that those in whom Iohn Sanders had reposed most speciall confidence and left in his stead to gouerne the rest, were at the Plantation: thither he went, and to be briefe, made knowne the Indians purpose, and the end of his owne comming, as also (which formerly I omitted) that if afterward they durst not there stay, it was the intendment of the Gouernours and people of Plimouth there to receiue them till they could be better prouided: but if they conceiued of any other course that might be more likely for their good, that himselfe should further them therein to the vttermost of his power. These men comparing other circumstances with that they now heard, answered, they could expect no better, and it was Gods mercy that they were not killed before his comming, desiring therefore that he would neglect no opportunity to proceede: Hereupon he aduised them to secrecy, yet withall to send speciall command to one third of their Company that were farthest off to come home, and there enioyne them on paine of death to keepe the Towne, himselfe allowing them a pint of Indian Corne to a man for a day (though that store he had was spared out of our Seede.) The weather prouing very wet and stormy, it was the longer before he could doe any thing.

In the meane time an Indian came to him and brought some Furres, but rather to gather what he could from the Captaines, then comming then for trade; and though the Captaine carried things as smoothly as possibly he could, yet at his returne he reported he saw by his eyes that he was angry in his heart, and therefore began to suspect themselues discouered. This caused one Peckſuot who was a Pinese, being a man of a notable spirit to come to Hobbamock who was then with them, and told him hee vnderstood that the Captaine was come to kill himselfe and the rest of the Sauages there; tell him, said he, we know it, but feare him not, neither will we shun him; but let him begin when he dare, he shall not take vs at vnawares: many times after, diuers of them seuerally, or few together, came to the Plantation to him, where they would whet and sharpen the point of their Knives before his face, and vse many other insulting gestures and speeches. Amongst the rest, Wituwamat bragged of the excellency of his Knife, on the end of the handle there was pictured a womans face, but said hee, I haue another at home wherewith I haue killed both French and English, and that hath a mans face on it, and by and by these two must marry: Further he said of that Knife he there had; Hiwusim namen, hiwusim michen, mattacus: that is to say, By and by it should see, and by and by it should eate, but not speake. Also Peckſuot being a man of greater stature then the Captaine, told him, though he were a great Captaine, yet he was but a little man: and said he, though I be no Sachim, yet I am a man of great strength and courage. These things the Captaine obserued, yet bare with patience for the present. On the next day, seeing he could not get many of them together at once, and this Peckſuot and Wituwamat both together, with another man, and a youth of some eighteene yeares of age, which was brother to Wituwamat, and villaine-like trode in his steps, daily putting many tricks vpon the weaker sort of men, and hauing about as many of his owne Company in a roome with them, gaue the word to his men, and the doore being fast shut, began himselfe with Peckſuot, and snatching his owne Knife from his necke, though with much struggling, killed him therewith, the point whereof he had made as sharpe as a needle, and ground the backe also to an edge: Wituwamat and the other man, the rest killed, and tooke the youth, whom the Captaine caused to be hanged; but it is incredible how many wounds these two Pursers receiued before they died, not making any fearefull noyse, but catching at their weapons and striuing to the last. Hobbamock stood by all this time as a spectator and medled not, obseruing how our men demeaned themselues in this action; all being here ended, smiling, he brake forth into these speeches to the Captaine; Yesterday Peckſuot bragging of his owne strength and stature, said, though you were a great Captaine, yet you were but a little man; but to day I see you are big enough to lay him on the ground. But to proceede, there being some women at the same time, Captaine Standish left them in the custody of Master Westons people at the Towne, and sent word to another Company that had intelligence of things to kill those Indian men that were amongst them, these killed two more: himselfe also with some of his owne men went to another place, where they killed another, and through the negligence of one man an Indian escaped, who discouered and crossed their proceedings.

Sauages slain.

on

Not long before this Execution, three of Master Westons men, which more regarded their bellies then any command or Commander, hauing formerly fared well with the Indians for making them Canoes, went againe to the Sachim to offer their seruice, and had entertainment. The first night they came thither within night late came a Messenger with all speede, and deliuered a sad and short message: Whereupon all the men gathered together, put on their Bootes and Breeches, trussed vp themselues, and tooke their Bowes and Arrowes and went forth, telling them they went a hunting, and that at their returne they should haue Venison enough. Being now gone, one being more ancient and wise then the rest, calling former things to minde, especially the Captaines presence, and the strait charge, that on paine of death none should goe a Musket shot from the Plantation; and comparing this sudden departure of theirs therewith, began to dislike and wish himselfe at home againe, which was further of then diuers other dwelt: Hereupon he moued his fellowes to returne, but could not perswade them: so there being none but women left, and the other that was turned Sauage, about midnight came away, forsaking the paths lest he should be pursued, and by this meanes saued his life. Sauage Englishmen.

Captaine Standish tooke the one halfe of his men, and one or two of Master Westons, and Hobbamock, still seeking to make spoyle of them and theirs. At length they espied a file of Indians which made towards them amayne, and there being a small aduantage in the ground by reason of a Hill neere them, both Companies strone for it. Captain Standish got it, whereupon they retreated and tooke each man his Tree, letting flie their Arrowes amayne, especially at himselfe and Hobbamocke, whereupon Hobbamocke cast off his coate, and being a knowne Pinese, (theirs being now killed) chased them so fast, as our people were not able to hold way with him, insomuch as our men could haue but one certaine marke, and then but the arme and halfe face of a notable villaine as hee drew at Captaine Standish, who together with another both discharged at him, and brake his arme; whereupon they fled into a swampe, when they were in the thicket they parlied, but to small purpose, getting nothing but foule language. So our Captain dared the Sachim to come out and fight like a man, shewing how base and womanlike hee was in courging it as he did: but he refused and fled. So the Captaine returned to the Plantation, where hee released the women and would not take their Beauer coates from them, nor suffer the least discourtesie to bee offered them. Now were Master Westons people resolued to leaue their Plantation and goe for Munbiggen, hoping to get passage and returne with the Fishing Ships. The Captaine told them, that for his owne part hee durst there liue with fewer men then they were, yet since they were otherwayes minded, according to his order from the Gouernours and people of Plimouth, hee would helpe them with Corne competent for their prouision by the way, which hee did, scarce leauing himselfe more then brought them home. Some of them disliked the choice of the bodie togoe to Munbiggen, and therefore desiring to goe with him to Plimouth, hee tooke them into the Shallop: and seeing them set sayle and cleere of the Massachusets Bay, he tooke leaue and returned to Plimouth, whither hee came in safetie (blessed be God) and brought the head of Witawamat with him.

Amongst the rest, there was an Indian youth that was euer of a courteous and louing disposition towards vs, hee notwithstanding the death of his Countrimen, came to the Captaine without feare, saying, His good conscience and loue towards vs imboldned him so to doe. This youth confessed that the Indians intended to kil Master Westons people, and not to delay any longer then till they had two more Canoes or Boats, which Master Westons men would haue finished by this time (hauing made them three already) had not the Captaine preuented them, and the end of stay for those Boats, was to take their Ship therewith.

Now was the Captaine returned and receiued with ioy, the head being brought to the Fort and there set vp, the Gouernours and Captaines with diuers others went vp the same further, to examine the prisoner, who looked pittiously on the head, being asked whether he knew it, he answered, yea: Then he confessed the plot, and that all the people prouoked Obtakiest their Sachim thereunto, being drawne to it by their importunitie. Fiue there were (he said) that prosecuted it with more eagernesse then the rest, the two principall were killed, being Pecksuot and Witawamat, whose head was there, the other three were Pawahs, being yet liuing, and knowne vnto vs, though one of them was wounded, as aforesaid. For himselfe hee would not acknowledge that hee had any hand therein, begging earnestly for his life, saying, Hee was not a Massachusets man, but as a stranger liued with them. Hobbamock also gaue a good report of him, and beseeched for him, but was bribed so to doe it. Neuerthelesse, that wee might shew mercy as well as extremitie, the Gouernour released him, and the rather because we desired he might carry a message to Obtakiest his Master. No sooner were the Irons from his legs, but he would haue beene gone, but the Gouernour bid him stay and feare not, for hee should receiue no hurt, and by Hobbamock commanded him to deliuer his message to his Master; That for our parts, it neuer entred into our hearts to take such a course with them, till their owne treachery enforced vs thereunto, and therefore they might thanke themselues for their owne ouerthrow, yet since hee had begun, if againe by any the like course hee did prouoke him, his Country should not hold him; for hee would neuer suffer him or his to rest in peace, till hee had vtterly consumed them, and therefore should take this as a warning. Further, that he should send to Patuxet the three Englishmen hee had and not kill them; also that hee should not spoile the Pale and Houses at Wichaguscusset, and that this Messenger should either bring the English, or an answer, or both, promising his safe returne.

the

This message was deliuered, and the partie would haue returned with answer, but was at first disswaded by them, whom afterward they would, but could not perswade to come to vs. At length (though long) a woman came and told vs that Obtakiest was sorry that the English were killed before he heard from the Gouernour, otherwise hee would haue sent them. Also shee said, hee would faine make his peace againe with vs, but none of his men durst come to treate about it, hauing forsaken his dwelling, and daily remoued from place to place, expecting when wee would take further vengeance on him.

Concerning those other people that intended to ioyne with the Massachusetts against vs, though we neuer went against any of them, yet this sudden and vnexpected execution, together with the iust iudgement of God vpon their guiltie consciences, hath so terrified and amazed them, as in like manner they forsooke their houses, running to and fro like men distracted, liuing in swamps and other desert places, and so brought manifold diseases amongst themselues, whereof very many are dead, as Canacum the Sachim of Manomet, Aspinet the Sachim of Nauset, and Iannough Sachim of Mattachuest. This Sachim in his life, in the middest of these distractions, said, The God of the English was offended with them, and would destroy them in his anger; and certainly it is strange to heare how many of late haue, and still daily dye amongst them, neither is there any likelihood it will easily cease, because through feare they set little or no Corne, which is the staffe of life, and without which they cannot long preserue health and strength. From one of these places a Boat was sent with Presents to the Gouernour, hoping thereby to worke their peace, but the Boat was cast away, and three of the persons drowned, not farre from our Plantation, onely one escaped, who durst not come to vs, but returned, so as none of them dare come amongst vs.

An. 1623. The moneth of April being now come, on all hands we began to prepare for Corne. And because there was no Corne left before this time, saue that was preserued for Seed, being also hopelesse of relieue by supply, we thought best to leaue off all other workes, and prosecute that as most necessarie. And because there was no small hope of doing good, in that common course of labour that formerly wee were in, for that the Gouernours that followed men to their labours, had nothing to giue men for their necessities, and therefore could not so well exercise that command ouer them therein as formerly they had done, especially considering that selfe-loue wherewith euery man (in a measure more or lesse) loueth and preferreth his owne good before his neighbours, and also the base disposition of some drones, that as at other times so now especially would bee most burdenous to the rest: It was therefore thought best that euery man should vse the best diligence he could for his owne preseruation, both in respect of the time present, and to prepare his owne Corne for the yeere following: and bring in a competent portion for the maintenance of publike Officers, Fishermen, &c. which could not bee freed from their calling without greater inconueniences. This course was to continue till haruest, and then the Gouernours to gather in the appointed portion, for the maintenance of themselues and such others as necessitie constrained to exempt from this condition.

In the middest of Aprill we began to set, the weather being then seasonable, which much incouraged vs, giuing vs good hopes of after plentie: the setting season is good till the latter end of May. But it pleased God for our further chastisement, to send a great drought, insomuch, as in six weekes after the later setting there scarce fell any raine, so that the stalke of that was first set, began to send forth the eare before it came to halfe growth, and that which was later, not like to yeeld any at all, both blade and stalke hanging the head, and changing the colour in such manner as we iudged it vtterly dead: our Beanes also ran not vp according to their wonted manner, but stood at a stay, many being parched away, as though they had beene scorched before the fire. Now were our hopes ouerthrowne, and we discouraged, our ioy being turned into mourning. To adde also to this sorrowfull estate in which we were, we heard of a supply that was sent vnto vs many moneths since, which hauing two repulses before, was a third time in company of another Ship three hundred Leagues at Sea, and now in three moneths time heard no further of her, onely the signes of a wreck were seene on the Coast, which could not be iudged to be any other then the same.

Great drought

These & the like considerations, moued not only euery good man priuately to enter into examination with his own estate between God and his conscience, & so to humiliation before him: but also more solemnly to humble our selues together before the Lord by Fasting and Prayer. To that end end a day was appointed by publike authority, and ſet a part from all other emploiments; hoping that the ſame God which had ſtirred vs vp hereunto, would be moued hereby in mercy to looke vpon vs & grant the requeſt of our deiected ſoules, if our continuance there might any way ſtand with his glorie and our good. But oh the mercy of our God! Who was as readie to heare as we to aske: For though in the morning when wee aſſembled together, the heauens were as cleere and the drought as like to continue as euer it was: yet (our exerciſe continuing ſome eight or nine houres) before our departure the weather was ouercaſt, the clouds gathered together on all ſides, and on the next morning diſtilled ſuch ſoft, ſweete, and moderate ſhowers of raine; continuing ſome fourteene daies, and mixed with ſuch ſeaſonable weather, as it was hard to ſay whether our withered Corne, or drouping affections were moſt quickned or reuiued. Such was the bountie and goodneſſe of our God. Of this the Indians by meanes of Hobbamock tooke notice: who being then in the Towne, and this exerciſe in the midſt of the weeke, ſaid, It was but three daies ſince Sunday, and therefore demanded of a boy what was the reaſon thereof? Which when hee knew and ſaw what effects followed thereupon, hee and all them admired the goodneſſe of our God towards vs, that wrought ſo great a change in ſo ſhort a time, ſhewing the difference betweene their Coniuration, and our Inuocation on the Name of God for raine; theirs being mixed with ſuch ſtormes and tempeſts, as ſometimes in ſtead of doing them good, it laieth the Corne flat on the ground, to their preiudice: but ours in ſo gentle and ſeaſonable a manner, as they neuer obſerued the like.

Publike Faſt.

Gracious dewes.

Indians coniuration.

At the ſame time Captaine Standiſh, being formerly imployed by the Gouernour, to buy prouiſions for the refreſhing of the Colony, returned with the ſame, accompanied with one M. Dauid Tomſon, a Scotchman, who alſo that Spring began a Plantation twentie fiue leagues North-eaſt from vs, neere Smiths Iles, at a place called Paſcataquack, where hee liketh well. Now alſo heard wee of the third repulſe that our ſupply had, of their ſafe, though dangerous returne into England, and of their preparation to come to vs. So that hauing theſe many ſignes of Gods fauour and acceptation, wee thought it would bee great ingratitude, if ſecretly wee ſhould ſmoother vp the ſame, or content our ſelues with priuate thankſ-giuing, for that which by priuate praier could not be obtained. And therefore another ſolemne day was ſet apart for that end, wherein wee returned glory, honour, and praiſe, with all thankfulneſſe to our good God, which dealt ſo graciouſly with vs, whoſe name for theſe and all other his mercies towards his Church and choſen ones, by them be bleſſed and praiſed now and euermore, Amen.

M. Tomſon a Scot his Plantation.

Day of thanks

In the latter end of Iuly, and the beginning of Auguſt, came two Ships with ſupply vnto vs, who brought all their paſſengers, except one, in health, who recouered in ſhort time, who alſo notwithſtanding all our wants and hardſhip (bleſſed be God) found not any one ſick perſon amongſt vs at the Plantation. The bigger Ship called the Anne was hired, and there againe fraighted backe, from whence wee ſet ſaile the tenth of September. The leſſer called the little Iames, was built for the Company at their charge. Shee was now alſo fitted for Trade and diſcouery to the Southward of Cape Cod, and almoſt readie to ſet ſaile, whom I pray God to bleſſe in her good and lawfull proceedings.

Two Ships.

A Few things I thought meete to adde heereunto, which I haue obſerued amongſt the Indians, both touching their Religion, and ſundry other Cuſtomes amongſt them. And firſt, whereas my ſelfe and others, in former Letters (which came to the Preſſe againſt my will and knowledge) wrote, that the Indians about vs are a people without any Religion or knowledge of any God, therein I erred, though wee could then gather no better: For as they conceiue of many diuine powers, ſo of one whom they call Kiehtan, to bee the principall maker of all the reſt, and to be made by none: Hee (they ſay) created the Heauens, Earth, Sea, and all creatures contained therein. Alſo that hee made one man and one woman, of whom they and wee and all mankind came: but how they became ſo farre diſperſed that know they not. At firſt they ſay, there was no Sachim, or King, but Kiehtan, who dwelleth aboue the Heauens, whither all good men goe when they die to ſee their friends, and haue their fill of all things: This his habitation lyeth Weſtward in the Heauens, they ſay; thither the bad men goe alſo, and knocke at his doore, but he bids them Quachet, that is to ſay, Walke abroad, for there is no place for ſuch; ſo that they wander in reſtleſſe want and penury. Neuer man ſaw this Kiehtan; onely old men tell them of him, and bid them tell their children, yea, to charge them to teach their poſterities the ſame, and lay the like charge vpon them. This power they acknowledge to be good, and when they would obtaine any great matter, meet together, and cry vnto him, and ſo likewiſe for plentie, victory, &c. ſing, dance, feaſt, giue thankes, and hang vp Garlands and other things in memory of the ſame.

Their Religion

The meaning of the word, Kichtan, I think hath reference to Antiquity, for Chiſe is an old man, and Kiehchiſe, a man that exceedeth in age. Ite maledicti.

Another power they worſhip, whom they call Hobbamock, and to the Nothward of vs Hobbamoqui; this as farre as wee can conceiue is the Deuill, him they call vpon to cure their wounds and diſeaſes. When they are curable, hee perſwades them hee ſends the ſame for ſome conceiued anger againſt them, but vpon their calling vpon him can and doth helpe them: But when they are mortall, and not curable in nature, then he perſwades them Kiehtan is angry and ſends them,

Their Deuill.

whom

whom none can cure: insomuch, as in that respect onely they somewhat doubt whether hee bee simply good, and therefore in sickneſſe neuer call vpon him. This Hobbomock appeares in sundry formes vnto them, as in the shape of a Man, a Deare, a Fawne, an Eagle, &c. but most ordinarily a Snake: Hee appeares not to all, but the chiefest and most judicious amongst them, though allof them striue to attaine to that hellish height of Honour. He appeareth most ordinary, and is most conuersant with three sorts of people, one I confesse, I neither know by name nor office directly: Of these they haue few but esteeme highly of them, and thinke that no weapon can kill them: another they call by the name of Powah, and the third Pnieſe.

Powah or Priest

The office and dutie of the Powah is to be exercised principally in calling vpon the Deuill, and curing diseases of the sicke or wounded. The common people ioyne with him in the exercise of Inuocation, but doe but onely assent, or as we terme it, say Amen to that he saith, yet sometime breake out into a short musicall note with him. The Powah is eager and free in speech, fierce in countenance, and ioyneth many antick and laborious gestures with the same ouer the partie diseased. If the partie be wounded, he will also seeme to sucke the wound, but if they bee curable (as they say) hee toucheth it not, but a Skooke, that is the Snake, or Wobsacuck, that is the Eagle sitteth on his shoulder and lickes the same. This none see but the Powah, who tells them hee doth it himselfe. If the partie be otherwise diseased, it is accounted sufficient if in any shape hee but come into the house, taking it for an vndoubted signe of recouery.

And as in former ages Apollo had his Temple at Delphos, and Diana at Epheſus; so haue I heard them call vpon some, as if they had their residence in some certaine places, or because they appeared in those formes in the same. In the Powahs speech hee promiseth to sacrifice many skinnes of Beasts, Kettles, Hatchets, Beades, Kniues, and other the best things they haue to the fiend, if hee will come to helpe the partie diseased: But whether they performe it I know not. The other practises I haue seene, being necessarily called at some times to be with their sicke, and haue vsed the best arguments I could make them vnderstand against the same: They haue told me I should see the Deuill at those times come to the party, but I assured my selfe and them of the contrary, which so proued: yea, themselues haue confessed they neuer saw him when any of vs were present. In desperate and extraordinary hard trauell in childe-birth, when the partie cannot be deliuered by the ordinary meanes, they send for this Powah, though ordinarily their trauell is not so extreame as in our parts of the world, they being of a more hardie nature; for on the third day after childe-birth, I haue seene the mother with the Infant, vpon a small occasion in cold weather in a Boat vpon the Sea.

Offerings.

Sacrifices.

Many sacrifices the Indians vse, and in some cases kill children. It seemeth they are various in their religious worship in a little distance, and grow more and more cold in their worship to Kiehtan; saying, In their memory he was much more called vpon. The Nanobigganſets exceed in their blind deuotion, and haue a great spatious house wherein onely some few (that are as wee may tearme them Priests) come: thither at certaine knowne times resort all their people, and offer almost all the riches they haue to their gods, as Kettles, Skins, Hatchets, Beades, Kniues, &c. all which are cast by the Priests into a great fire that they make in the midst of the house, and there consumed to ashes. To this offering euery man bringeth freely, and the more he is knowne to bring, hath the better esteeme of all men. This the other Indians about vs approue of as good, and wish their Sachims would appoint the like: and because the plague hath not raigned at Nanobigganſet, as at other places about them, they attribute to this custome there vsed.

Burnt offring.

The Deuill keeps his seruants poore.

Their Knights. Panieſes: valourous counsellours.

The Panieſes are men of great courage and wisedome, and to these also the Deuill appeareth more familiarly then to others, and as wee conceiue maketh couenant with them to preserue them from death, by wounds with Arrowes, Kniues, Hatchets, &c. or at least both themselues and especially the people thinke themselues to be freed from the same. And though against their battels, all of them by painting disfigure themselues, yet they are knowne by their courage and boldnesse, by reason whereof one of them will chase almost an hundred men, for they account it death for whomsoeuer stand in their way. These are highly esteemed of all sorts of people, and are of the Sachims Councell, without whom they will not warre or vndertake any weightie businesse. In warre their Sachims, for their more safetie goe in the midst of them. They are commonly men of greatest stature and strength, and such as will endure most hardnesse, and yet are more discreet, courteous, and humane in their carriages then any amongst them, scorning theft, lying, and the like base dealings, and stand as much vpon their reputation as any men. And to the end they may haue store of these, they traine vp the most forward and likeliest boyes from their child-hood in great hardnesse, and make them abstaine from daintie meat, obseruing diuers orders prescribed, to the end that when they are of age the Deuill may appeare to them, causing to drinke the iuyce of Sentry and other bitter Hearbs till they cast, which they must disgorge into the platter, and drinke againe, and againe, till at length, through extraordinary pressing of nature it will seeme to bee all bloud, and this the boyes will doe with eagernesse at the first, and so continue, till by reason of faintnesse they can scarce stand on their legs, and then must goe forth into the cold: also they beat their shins with sticks, and cause them to run through bushes, stumps, and brambles, to make them hardy and acceptable to the Deuill, that in time he may appeare vnto them.

Bitter trialls.

Their

Their Sachims cannot bee all called Kings, but onely some few of them, to whom the rest resort for protection, and pay homage vnto them, neither may they warre without their knowledge and approbation, yet to be commanded by the greater as occasion serueth. Of this sort is Massassowat our friend, and Conanacus of Nanohiggenset our supposed enemy. Euery Sachim taketh care for the widdow and fatherlesse, also for such as are aged, and any way maymed, if their friends be dead, or not able to prouide for them. A Sachim will not take any to wife, but such an one as is equall to him in birth, otherwise they say their seede would in time become ignoble, and though they haue many other wiues, yet are they no other then concubines or seruants, and yeeld a kind of obedience to the principall, who ordereth the family, and them in it. The like their men obserue also, and will adhere to the first during their liues; but put away the other at their pleasure. This Gouernment is successiue and not by choyce. If the father dye before the sonne or daughter bee of age, then the childe is committed to the protection and tuition of some one amongst them, who ruleth in his stead till hee be of age, but when that is I know not. Sachim: or Lords.

Euery Sachim knoweth how farre the bounds and limits of his owne Countrey extendeth, and that is his owne proper inheritance, out of that if any of his men desire land to set their Corne, hee giueth them as much as they can vse, and sets them in their bounds. In this circuit whosoeuer hunteth, if any kill any venison, bring him his fee, which is foure parts of the same, if it bee killed on the Land, but if in the water, then the skin thereof: The Great Sachims or Kings know not their owne bounds or limits of land, as well as the rest. All Trauellers or Strangers for the most part lodge at the Sachims, when they come, they tell them how long they will stay, and to what place they goe, during which time they receiue entertainment according to their persons, but want not. Once a yeere the Pnieses vse to prouoke the people to bestow much Corne on the Sachim. To that end they appoint a certaine time and place neere the Sachims dwelling, where the people bring many baskets of Corne, and make a great stack thereof. There the Pnieses stand ready to giue thankes to the people on the Sachims behalfe, and after acquainteth the Sachim therewith, who fetcheth the same, and is no lesse thankfull, bestowing many gifts on them. Tribute.

When any are visited with sickneſſe, their friends resort vnto them for their comfort, and continue with them oftentimes till their death or recouery. If they die they stay a certaine time to mourne for them. Night and morning they performe this dutie many daies after the buriall in a most dolefull manner, insomuch as though it bee ordinary, and the Note Musicall, which they take one from another, and altogether, yet it will draw teares from their eyes, and almost from ours also. But if they recouer then because their sickneſſe was chargeable, they send Corne and other gifts vnto them at a certaine appointed time, whereat they feast and dance, which they call Commoco. Mourning for the dead.

When they bury the dead, they sowe vp the corps in a mat and so put it in the earth. If the partie be a Sachim, they couer him with many curious mats, and bury all his riches with him, and inclose the graue with a pale. If it bee a childe, the father will also put his owne most speciall Iewels and Ornaments in the earth with it, also he will cut his haire and disfigure himselfe very much in token of sorrow. If it bee the man or woman of the house, they will pull downe the mats and leaue the frame standing, and bury them in or neere the same, and either remoue their dwelling, or giue ouer house-keeping. Burialls.

The men imploy themselues wholly in hunting, and other exercises of the Bow, except at some times they take some paine in fishing. The women liue a most slauish life, they carry all their burdens, set and dresse their Corne, gather it in, and seeke out for much of their food, beate and make readie the Corne to eate, and haue all household care lying vpon them. Womens slauery.

The younger sort reuerence the elder, and doe all meane offices whilst they are together, although they be strangers. Boyes and girles may not weare their haire like men and women, but are distinguished thereby.

A man is not accounted a man till he doe some notable act, or shew forth such courage and resolution as becommeth his place. The men take much Tobacco, but for boyes so to doe they account it odious. Manhood.

All their names are significant and variable; for when they come to the state of men and women, they alter them according to their deeds or dispositions. Names.

When a maide is taken in marriage, shee first cutteth her haire, and after weareth a couering on her head till her haire be growne out. Their women are diuersly disposed, some as modest as they will scarce talke one with another in the company of men, being very chaste also: yet other some light, lasciuious and wanton. If a woman haue a bad husband, or cannot affect him, and there bee warre or opposition betweene that and any other people, shee will runne away from him to the contrary partie and there liue, where they neuer come vnwelcome: for where are most women, there is greatest plentie. When a woman hath her monethly termes, shee separateth her selfe from all other company, and liueth certaine dayes in a house alone: after which she washeth her selfe and all that shee hath touched or vsed, and is againe receiued to her husbands bed or family. Maids & wiues family. For adultery the husband will beat his wife and put her away, if he pleaſe. Some common ſtrumpets there are as well as in other places, but they are ſuch as either neuer married, or widowes, or put away for adultery: for no man will keepe ſuch an one to wife.

Adulterie and whoordome.

Theft.

In matters of vniuſt and diſhoneſt dealing the Sachim examineth and puniſheth the ſame. In caſe of thefts, for the firſt offence hee is diſgracefully rebuked, for the ſecond beaten by the Sachim with a cudgell on the naked backe, for the third hee is beaten with many ſtroakes, and hath his noſe ſlit vpward, that thereby all men may both know and ſhun him. If any man kill another, hee muſt likewiſe die for the ſame. The Sachim not onely paſſeth the ſentence vpon malefactors, but executeth the ſame with his owne hands, if the partie bee then preſent; if not, ſendeth his owne knife in caſe of death, in the hands of others to performe the ſame. But if the offender bee to receiue other puniſhment, hee will not receiue the ſame but from the Sachim himſelfe, before whom being naked he kneeleth, and will not offer to runne away though hee beat him neuer ſo much, it being a greater diſparagement for a man to cry during the time of his correction, then is his offence and puniſhment.

Murther.

Crying, a cowards note.

Apparell.

As for their apparell, they weare breeches and ſtockings in one, like ſome Iriſh, which is made of Deere skinnes, and haue ſhooes of the ſame leather. They weare alſo a Deeres skinne looſe about them like a cloake, which they will turne to the weather ſide. In this habite they trauell, but when they are at home, or come to their iourneyes end, preſently they pull of their breeches, ſtockings, and ſhooes, wring out the water, if they bee wet, and drie them, and rub or chafe the ſame. Though theſe be off, yet haue they another ſmall garment that couereth their ſecrets. The men weare alſo when they goe abroad in cold weather, an Otter or Fox skin on their right arme, but onely their bracer on the left. Women and all of that ſex weare ſtrings about their legs, which the men neuer doe.

Wittie people. Their Arts. Note.

The people are very ingenious and obſeruatiue, they keepe account of time by the Moone, and Winters or Summers; they know diuers of the Starres by name, in particular, they know the North-ſtar, and call it Maske, which is to ſay, The Beare. Alſo they haue many names for the Winds. They will gueſſe very well at the wind and weather before hand, by obſeruations in the Heauens. They report alſo, that ſome of them can cauſe the wind to blow in what part they liſt, can raiſe ſtormes and tempeſts, which they vſually doe when they intend the death or deſtruction of other people, that by reaſon of the vnſeaſonable weather, they may take aduantage of their enemies in their houſes. At ſuch times they performe their greateſt exployts, and in ſuch ſeaſons when they are at enmitie with any, they keepe more carefull watch then at other times.

Language.

As for the language it is verie copious, large, and difficult, as yet wee cannot attaine to any great meaſure thereof; but can vnderſtand them, and explaine our ſelues to their vnderſtanding, by the helpe of thoſe that daily conuerſe with vs. And though there be difference in an hundred miles diſtant of place, both in language and manners, yet not ſo much but that they very well vnderſtand each other. And thus much of their liues and manners.

Regiſters.

In ſtead of Records and Chronicles, they take this courſe, where any remarkeable act is done, in memory of it, either in the place, or by ſome pathway neere adioyning, they make a round hole in the ground about a foot deepe, and as much ouer, which when others paſſing by behold, they enquire the cauſe and occaſion of the ſame, which being once knowne, they are carefull to acquaint all men as occaſion ſerueth therewith. And leaſt ſuch holes ſhould bee filled, or growne vp by any accident, as men paſſe by they will oft renew the ſame: By which meanes many things of great Antiquitie are freſh in memory. So that as a man trauelleth, if hee can vnderſtand his guide, his iourney will be the leſſe tedious, by reaſon of many hiſtoricall Diſcourſes will be related vnto him.

The Country.

For that Continent, on which wee are called New-England, although it hath euer beene conceiued by the Engliſh, to bee a part of the maine Land adioyning to Virginia, yet by relation of the Indians it ſhould appeare to bee otherwiſe: for they affirme confidently, that it is an Iland,

New England an Iland.

and that either the Dutch or French paſſe thorow from Sea to Sea, betweene vs and Virginia, and driue a great Trade in the ſame. The name of that Inlet of the Sea, they call Mohegon, which I take to be the ſame which wee call Hudſons Riuer, vp which Maſter Hudſon went many leagues, and for want of meanes (as I heare) left it vndiſcouered. For confirmation of this, their opinion is thus much; Though Virginia bee not aboue an hundred and fiftie leagues from vs, yet they neuer heard of Powhatan, or knew that any Engliſh were planted in his Countrey, ſaue onely by vs and Tiſquantum, who went into an Engliſh Ship thither: And therefore it is the more probable, becauſe the water is not paſſable for them, who are very aduenturous in their Boates.

Seaſons.

Then for the temperature of the ayre, in almoſt three yeeres experience, I can ſcarce diſtinguiſh New England from Old England, in reſpect of heate, and cold, froſt, ſnow, raine, winds, &c. Some obiect, becauſe our Plantation lieth in the latitude of two and fortie, it muſt needes bee much hotter. I confeſſe I cannot giue the reaſon of the contrary; onely experience teacheth vs, that if it doe exceed England, it is ſo little as muſt require better iudgements to diſcerne it. And for the Winter, I rather thinke (if there be difference) it is both sharper and longer in New England then Old; and yet the want of those comforts in the one which I haue enioyed in the other, may deceiue my iudgement also. But in my best obseruation, comparing our owne conditions with the Relations of other parts of America, I cannot conceiue of any to agree better with the constitution of the English, not being oppressed with extremitie of heat, nor nipped with biting cold, by which meanes, blessed be God, wee enioy our health, notwithstanding those difficulties wee haue vndergone, in such a measure as would haue been admired if we had liued in England with the like meanes. The day is two houres longer then here; when it is at the shortest, and as much shorter when it is at the longest. Dayes.

for

The soyle is variable, in some places Mould, in some Clay, and others a mixed Sand, &c. The chiefest graine is the Indian Mays, or Ginny-Wheat; the seed-time beginneth in the midst of April, and continueth good till the midst of May. Our Harueſt beginneth with September. This Corne increaseth in great measure, but is inferiour in quantitie to the same in Virginia, the reason I conceiue, is because Virginia is farre hotter then it is with vs, it requiring great heat to ripen; but whereas it is obiected against New England, that Corne will not there grow, except the ground bee manured with Fish: I answere, That where men set with Fish (as with vs) it is more easie so to doe, then to cleere ground and set without some fiue or sixe yeeres, and so begin anew, as in Virginia and elsewhere. Not but that in some places, where they cannot be taken with ease in such abundance, the Indians set foure yeeres together without, and haue as good Corne or better then we haue that set with them, though indeed I thinke if wee had Cattell to till the ground, it would be more profitable and better agreeable to the soyle, to sowe Wheat, Ry, Barley, Pease, and Oats, then to set Mays, which our Indians call Enachim: for we haue had experience that they like and thriue well; and the other will not bee procured without good labour and diligence, especially at seed-time, when it must also bee watched by night to keepe the Wolues from the Fish, till it be rotten, which will bee in fourteene dayes; yet men agreeing together, and taking their turnes it is not much. Soyle. Corne.

Much might bee spoken of the benefit that may come to such as shall here plant by Trade with the Indians for Furres, if men take a right course for obtaining the same; for I dare presume vpon that small experience I haue had, to affirme, that the English, Dutch, and French, returne yeerely many thousand pounds profits by Trade onely from that Iland, on which wee are seated.

Tobacco may bee there planted, but not with that profit as in some other places, neither were it profitable there to follow it, though the increase were equall, because Fish is a better and richer Commoditie, and more necessary, which may be, and there are had in as great abundance as in any other part of the world; Witnesse the West-countrey Merchants of England, which returne incredible gaines yeerely from thence. And if they can so doe which here buy their sale at a great charge, and transport more Company to make their voyage, then will saile their Ships, what may the Planters expect when once they are seated, and make the most of their Sale there, and imploy themselues at least eight moneths in fishing, whereas the other fish but foure, and haue their Ship lie dead in the Harbour all the time, whereas such shipping as belong to Plantations may take fraight of Passengers or Cattle thither, and haue their lading prouided against they come. I confesse we haue come so far short of the meanes to raise such returns, as with great difficultie wee haue preserued our liues; insomuch as when I looke backe vpon our condition, and weake meanes to preserue the same, I rather admire at Gods mercies and prouidence in our preseruation, then that no greater things haue beene effected by vs. But though our beginning haue beene thus raw, small, and difficult, as thou hast seene, yet the same God that hath hitherto led vs thorow the former, I hope will raise meanes to accomplish the latter.

CHAP. VI.

Noua Scotia. The Kings Patent to Sir WILLIAM ALEXANDER Knight, for the Plantation of New Scotland in America, and his proceedings therein; with a description of Mawooshen for better knowledge of those parts.

IAcobus Dei gratia Magnæ Brittanniæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ Rex fideiq; defensor: Omnibus probis hominibus totius terræ suæ Clericis & laicis salutem. Sciatis nos semper ad quamlibet quæ ad decus & emolumentum regni nostri Scotiæ spectaret occasionem amplectendum fuisse intentos, nullamque aut faciliorem aut magis innoxiam acquisitionem censere, quam quæ inexertis & incultis regnis vbi vtæ & victui suppetunt commode nouis deducendis Colonijs fiat: præsertim si vel ipsa regna cultoribus prius vacua, vel ab infidelibus, quos ad Christianam conuerti fidem & Dei gloriam interest plurimum, inseſſa fuerint. Sed cum & alia nonnulla regna, & hac non ita pridem noſtra Anglia laudabiliter ſua nomina novis terris acquiſitis ſed in ſe ſubactis indiderint, quam numeroſa & frequens diuino beneficio hec gens, hac tempeſtate ſit nobiſcum reputantes, quamque honeſto aliquo & utili cultu eam ſtudioſe exercerino, in deteriora ex ignauia & otio prolabatur expediat pleroſque in eam deducendos regionem quam Colonijs compleant, operæpretium duximus qui & animi promptitudine & alacritate corporumque robore & viribus quibuſcunque difficultatibus, ſi qui alij mortalium vſquam ſe audent opponere, hunc conatum huic regno maxime idoneum inde arbitramur quod vterum tantummodo & mulierum inuentorum & frumenti, non etiam pecuniæ tranſuectionem poſtulat, neque incommodam ex ipſius regni mercibus retributionem hoc tempore cum negotiatio adeo imminuta ſit, poſſit reperiri. Hiſce de cauſis ſicuti & propter bonum fidele & gratum dilecti noſtri conſiliarij Domini Willelmi Alexandri equitis ſuruitium nobis præſtitum & præſtandum, qui propriis impenſis ex noſtratibus primus externam hanc coloniam ducendam conatus ſit, diuerſaſque terras infra deſignatis limitibus circumſcriptas incolendas expetierit. Nos igitur ex regali noſtra ad Chriſtianam religionem propagandam & ad opulentiam, proſperitatem, pacemque naturalium noſtrorum ſubditorum dicti regni noſtri Scotiæ acquirendam cura, ſicuti alij Principes exteranei in talibus caſibus hactenus fecerunt, cum conſenſu & conſenſu prædicti noſtri conſanguinei & conſiliarij Ioannis Comitis de Marr Domini Erskene & Garioche ſummi noſtri Theſaurarij computorum rotulatoris collectoris ac Theſaurarij nouarum noſtrarum augmentationum huius Regni noſtri Scotiæ ac reliquorum dominorum noſtrorum Commiſſionariorum eiuſdem Regni noſtri, dedimus conceſſimus & diſponimus, tenoreque præſentis charte noſtre damus concedimus & diſponimus præfato Domino Willelmo Alexandro, heredibus ſuis vel aſſignatis quibuſcunque hereditarie omnes & ſingulas terras continentis ac inſulas ſituatas & iacentes in America, intra caput ſeu promontorium communiter Cap. de Sable appellatum iacens prope latitudinem quadraginta trium graduum aut ab eo circa, ab æquinoctiali linea verſus ſeptentrionem, à quo promontorio verſus litus maris tenendo ad occidentem ad ſtationem Sancte Mariæ nauium (vulgo S. Maries Bay) & deinceps verſus ſeptentrionem per directam lineam introitum ſiue oſtium magnæ illius ſtationis nauium tranſeuntem quæ excurrit in terra orientalem plagam inter Regiones Suriquorum & Etechemmorum (vulgo Suriquois & Etechemines) ad fluuium vulgo nomine Santa Crucis appellatum: Et ad ſcaturiginem remotiſſimam ſiue fontem ex occidentali parte eiuſdem qui ſe primum prædicto fluuio immiſcet, vnde per imaginariam directam lineam quæ pergere per terram ſeu currere verſus ſeptentrionem conſipietur ad proximam nauium ſtationem, fluuium vel ſcaturiginem in magno fluuio de Cannada ſeſe exonerantem. Et ab eo pergendo verſus orientem per maris oras litorales eiuſdem fluuij de Cannada ad fluuium ſtationem nauium portum aut littus communiter nomine de Gachepe vel Gaſpe notum & appellatū. Et deinceps verſus Euronotum ad inſulas Bacalaos vel Cap. Briton vocatas Relinquendo eaſdem Inſulas à dextra & veraginem dicti magni fluuij de Cannada ſiue magne ſtationis nauium & terras de New-found-land cum inſulis ad eaſdem terras pertinentibus à ſiniſtra. Et deinceps ad Caput ſiue promontorium de Cap. Briton prædictum iacens prope latitudinem quadraginta quinque graduum aut eo circa. Et à dicto promontorio de Cap. Briton verſus meridiem & Occidentem ad prædictum Cap. Sable vbi incipit perambulatio includenda & comprehenda intra dictas maria oras litorales ac earum circumferentias à mari ad omnes terras continentis cum fluminibus torrentibus, ſinubus, litoribus, inſulis aut maribus iacentibus prope infra ſex leucas ad aliquam earundem partem ex occidentali boreali vel orientali partibus orarum litoralium & præcinctuum earundem. Et ab Euronoto (vti iacet Cap. Britton) & ex auſtrali parte eiuſdem vbi eſt Cap. de Sable omnia maria ac inſulas verſus meridiem intra quadraginta leucas dictarum orarum litoralium earundem magnam inſulam vulgariter appellatam Ile de Sable vel Sablon includen. iacen. verſus carban vulgo South South-eaſt, circa triginta leucas à dicto Cap. Briton in mari & exiſten. in latitudine quadraginta quatuor graduum aut eo circa. Quæ quidem terræ prædicte omni tempore affuturo nomine Nouæ Scotiæ in America gaudebunt. Quas etiam præfatus Dominus Willelmus in partes & portiones ſicut ei viſum fuerit diuidet iiſdemq; nomine pro beneplacito imponet. Vna cum omnibus fodinis tum regalibus auri & argenti quam aliis fodinis ferri, plumbi, cupri, ſtanni, æris, &c.

In cuius rei teſtimonium huic preſenti Chartæ noſtre magnum Sigillum noſtrum apponi precepimus Teſtibus prædictis noſtris conſanguineis & Conſiliarijs Iacobo Marchione de Hamilton Comite Arranie & Cambridge Domino Auen & Innerdail; Georgio Mariſcalli comite Domino Keith & Alt. regni noſtri Mariſcallo, Alexandro Comite de Dunfermling Domino Fyvie & vrquhant noſtro Cancellario, Thoma Comite de Melros Domino Byres & Byrning noſtro Secretario, Dilectis noſtris familiaribus Conſiliarijs Domino Richardo Kokburne Iuniore de Clerkington noſtri Secreti Sigilli cuſtode, Georgio Hay de Knifarunis noſtrorum Rotulorum Regiſtrorum ac Concilij Clerico, Ioanne Cockburne de Ormeſtoun noſtræ Iuſtitiariæ Clerico, & Ioanne Scot de Scottiſtarvet noſtræ Cancellariæ Directore, Militibus. Apud Caſtellum noſtrum de Winſore decimo die menſis Septembris Anno Domini milleſimo ſexenteſimo vigeſimo primo Regnorumq; noſtrorum annis quinquageſimo quinto & decimo nono.

Sir Ferdinando Gorge being entruſted with the affayres of New England, after hee had aduiſed with ſome of the Company; conſidering the largeneſſe of the bounds intended to bee planted by his Maieſties ſubiects in America, and the ſlow progreſſe of Plantations in theſe parts, that the Scottiſh Nation may be perſwaded to imbarke themſelues in their forraine enterpriſe; hee was content that Sir William Alexander * Knight, one of his Maieſties moſt Honorable Priuy Councel of

* For the Deſcription & incouragements to this deſigne, and for better knowledge of New Scotland, beſides a Booke purpoſely publiſhed by the Honourable & learned Author (who at other weapons hath plaied his Muſes prizes, and giuen the world ample teſtimony of his learning) you may read our 8. Booke from the ſixt Chapter forwards, the laſt two Chapiters of the ninth Booke, & that deſcription of the Countrey of Mawooſhen, which I haue added hereto.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

of that Kingdome, should procure a Patent of such a bounds as his Maiestie should appoint to bee called New Scotland, and to bee held of the Crowne of Scotland, and gouerned by the Lawes of that Kingdome, as his said Patent containing all the bounds, that doth lie to the East of Saint Croix, compassed with the great Riuer of Canada on the North, and the Maine Ocean on the South doth more particularly beare. Whereupon the said Sir William did set out a Shippe with a Colony of purpose to plant, which being too late in setting forth were forced to stay all the Winter at New-found-Land, and though they had a Shippe with new prouisions the next Spring from the sayde Sir William, yet by reason of some vnexpected occasions, the chiefe of the Company resolued not to plant at the first, but onely to discouer and to take possession, which a number made choyce of for that purpose did happily performe. Ann. 1622.

The three and twentieth of Iune, they loosed from Saint Iohns Harbour in New-found-Land, and sayled towardes New Scotland, where for the space of fourteene dayes they were by Fogges and contrarie Windes kept backe from spying Land till the eight of Iuly: thereafter that they saw the West part of Cape Breton, and so till the thirteenth day, they sayled to and fro alongst the Coast till they came the length of Port de Muton, where they discouered three very pleasant Harbours, and went a shoare in one of them, which they called Lukes Bay, where they found a great way vp to a very pleasant Riuer being three fathoms deepe at low water; at the entry thereof, and on euery side of the same they did see very delicate Meadowes, hauing Roses white and red growing thereon, with a kind of wild Lilly, which had a very daintie smell. Ann. 1623. Lukes Bay.

The next day they resolued to coast alongst to discouer the next Harbour, which was but two leagues distant from the other, where they found a more pleasant Riuer, being foure fathom water at a low water, with Meadowes on both sides thereof, hauing Roses and Lillies growing thereon as the other had. They found within this Riuer a very fit place for a Plantation, both in regard that it was naturally apt to bee fortified, and that all the ground beweene the two Riuers was without Wood, and was good fat earth hauing seuerall sorts of Berries growing thereon, as Gooseberry, Strawberry, Hyndberry, Rasberry, and a kinde of Red-wineberry: As also some sorts of Graine, as Pease, some eares of Wheat, Barley, and Rye, growing there wild; the Pease grow euery where in abundance, very big and good to eate, but taste of the Fitch. This Riuer is called Port Iolly, from whence they coasted alongst to Port Negro, being 12. leagues distant, where all the way as they sailed alongst they found a very pleasant Countrey hauing growing euery where such things as they did see in the two Harbours where they had beene. They found likewise in euery Riuer abundance of Lobsters, and Cockles, and other small fishes; and also they found not onely in the Riuers, but all the Coast alongst, numbers of seuerall sorts of Wild-fowle, as Wild-goose, Black-Duck, Woodcock, Herron, Pigeon, and many other sorts of Fowle which they knew not. They found likewise, as they sailed alongst the Coast abundance of great Cod, with seuerall other sorts of great fishes. The Countrey is full of Woods, not very thick, and the most part Oake, the rest Fir-tree, Spruce, Birch, and many other sorts of wood which they had not seene before. Fit place for a Plantation. Port Iolly. Port Negro.

Hauing discouered this part of the Countrey in regard of the voyage, their Ship was to make to the Straits with fishes, they resolued to coast alongst from Lukes Bay to Port de Muton, being foure leagues to the East thereof, where they encountred with a Frenchman, that in a very short time had a great voyage, hauing furnished one Ship away with fishes, and had neere so many ready as to load his owne Ship and others. And hauing taken a view of this Port, which to their iudgement they found no wayes inferiour to the rest they had seene before, they resolued to retire backe to New-found-land, where their Ship was to receiue her loading of fishes, the twentieth of Iuly they loosed from thence, and the seuen and twentieth thereof they arriued at Saint Iohns Harbour in New-found-land; and from thence sailed alongst the Bay of Conception, where they left the Ship, and dispatched themselues home in seuerall Ships that belonged to the West part of England, and doe intend this next Spring to set forth a Colony to plant there.

The description of the Countrey of Mawooshen, discouered by the English, in the yeere 1602. 3. 5. 6. 7. 8. and 9.

This description of Mawooshen I had amongst M. Hakluyts papers.

Mawooshen is a Countrey lying to the North and by East of Virginia, betweene the degrees of 43. and 45. It is fortie leagues broad, and fiftie in length, lying in breadth East and West, and in length North and South. It is bordered on the East side with a Countrey, the people whereof they call Tarratines: on the West with Epistemaux, on the North with a great Wood called Semeglseame, and on the South with the mayne Ocean Sea, and many Ilands. Climate and quantitie. Tarratines are said to be the same with the Souriquois.

In Mawooshen it seemeth there are nine Riuers, whereof the first to the East is called Quibiquesson; on which there is one Towne, wherein dwell two Sagamos or Lords, the one called Asticon, I. Quibequesson Riuer.

Digitized by Google

Aſticon Sagamo. ſticon, the other Abermot. In this Towne are fiftie houſes, and 150. men. The name of which Towne is Precante; this Riuer runneth farre vp into the Mayne, at the head thereof there is a
A great Lake. Lake of a great length and breadth; it is at the fall into the Sea tenne fathoms deepe, and halfe a mile ouer.

2. Pemaquid riuer. The next is Pemaquid, a goodly Riuer and very commodious all things conſidered; it is ten fathoms water at the entrance, and fortie miles vp there are two fathoms and a halfe at low water; it is halfe a mile broad, and runneth into the Land North many daies iourney: where is a great
A great Lake. Lake of 18. leagues long and foure broad. In this Lake are ſeuen great Ilands: toward the farthest end there falleth in a Riuer, which they call Acaconſtomed, where they paſſe with their Boates thirtie daies iourney vp, and from thence they goe ouer Land twentie daies iourney more, and Anadabis. then come to another Riuer, where they haue a trade with Anadabis or Anadabijou, with whom the Frenchmen haue had commerce for a long time. Neere to the North of this Riuer of Pemaquid
Three Townes are three Townes: the firſt is Upſegon, where Baſhabes their chiefe Lord doth dwell. And in this Baſhabes. Towne are ſixtie houſes, and 250. men, it is three daies iourney within the Land. The ſecond is Caiocame. Caiocame; the third Shaſheekeing. Theſe two laſt Townes are oppoſite one to the other, the Riuer diuiding them both, and they are two daies iourney from the Towne of Baſhabes. In Caiocame dwelleth Maieſquis, and in Shaſheekeing Bowant, two Sagamos, ſubiects to Baſhabes. Vpon both ſides of this Riuer vp to the very Lake, for a good diſtance the ground is plaine, without Trees or Buſhes, but full of long Graſſe, like vnto a pleaſant meadow, which the Inhabitants doe burne once a yeere to haue freſh feed for their Deere. Beyond this Meadow are great Woods, whereof more ſhall bee ſpoken hereafter. The Riuer of Pemaquid is foure dayes iourney from the mouth of Quibiqueſſon.

3. Ramaſſoc. The third Riuer is called Ramaſſoc, and is diſtant from the mouth of Pemaquid foure daies iourney; it is twentie fathoms at the entrance, and hath a mile ouer; it runneth into the Land three daies iourney, and within leſſe then a daies iourney of the dwelling of Baſhabes: vpon this Riuer
Panobſcot a Towne. there is a Towne named Panobſcot, the Lord whereof is called Sibarabood; who hath in his Town fiftie houſes, and eightie men.

4. Apanawapeske. The fourth Riuer Apanawapeske, lying Weſt and by South of Ramaſſoc, at the entrance whereof there is twentie fathoms water, and it is a mile broad: it runneth vp into the Countrey fiue daies iourney; and within three daies of the mouth are two Townes, the one called Marecombe, where dwelleth Aramaſoga, who hath in his Towne fiftie houſes, and eightie men. The other is Chebegnadoſe, whoſe Lord is Skanke, and hath thirtie houſes and ninetie men. The mouth of Apanawapeske is diſtant from Ramaſſoc three daies iourney.

5. Apanmenſek. To the South-weſt foure daies iourney, there is another excellent Riuer; in the entrance whereof is twentie fathoms water, and it is a quarter of a mile broad; it runneth into the Land two daies iourney, and then there is a great fall; at the head wherof there is a Lake of a daies iour-
A Lake. ney long and as much in breadth. On the ſide of this Lake there is a Strait, and at the end of that Strait there is another Lake of foure daies iourney long, and two daies iourney broad; wher-
Another Lake. in there are two Ilands, one at the one end, and another at the other end. I ſhould haue told you
All the Lakes full of Fiſh, Beeues, and ſweet Rats. that both theſe Lakes, as alſo the reſt formerly ſpoken of, doe infinitely abound with freſh water fiſh of all ſorts, as alſo with diuers ſorts of Creatures, as Otters, Beeues, ſweete Rats, and ſuch like.

6. Aponeg. The ſixt Riuer is called Apponick, on which there are three Townes; the firſt is called Appiſham, where dwelleth Abochigiſhic. The ſecond is Moſaqueegamic, where dwelleth a Annriquin, in which there is ſeuentie houſes and eightie men; the third is Matanmiſcowte, in which are eightie houſes and ninetie men, and there dwelleth Narracommique.

7. Aponeg. To the Weſtward of this there is another Riuer called Aponeg: it hath at the entrance ten fathoms water, and is a mile broad: it runneth vp into a great Sound of freſh water. Vpon the Eaſt ſide of this Riuer there are two Townes, the one called Nebamocago, the other called Aſhaws. In the firſt dwelleth Mentawrmet, and hath in his Towne 160. houſholds, and ſome 500. men. In the ſecond dwelleth Hamerhaw, and hath in his Towne eightie houſholds and ſeuentie men. On the Weſt ſide there is another Towne called Neredoſhan, where are 120. houſholds, and 100. men. There is a Sagamo or Lord called Sabenaw.

8. Sagadahoc. Three daies iourney from Aponeg to the Weſtward, there is a goodly Riuer called Sagadahoc: the entrance whereof is a mile and an halfe ouer, holding that breadth a daies iourney, and then
Here C. Pophams built S. Georges Fort, and planted. it maketh a great Sound of three daies iourney broad: in which Sound are ſix Ilands, foure great Great Sound. and full of Woods, and two leſſe without Woods: The greater are called Sowaghcoc, Neguiwo, Neiwoc. And in the verie entrance of this Riuer there is another ſmall Iland: from the Weſt of which Iland to the Maine, there is a Sand that maketh as it were a bar, ſo that that way is not paſſable for ſhipping: but to the Eaſtward there is two fathoms water. This Sound diuideth it
Two Lakes. ſelfe into two branches or armes, the one running North-eaſt twentie foure daies iourney, the other North-weſt thirtie daies iourney into the Maine: At the heads whereof there are two Lakes, the Weſtermoſt being eight daies iourney long, and foure daies iourney broad; and the Eaſtermoſt foure daies iourney long, and two daies broad. The Riuer of Aponeg runneth vp into this

Sound,

Digitized by Google

Sound, and so maketh as it were a great Iland between Sagadahoc and it. From the Iland vpward the water is fresh, abounding in Salmons, and other fresh water fish. Some thirteene or fourteen daies iourney from the entrance in the North-east branch, there is a little arme of a Riuer that runneth East some daies iourney, which hath at the entrance foure fathoms water. Vpon this arme there is one ouer fall, which standeth halfe a daies iourney aboue this branch: vpon this arme there are foure Townes: The first is called Kenebeke, which hath eightie houses, and one hundred men. The Lord whereof is Apombamen. The second is Ketanybeanytke, and the Sagamos name is Ottoworbe, who hath in his Towne ninetie households, and three hundred and thirtie men. This Towne is foure dayes iourney from Kenebeke, and eight dayes iourney from To the Northward is the third Towne, which they call Naragooc; where there are fiftie households, and one hundred and fiftie men. The chiefe Sagamo of that place is Cocockobamas. And on the small branch that runneth East standeth the fourth Towne, named by Massakiga; where there are but eight households, and fortie men. Vpon the Northwest branch of this Sound stand two Townes more: The first is called Amerecangan, and is distant from Kenebeke sixe dayes iourney. In this place are ninetie households, and two hundred and sixtie men, with two Sagamos; the one called Sasnoa, the other Scawus. Seuen daies iourney hence there is another Sagamo, whose name is Ottowerokin, and his Townes name Namercante, wherein are fortie households, and one hundred and twentie men. A dayes iourney aboue Namercante there is a downefall, where they cannot passe with their Cannoes, but are inforced to carrie them by Land for the space of a quarter of a mile, and then they put them into the Riuer againe: And twelue dayes iourney aboue this Downfall there is another, where they carrie their Boates as at the first; and sixe dayes iourney more to the North is the head of this Riuer, where is the Lake that is of eight dayes iourney long, and foure dayes broad before mentioned. In this Lake there is one Iland; and three dayes iourney from this Lake there is a Towne which is called Buccaygaecants, wherein are threescore households, and foure hundred men: And the Sagamo thereof is called Baccatusshe. This man and his people are subiects to the Bashabes of Mawooshen, and in his Countrey is the farthest limit of his Dominion, where he hath any that doe him homage.

A great Iland.

Kenebeke.

To the Westward of Sagadahoc, foure dayes iourney there is another Riuer called Ashamahaga, which hath at the entrance sixe fathoms water, and is halfe a quarter of a mile broad: it runneth into the Land two dayes iourney: and on the East side there is one Towne called Agnagebooc, wherein are seuentie houses, and two hundred and fortie men, with two Sagamos, the one called Mayrmet, the other Casberokenit. 9.

Ashamahaga.

Seuen dayes iourney to the South-west of Ashamahaga there is another Riuer, that is sixe fathoms to the entrance: This Riuer is named Shawakotoc, and is halfe a myle broad; it runneth into the Land fiftie dayes iourney; but foure dayes from the entrance it is so narrow, that the Trees growing on each side doe so crosse with their boughes and bodies on the other, as it permitteth not any meanes to passe with Boates that way: for which cause the Inhabitants that on any occasion are to trauell to the head, are forced to goe by Land, taking their way vpon the West side. At the end of this Riuer there is a Lake of foure dayes iourney long, and two dayes broad, wherein are two Ilands. To the North-West foure daies iourney from this Lake, at the head of this Riuer Shawakotoc there is a small Prouince, which they call Crokemago, wherein is one Towne. This is the Westermost Riuer of the Dominions of Bashabez, and Quibiquisson the Westermost. 10.

Shawakotoc.

A Lake foure dayes iourney long & 2. broad

To the Reader.

I Haue thought good to adde to the English Plantations in New England, those in the neighbour Countrey of New-found-land. This was first discouered, Ann. 1497. by S. Sebastian Cabot, set forth by King Henry the seuenth: the Voyages followed of M. Rut, Albert de Prato, M. Hore, and others. Ann. 1583. actuall and formall possession, was taken in the right of Queene Elizabeth of glorious memory, and her Successours, by that memorable Knight, Sir Humfrey Gilbert (see sup. lib. 4. ca. 13.) And in the yeere, 1609. M. Iohn Guy of Bristoll did write a Treatise to animate the English to plant there, a written Copy whereof I haue. A. 1610. It pleased his most excellent Maiestie to grant a Patent for a Plantation, part whereof (the whole might seeme too long for our purpose) we haue inserted.

CHAP. VII.

The beginning of the Patent for New-found-land; and the Plantation there made by the English, 1610, deliuered in a Letter dated thence from M. GVY, to M. SLANY: Also of the weather the three first Winters, and of Captaine WESTON: with other remarkable Occurrents.

IAMES, by the Grace of GOD, of Great Brittaine, France, and Ireland King, Defendour of the Faith, &c. To all people to whom these Presents shall come, greeting. Know yee, whereas diuers Our louing and well disposed Subiects, are desirous to make Plantation to inhabite and to establish a Colony or Colonies, in the Southerne and Easterne parts of the Countrey, and Ile or Ilands, commonly called New-found-land, vnto the Coast and Harbour, whereof the Subiects of this our Realme of England haue for the space of fiftie yeeres and vpwards, yeerely vsed to resort in no small numbers to fish; intending by such Plantation and inhabiting, both to secure and make safe the said Trade of Fishing to Our Subiects for euer; And also, to make some commendable benefit for the vse of mankind by the lands and profits thereof, which hitherto from the beginning (as it seemeth manifest) hath remained vnprofitable: And for better performance of such their purpose and intentions, haue humbly besought Our Regall Authoritie and assistance; Wee being well assured that the same Land or Countrey adioyning to the foresaid Coasts, where Our Subiects vse to fish, remaineth so destitute and desolate of inhabitance, that scarce any one Sauage person hath in many yeeres beene seene in the most parts thereof: And well knowing that the same lying, and being so vacant, is as well for the reasons aforesaid, as for many other reasons very commodious for Vs and Our Dominions: And that by the Law of Nature, and Nations, We may of Our Royall Authoritie, possesse our selues, and make graunt thereof, without doing wrong to any other Prince, or State, considering they cannot iustly pretend any Soueraigntie or Right thereunto, in respect that the same remaineth so vacant and not actually possessed, and inhabited by any Christian, or other whomsoeuer. And therefore, thinking it a matter and action well beseeming a Christian King, to make true vse of that which God from the beginning created for mankind; And therefore intending, not onely to worke and procure the benefit and good of many of Our Subiects, but principally to increase the knowledge of the Omnipotent God, and the propagation of Our Christian Faith, haue graciously accepted of their said intention, and suit. And therefore doe of Our speciall grace, certaine knowledge, and meere motion, for Vs, Our Heires, and Successors, giue, graunt, and confirme by these Presents, vnto Our right deere, and right welbeloued Cousin, and Counsellor, Henry Earle of Northampton, Keeper of Our Priuy Seale, and to Our trustie and right welbeloued Sir Laurence Tanfield Knight, chiefe Baron of Our Exchequer, Sir Iohn Dodridge Knight, one of Our Sergeants at Law, Sir Francis Bacon Knight, Our Sollicitor Generall, Sir Daniel Dun, Sir Walter Cope, Sir Pierciuall Willoughby, and Sir Iohn Constable Knights, Iohn Weld Esquire, William Freeman, Ralph Freeman, Iohn Slany, Humfrey Slany, William Turner, Robert Kirkam Gentlemen, Iohn Weld Gentleman, Richard Fishburne, Iohn Browne, Humfrey Spencer, Thomas Iuxon, Iohn Stokely, Ellis Crispe, Thomas Alport, Francis Needeham, William Ienes, Thomas Langton, Phillip Gifford, Iohn Whittingam, Edward Allen, Richard Bowdler, Thomas Ienes, Simon Stone, Iohn Short, Iohn Vigars, Iohn Iuxon, Richard Hobby, Robert Alder, Anthony Haueland, Thomas Aldworth, William Lewis, Iohn Guy, Richard Hallworthy, Iohn Langton, Humfrey Hooke, Phillip Guy, William Meredith, Abram Ienings, and Iohn Dowghtie, their Heires and Assignes. And to such, and so many as they doe, or shall hereafter admit to be ioyned with them in forme hereafter in these Presents expressed, whether they goe in their persons to bee planted in the said Plantation, or whether they goe not, but doe aduenture their Monyes, Goods, and Chattels, that they shall bee one Body, or Comminaltie perpetuall, and shall haue perpetuall succession, and one common Seale to serue for the said Body, and Comminaltie; And that they, and their successours shall be knowne, called, and incorporated by the name of the Treasurer, and the Company of Aduenturers, and Planters of the Citie of London, and Bristoll, for the Colony or Plantation in New-found-land, and that they, and their successours shall bee from henceforth for euer inabled, to take, require, and purchase by the name aforesaid (Licence for the same, from Vs, Our Heires and Successours first had, and obtained) any manner of Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, Goods, and Chattels, within Our Realme of England, and Dominion of Wales, and that they, and their successours shall bee likewise inabled by the name aforesaid, to plead and be impleaded, before any Our Iudges, or Iustices in any of Our Courts, and in any Actions and Suits whatsoeuer. And Wee doe also of Our said speciall grace, certaine knowledge, and meere motion, for Vs, Our Heires, and Successours, giue, grant, and confirme vnto the said Treasurer and Company, and their Successours, vnder the reseruations, limitations, and declarations hereafter expressed, all that part and portion on of the said Countrie, commonly called New found land, which is situate, lying and being to the Southward of the paralell line to be conceiued to passe by the Cape or hedland, commonly called or knowne by the name of Bonewist Inclusiue, which Cape or hedland is to be Northward of the Bay, commonly called Trinity Bay, and also which is situate, lying, and being to the Eastward of the Meridian line, to be conceiued to passe by the Cape, or headland, commonly called or knowne by the name of Cape Saulta Maria, or Cape Saint Maries Inclusiue, which Cape or headland is to be Eastward of the Bay commonly called the Bay of Placentia, together with the Seas and Hands lying within ten leagues of any part of the Sea coast of the Countrie aforesaid, and also all those Countries, Lands, and Ilands commonly called Newfound land, which are situate betweene forty and six degrees of Northerly latitude, and two and fifty degrees of the like latitude, and also all the Lands, Soyle, Grounds, Hauens, Ports, Riuers, Mines, as well royall Mines of Gold and Siluer, as other Mines, Minerals, Pearles, and precious stones, Woods, Quarries, Marshes, Waters, Fishings, Hunting, Hawking, Fowling, Commodities, and Hereditaments whatsoeuer, together with all Prerogatiues, Iurisdictions, Royalties, Priuiledges, Franchises, and Preheminencies, within any the said Territories, and the precincts thereof whatsoeuer, and thereto or there abouts, both by Sea and Land, being, or in any sort belonging or appertaining; and which wee by our Letters Patents may or can grant, and in as ample manner and sort, as We or any of Our Noble progenitors haue heretofore granted to any Company, body politique or Corporate, or to any Aduenturer or Aduenturers, Vndertaker, or Vndertakers of any Discouery, Plantation, or Traficke, of, in or into any foraine parts whatsoeuer, and in as large and ample manner, as if the same were herein particularly mentioned and expressed. Neuertheless Our will and pleasure is, and We doe by these presents expresse and declare, that there be saued, and reserued vnto all manner of persons of what Nation soeuer, and also to all and euery Our louing Subiects, which doe at this present, or hereafter shall trade, or voyage to the parts aforesaid for Fishing, &c. April. 27. A. Reg. 8.

on

Master IOHN GVY his Letter to Master SEANY Treasurer, and to the Counsell of the New-found-land Plantation.

Right worshipfull, it may please you to vnderstand, that it was the tenth day of this moneth of May before the Barke of Northam, called the Consent, arrined here in New-found-land; notwithstanding that a Ship of Bristoll, called the Lioness, came to this Country the second of May in a moneths space: and the Trial of Dartmouth arrined here before in sixteene dayes: By reason of which stay of the aforesaid Barke, nothing could be done to take any of the places desired: all being possessed before. So that the Ship that commeth, whereof as yet there is no newes, is to trust to the place here, which is reserued for her; which I hope will proue a good place. Some yeeres as great a Voyage hath bin made here, as in any place in this Land: God send her hither in safetie. I haue not yet seene any of the Countrey to the Southward, or Northward of this Bay of Conception since this spring, because I expected daily the arriuall of the Barke, and thought it not fit to be absent herehence vntill she were arrined, and dispatched: but presently vpon her departure, no time, God willing shall be lost. The care that was taken to require generally the Fishermen to assist vs, and to supply our wants, if any should be, was most ioyfull and comfortable to vs, which was most willingly accomplished by the most part of those which I haue yet seene: yet, God be praised, such was the state of all things with vs, as we were in no want of victuals, but had a great remainder, as you shall after vnderstand.

Voyage in eight daies.

Fishermens kinde assistances.

The state of the Autumne and Winter was in these parts of New-found-land after this manner. In both the moneths of October and Nouember, there were scarce six dayes wherin it either freezed or snowed: and that so little, that presently it was thawed and melted with the strength of the Sunne: All the residue of the aforesaid two moneths being both warmer and drier then in England. In December we had sometimes faire weather, sometimes frost and snow, and sometime open weather and raine: for in the latter end it was rainie, and was open weather. All these three moneths the winde was so variable, as it would euery fortnight visite all the points of the Compasse.

State of the weather in Autumne and Winter. I haue by me a written iournall, declaring the winde and weather of euery day from 24. Nouember 1610. till the last of Aprill 1611. but thought it would seeme tedious, the substance thereof being here contained.

The most part of Ianuary and February vnto the middle of March the frost continued: the winde being for the most part Westerly, and now and then Northerly; notwithstanding three or foure times, when the winde was at South, it began to thaw and did raine. That which fell in this season was for the most part Snow, which with the heate of the Sunne would be consumed in the open places within a few dayes. That which abode longest was in February. During this time many dayes the Sun shone warme and bright from morning to night: notwithstanding the length of this frosty weather, small brookes that did run almost in leuell with a slow course, were not the whole winter three nights ouer frozen so thicke, as that the Ice could beare a Dogge to goe ouer it, which I found by good proofe: for euery morning I went to the brooke which runneth by our house to wash. The Snow was neuer aboue eighteene inches thicke generally out of the drift; so that the feare of wanting wood or water neuer tooke hold of vs: for albeit we made no prouision for them, yet at a minute of an houres warning we were furnished where there were Lakes of fresh water ter that stood still and did not run, there it remained frozen able to beare a man almost three moneths, and was not dissolued vntill the middle of Aprill. But where the ayre had entrance and issue out of them, there was no frost. When the winde in the winter time in England is at the North-east one moneth together, the frost is greater, and the cold more sharpe, then it is here at all. There was no moneth in all the winter that some of our company did not trauell in, either by land or by water, and lie abroad and drinke water, in places distant two, three, foure and fiue leagues from our habitation, and sometimes lay in the woods without fire, and receiued no harme. When Aprill came our Spring began, and the first that did bud was the small Resen or the Corinth tree. Our Company was not letted in working abroad, & in the woods and open ayre fifteene dayes the whole winter. We neuer wanted the company of Rauens and small Birds: So that the doubt that hane bin made of the extremity of the winter season in these parts of New-found-land are found by our experience causelesse; and that not onely men may safely inhabit here without any neede of Stone, but Nauigation may be made to and fro from England to these parts at any time of the yeare.

Moderate Frosts.

Spring.

Concerning the healthfulnesse of these Countries, we hauing bin now more then ten moneths vpon this Voyage, of nine and thirty persons, which was all our number which wintered here, there are wanting onely foure; whereof one Thomas Percy Sawyer died the eleuenth of December of thought, hauing slaine a man in Rochester; which was the cause, being vnknowne vnto mee vntill a day before he died, that he came this Voyage. And one other, called Iohn Morris Tyler, miscarried the first of February by reason of a bruse. The third, called Marmaduke Whittington, was neuer perfectly well after he had the small Poxe, which he brought out of Bristoll with him, who died the fifteenth of February. And the fourth, called William Stone, hauing at the first onely a stiffenesse in one of his knees, kept his bed ten weekes, and would neuer stirre his body, which lasinesse brought him to his end, who died the thirteenth of Aprill. Of the rest foure or fiue haue bin sicke, some three moneths, and some foure moneths; who now are better then they were, except one. All of them, if they had had as good will to worke, as they had good stomackes to their victuals, would long since haue bin recouered. One Richard Fletcher, that is Master Pilot here and a director of the Fishing, reported vnto me, that he was one of the company consisting of forty persons, that went in a drumbler of Ipswich, called the Amitie, to the North part of Ireland about eleuen yeeres agoe from London in the late Queenes seruice, vnder the charge of one Captaine Fleming, and continued there the space of two yeares: In which time two and thirty died of the Scurnie, and that onely eight of them returned home, whereof the said Richard Fletcher was one. So that the accident of death or sicknesse of any persons in these our parts of New-found-land is not to argue any vnhealthfulnesse of this Country, no more then Ireland is to be discredited by the losse of those two and thirty men: notwithstanding that there were to be had fresh victuals and many other helpes, which this Country as yet hath not, but in good time may haue.

Healthfulnes.

Homicide dieth for thought

From the sixt of October vntill the sixteenth of May our Company had bin imployed in making of a Store-house to hold our prouisions, and a dwelling house for our habitation, which was finished about the first of December; with a square inclosure of one hundred and twenty foot long and nintie foot broad, compassing these two houses, and a worke house to worke dry in to make Boates or any other worke out of the raine: and three peeces of Ordnance are planted there to command the Harboroughs vpon a platforme made of great posts, and raile, and great Poles sixteene foot long set vpright round about, with two Flankers to scoure the quarters. A Bont about twelue tuns big with a decke is almost finished to saile and row about the headlands: six fishing Boates and Pinnesses: a second saw-pit at the fresh Lake of two miles in length and the sixt part of a mile broad, standing within twelue score of our habitation, to saw the timber to be had out of the fresh Lake, in keeping two paire of Sawyers to saw plankes for the said buildings, in ridding of some grounds to sow Corne and garden seedes: in cutting of wood for the Collier, in coling of it: in working at the Smiths Forge Iron works for all needfull vses: in cosling both by Land and Sea to many places within this Bay of Conception: in making the frame of timber of a farre greater and fairer house, then that which as yet we dwell in, which is almost finished, and diuers other things. We haue sowed all sorts of graine this Spring, which prosper well hitherto. Our Goates haue lined here all this winter; and there is one lustie Kidde, which was yeaned in the dead of winter. Our Swine prosper. Pidgens and Conies will endure exceeding well. Our Poultrie haue not onely laied Egges plentifully, but there are eighteene yong Chickins, that are a wecke old, besides others that are a hatching.

Imployment of the Colony

English Corne, Fowle and Cattle prosper there.

The feare of wilde Beasts we haue found to be almost needelesse. Our great Ram-Goate was missing fifteene dayes in October, and came home well againe, and is yet well with vs. If the industry of men and presence of domesticall Cattle were applied to the good of this Countrey of New-found-land, there would shortly arise iust cause of contentment to the inhabitants thereof. Many of our Masters and Sea-faring men seeing our safetie, and hearing what a milde winter we had, and that no Ice had bin seene fleeting in any of the Bayes of this Countrey all this yeare (notwithstanding that then met one hundred and fifty leagues off in the Sea great store of Ilands of Ice) doe begin to be in loue with the Countrey, and doe talke of comming to take land here to inhabit: falling in the reckoning aswell of the commoditie that they may make by the banke fishing, as by the husbandry of the Land, besides the ordinary fishing. At the Greene Bay, where some of our Company were a fishing in Nouember, they report there is great store of good grounds without woods, and there is a thousand acres together which they say may be mowed this yere. There is great store of Deere, whereof they saw some diuers times, and twice they came within shot of them; and the Greyhound, who is lustie, had a course, but could not get vpon them. But neerer vnto Cape Razo, Reuouse, Medow.

Deere.

Digitized by Google

Reuonse, and Trepasse there is great quantitie of open ground and Stagges. It is most likely that all the Sackes will be departed out of England before the returne of this our Barke, which shall not make any matter; because I am now of opinion that nothing should be sent hither before the returne of the Ships from fishing. For as concerning sending of Cattle, it will be best that it be deferred vntill the next Spring. And concerning Victuals, in regard of the quantity, we haue of it remaining of old, together with that that is come new, as with the dry fish that here we may be stored with, I am in good hope there will not want any to last till this time twelue moneths. And according to the victuals which shall be found at the end of the fishing, the number of persons that shall remaine here all the next winter shall be fitted, that there shall not want: notwithstanding about Allhollantide, or the beginning of December, a Ship may be sent, such a one as our Fleming was with Salt from Rochel; for at any time of the winter Ships may as well goe and come hither, as when they doe, especially before Ianuary. This Summer I purpose to see most places betweene Cape Rase, Placentia, and Bona vista, and at the returne of the fishing Ships to entertaine a fit number of men to maintaine here the winter; and to set ouer them, and to take the care of all things here, with your patience, one Master William Colton, a discreete yong man, and my brother Philip Guy, who haue wintered with me, and haue promised me to vndertake this charge vntill my returne the next Spring, or till it shall be otherwise disposed of by you, and then together with such of the company as are willing to goe home, and such others as are not fit longer to be entertained here, I intend to take passage in the fishing Ships, and so returne home: And then betweene that and the Spring to be present, to giue you more ample satisfaction in all things, and to take such further resolution, as the importance of the enterprise shall require: wherein you shall finde me alwayes as ready as euer I haue bin to proceede and goe forward, God willing. And because at my comming home it will be time enough for mee to lay before you mine opinion touching what is to be vndertaken the next yeare, I will forbeare now to write of it; because you should be the sooner aduertised of our welfare: and because such of the Company as are sent home both for their owne good, and that the vnprofitable expence of victuals and wages might cease: I haue taken little or nothing backe, that the said Company might the better be at ease in the hold. Onely there is sent three hogsheads of Charcoles: where Numero 1°. is, they are of Burch: n°. 2°. is, of Pine and Spruce, n°. 3°. is of Firre, being the lightest wood, yet it maketh good Coles, and is vsed by our Smith. I send them because you shall see the goodnesse of each kinde of Cole. Also I send you an Hogshead of the Skinnes and Furres of such Beasts as haue bin taken here, the particulers whereof appeare in the Bill of lading.

While I was writing I had newes of the Vineyard, the Ship which you send to fishing, to haue bin in company with another Ship that is arriued on this side of the Banke, and that the Master intended to goe to Farillon or Fer-land: God send her in safety. So praying God for the prosperity of your Worships, and the whole Company, with hope that his diuine Maiestie which hath giuen vs so good a beginning, will alwayes blesse our proceedings: my dutie most humbly remembred, I take my leaue. Dated in Cupers Cous the sixteenth of May, 1611.

I haue also a Iournall of the winde and weather from the latter end of August 1611. till Iune 1612. written by Master William Colston; and deliuered to Master Iohn Guy, Gouernour of the English Colony in Newfoundland, at his returne from England thither, Iune the seuenth 1612. By which it appeareth that the weather was somewhat more intemperate then it had beene the yeare before, but not intolerable, nor perhaps so bad as we haue it sometims in England. Their Dogges killed a Wolfe, Otters, Sables, &c. Captaine Easton a Pirat was troublesome to the English, and terrible to the French there: of whom I haue added this Letter; for the Diarie of the weather and occurrents each day would be very tedious.

To Master IOHN SLANY Treasurer, and others of the Councell, and Company of the New-found-land Plantation, the twenty nine of Iuly 1612.

Right Worshipfull, by my last of the seuenteenth of Iune, I wrote you of the estate then, of all matters here, by the Holland Ship, which (I hope) is long since safely arriued, together with Master Colston, who hath (I doubt not) made by word of mouth, full relation of all matters. Because the proceedings of one Captaine Peter Easton a Pirate, and his company since, are most fit to be knowne, before I touch our Plantation businesse, you shall vnderstand, what they haue bin vnto this time: vntill the seuenteenth of this present, the said Captaine Easton remained in Harbor de Grace, there trimming, and repairing his Shipping, and commanding not onely the Carpenters of each Ship to doe his businesse, but hath taken victuals, munition, and necessaries from euery Ship, together with about one hundred men out of the Bay, to man his Ships, being now in number six. He purposed to haue before he goeth, as is said, out of the land fiue hundred men, while he remained there, two seuerall Companies to the number of about one hundred and eightie persons to each Company, being discontented, stole away from him in a Shallop, and tooke two Ships that were fishing in Trinitie Bay, one belonging to Barnstable, and one other to Plimmouth, and so

Digitized by Google

so intend, to begin to be new heads, of that damnable course of life. As I sailed from hence towards Renoose, in a small Barke, I fell into one of their hands: and one of my company was hurt with a Musket. there was one of their crew that wintered with me here the first yeare, by whose meanes, and because I was in the Barke, they made shew, that they were sorry that they had medled with vs: And so they departed from vs, without comming aboord. That which they sought after was men, to increase their number. Before the said Captaine Eastons departure, he sent three Ships into Trinitie Bay, to store himselfe with victuals, munition, and men, who are said to be worse vsed, then the Ships here, he taketh much ordnance from them. The said Easton was lately at Saint Iones, and is now, as farre as I can learne, at Feriland, where he taketh his pleasure, and thereabouts, the rest are to meete him. It is given out, that we will send one Captaine Haruy in a Ship to Ireland, to vnderstand newes about his pardon, which if he can obtaine in that large and ample manner as he expecteth, then he giueth out, that he will come in: otherwise, it is thought, that he will get Protection of the Duke of Florence, and that in his course herehence, he will honer about the Westwards of the Ilands of the Azores, to see whether he can light vpon any of the Plate fleete, or any good rich bootie, before his comming in. Albeit, he hath so prevailed here to the strengthening of himselfe, and incouraging of others to attempt the like hereafter: yet, were there that course taken, as I hope shall be, it is a most easie matter to represse them.

I haue also a Diarie of the winter weather, and obseruations of occurrents from August 1612. till Aprill 1613. December was very full of Snow (for I dare not present the whole) and the fresh-water Lake was frozen ouer, and the Frost and Snow by the tenth of that moneth, as in any part of the two former places. Ianuary was much milder till the foureteenth, from thence it was very frosty. Their Beere was frozen, and they dranke halfe water (an ill remedy to cold.) The Cattell did not well thriue, as comming out of a Countrie not so cold. And therefore Irish Cattell (where the winter is warmer) are not so fit to be transported hither. George Danis died of the Scuruie, and after him Edward Garton, Edward Hartland, Iohn Tucker, and one and twenty were sicke (most of the Scuruie) the whole Colonie was sixtie two. February was much warmer and more temperate. Toby and Grigge died in March, the rest recouered. Turneps being found as good to recouer from the Scuruie as the Anoda tree to Iacques Cartiers Company. Nicholas Guies wife was deliuered of a lusty boy March 27. The Easterly windes and some Currents brought Ilands of Ice from the North Seas, which made the weather colder that Spring then in the depth of winter when the same windes blowed, namely East and Northeast, those Ilands being blowne into the Baies, and the windes from them euen in Aprill very sharpe; and the Snow on the tenth of Aprill as thicke as any time that yeare.

In October Iohn Guy with thirteene others in the Indeauour, and fiue in the Shallop, went vpon Discouery. At Mount Eagle Bay they found store of Scuruy-grasse on an Iland. In the South bottome of Trinitie Bay, which they called Sauage Harbour, they found Sauages houses, no people in them; in one they found a Copper Kettle very bright (you shall haue it as one of them writ it in his owne tearmes) a furre Goune of Elke skin, some Seale skins, an old saile and a fishing reele. Order was taken that nothing should be diminished, and because the Sauages should know that some had bin there, euery thing was remoued out of his place, and brought into one of the Cabins, and laid orderly one vpon the other, and the Kettle hanged ouer them, wherein there was put some Bisket, and three or foure Amber Beades. This was done to begin to win them by faire meanes. This time of the yeare they liue by hunting; for wee found twelue Elkes hoofes, that were lately killed. A little peece of flesh was brought away, which was found to be a Beuer Cod, which is forthcomming to be seene. Their Houses there were nothing but Poles set in round forme meeting all together aloft, which they couer with Deere skins, they are about ten foote broad, and in the middle they make their fire: one of them was couered with a saile, which they had gotten from some Christian.

Copper kettle.

Their houses described.

All things in this manner left, euery one returned by the Moone-light, going by the brinke of the Lake vnto the enterance of the made way: and a little before they came thither, they passed by a new Sauage house almost finished, which was made in a square forme with a small roofe, and so came to the Barke. They haue two kinde of Oares, one is about foure foot long of one peece of Firre; the other is about ten foot long made of two peeces, one being as long, big, and round as a halfe Pike made of Beech wood, which by likelihood they made of a Biskin Oare, the other is the blade of the Oare, which is let into the end of the long one slit, and whipped very strongly. The short one they vse as a Paddle, and the other as an Oare. The thirtieth, without any further businesse with the Sauages, we departed thence to the Northerne side of Trinity Bay, and anchored all that night vnder an Iland. The one and thirtieth, we rowed vnto an harbour, which now is called Allhallowes; which hath adioyning vnto it very high land.

Their Oares.

November the sixt, two Canoas appeared, and one man alone comming towards vs with a Flag in his hand of a Wolfes skin, shaking it and making a loud noise, which we tooke to be for a parley: whereupon a white Flag was put out, and the Barke and Shallop rowed towards them, which the Sauages did not like of, and so tooke them to their Canoas againe, and were going away: whereupon the Barke wheazed vnto them, and flourished the Flag of truce, and came to anker anker, which pleased them, and then they staied: presently after the Shallop landed Master Whittington with the Flagge of truce, who went towards them. Then they rowed into the shoare with one Canoa, the other standing aloofe off, and landed two men, one of them hauing the white skin in his hand, and comming towards Master Whittington, the Sauage made a loud speech, and shaked the skin, which was answered by Master Whittington in like manner, and as the Sauage drew neere, he threw downe the white skin on the ground, the like was done by Master Whittington; whereupon both the Sauages passed ouer a little water streame towards Master Whittington, dancing, leaping, and singing, and comming together, the foremost of them presented vnto him a chaine of leather full of small Periwinckle shels, a spitting knife, and a Feather that stacke in his eare: the other gaue him an Arrow without a head; and the former was requited with a linnen Cap, and a hand Towell, who put presently the linnen Cap vpon his head: and to the other he gaue a Knife: and after hand in hand, they all three did sing and dance: vpon this, one of our company called Francis Tipton went ashoare, vnto whom one of the Sauages came running, and gaue him a Chaine, such as is before spoken of, who was gratified by Francis Tipton with a Knife and a small peece of Brasse. Then all foure together danced, laughing and making signes of ioy and gladnesse, sometimes striking the brests of our company, and sometimes their owne. When signes were made that they should be willing to suffer two of our Company more to come on shoare, for two of theirs more to be landed, and that Bread and Drinke should be brought ashoare, they made likewise signes that they had in their Canoas meate also to eate: vpon this the Shallop rowed aboord, and brought Iohn Guy and Master Teage a shoare, who presented them with a Shirt, two table Napkins, and a Hand-towell, giuing them Bread, Butter, and Reasons of the Sunne to eate, and Beere, and Aquanita to drinke: and one of them blowing in the Aquanita Bottle, that made a sound, which they fell all into a laughing at. After, Master Croote and Iohn Crouther came ashoare, whom they went to salute giuing them shell Chaines, who bestowed Gloues vpon them. One of the Sauages that came last ashoare, came walking with his Oare in his hand, and seemed to haue some command ouer the rest, and behaued himselfe ciuilly: For when meate was offered him, he drew off his Mitten from his hand before hee would receiue it, and gaue an Arrow for a present without a head: who was requited with a dozen of Points. After they had all eaten and drunke, one of them went to their Canoa, and brought vs Deeres flesh dried in the smoake or winde, and drawing his Knife from out of his necke, hee cut euery man a peece, and that sauoured very well. At the first meeting, when signes were made of meate to eate, one of the Sauages presently ran to the banke side, and pulled vp a roote, and gaue it to Master Whittington, which the other Sauage perceiuing to be durtie tooke it out of his hand, and went to the water to wash it, and after diuided it among the foure, it tasted very well: hee that came ashoare with the Oare in his hand, went and tooke the white skin that they hailed vs with, and gaue it to Master Whittington; and presently after they did take our white Flagge with them in the Canoa, and made signes vnto vs that we should repaire to our Barke, and so they put off, for it was almost night.

Sauages.

In the two Canoas there were eight men, if none were women (for commonly in euery Canoa there is one woman) they are of a reasonable stature, of an ordinary middle size, they goe bare-headed, wearing their haire somewhat long, but round: they haue no Beards; behinde they haue a great locke of haire platted with feathers, like a Hawkes Lure, with a feather in it standing vpright by the crowne of the head, and a small locke platted before, a short Gown made of Stags skins, the Furre innermost, that ranne downe to the middle of their legges, with sleeues to the middle of their arme, and a Beuer skin about their necke, was all their apparell, saue that one of them had shooes and Mittens, so that all went bare-legged, and most bare-foote. They are full eyed, of a blacke colour; the colour of their haire was diuers, some blacke, some browne, and some yellow, and their faces something flat and broad, red with Oker, as all their apparell is, and the rest of their body: they are broad brested, and bould, and stand very vpright. Their fashions.

Their Canoa, are about twenty foote long, and foure foote and a halfe broad in the middle aloft, and for their Keele and timbers, they haue thin light peeces of dry Firre, rended as it were lathes: and instead of Boords, they vse the outer Burch barke, which is thin, and hath many folds, sowed together with a thred made of a small root quartered. They will carry foure persons well, and weigh not one hundred weight: they are made in forme of a new Moone, stem and sterne alike, and equally distant from the greatest breadth: from the stem and sterne here riseth a yard high a light thin staffe whipped about with small rootes, which they take hold by to bring the Canoa ashoare, that serueth instead of ropes, and a harbour, for euery place is to them a harborough; where they can goe ashoare themselues, they take aland with them their Canoa: and will neuer put to Sea but in a calme, or very faire weather: in the middle the Canoa is higher a great deale then in the Bowe and quarter, they be all bearing from the Keele to the portlesse not with any circular line but with a right line. They had made a Tilt with a Saile that they got from some Christian, and pitched a dozen poles in the ground neere, on which were hanged diuers Furs, and chaines made of shels, which at that instant we fell not in the reckoning to what intent it was done, but after it came to our minde, as hereafter you shall perceiue. Their Canoas.

The

The seuenth day we spent in washing, and in beginning a house to shelter vs when we should come thither hereafter, vpon a small Iland of about fiue acres of ground, which is ioyned to the maine with a small Beech: for any bartering with the Sauages there cannot be a fitter place.

The eighth day it began to freeze, and there was thin Ice ouer the sound; and because we heard nothing more of the Sauages we began to return out of the Sounds, & comming to the place which the Sauages had made two dayes before fire in, wee found all things remaining there, as it was when we parted, viz. an old Boat saile, three or foure shell chaines, about twelue Furres, of Beauers most, a Fox skin, a Sable skin, a Bird skin, and an old Mitten, set euery one vpon a seuerall pole: whereby we remained satisfied fully, that they were brought thither of purpose to barter with vs, and that they would stand to our courtesie to leaue for it what wee should thinke good. Because we were not furnished with fit things for to trucke, we tooke onely a Beauer skin, a Sable skin, and a Bird skin, leauing for them a Hatchet, a Knife, and foure Needles threaded. Master Whitsuntons had a paire of Cizzars which he left there for a small Beauers skin, all the rest we left there vntouched, and came that night to the harbour that we were in at our entring, which we call Flag-staffe Harbour, because we found there the Flag-staffe throwne by the Sauages away. These Sauages by all likelihood were animated to come vnto vs, by reason that wee tooke nothing from them at Sauage Bay, and some of them may be of those which dwell there. For in no other place where we were could we perceiue any tokens of any aboade of them, &c.

Chap. VIII.

Captaine Richard Whitbovrne's Voyages to New-found-land, and obseruations there, and thereof; taken out of his Printed Booke.

IT it well knowne, that my breeding and course of life hath beene such, as that I haue long time set many people on worke, and spent most of my daies in trauell, specially in Merchandizing, and Sea-Voyages. I haue beene often in France, Spaine, Italy, Portugall, Sauoy, Denmarke, Norway, Spruceland, the Canaries, and Soris Ilands: and for the New-found-land, it is almost so familiarly knowne to me as my owne Countrey.

In the yeere 1588. I serued vnder the then Lord Admirall, as Captaine in a Ship of my owne set forth at my charge against the Spanish Armado: and after such time as that seruice was ended, taking my leaue of his Honour, I had his fauourable Letters to one Sir Robert Dennis, in the Countie of Deuon, Knight; whereby there might be some course taken, that the charge as well of my owne Ship, as also of two other, and a Pinnace, with the victuals, and men therein imploied, should not be any way burthensome to me. Wherein there was such order giuen by the then right Honorable Lords of the priuie Counsell, that the same was well satisfied: which seruice is to be seene recorded in the Booke at White-Hall.

Now to expresse some of my Voyages to the New-found-land, which make most for the present purpose. My first Voyage thither, was about fortie yeeres since, in a worthie Shippe, of the burthen of three hundred tun, set forth by one Master Cotton of South-hampton: wee were bound to the Grand Bay (which lieth on the North side of that Land) purposing there to trade then with the Sauage people (for whom we carried sundry commodities) and to kill Whales, and to make Traine Oyle, as the Biscainers doe there yeerely in great abundance. But this our intended Voyage was ouerthrowne, by the indiscretion of our Captaine, and faint-hartednesse of some Gentlemen of our Companie: whereupon we set saile from thence, and bare with Trinity Harbour in New-found-land: where we killed great store of Fish, Deere, Beares, Beauers, Seales, Otters, and such like, with abundance of Sea-fowle; and so returning for England, wee arriued safe at South-hampton.

In a Voyage to that Countrie, about six and thirtie yeeres since, I had then the command of a worthy Ship of two hundred and twenty tun, set forth by one Master Crooke of South-hampton: At that time Sir Humfrey Gilbert, a Deuonshire Knight, came thither with two good Ships and a Pinnace, and brought with him a large Patent, from the late most renowned Queene Elizabeth, and in her name tooke possession of that Countrie, in the Harbour of Saint Iohns, whereof I was an eye-witnesse. He sailed from thence towards Virginia; and by reason of some vnhappy direction in his course, the greatest Ship he had strucke vpon Shelues, on the Coast of Canadie, and was there lost, with most part of the company in her: And he himselfe being then in a small Pinnace of twenty tun, in the company of his Vice-Admirall (one Captaine Hayes) returning towards England, in a great storme, was ouerwhelmed with the Seas, and so perished.

In another Voyage I made thither, about foure and thirty yeeres past, wherein I had the command of a good Ship, partly mine one: at that time own Sir Bernard Drake of Deuonshire, Knight, came came thither with a Commission, and hauing diuers good Ships vnder his command, hee there took many Portugall Ships laden with Fish, and brought them into England as Prizes: Omitting to speak of other Voyages, I made thither, during the late Queens raign, I will descend to later times.

In the yeere 1611. being in New-found-land, at which time that famous Arch-Pirate, Peter Easton, came there, and had with him ten saile of good Ships well furnished and very rich, I was kept eleuen weekes vnder his command, and had from him many golden promises, and much wealth offered to be put into my hands, as it is well knowne: I did perswade him much to desist from his euill course; his intreaties then to me, being that I would come for England, to some friends of his, and sollicite them to become humble petitioners to your Maiestie for his pardon: but hauing no warrant to touch such goods, I gaue him thankes for his offer; onely I requested him to release a Ship that he had taken vpon the Coast of Guinnie, belonging to one Captaine Rashly of Foy in Cornewall; a man whom I knew but onely by report: which he accordingly released. Whereupon I prouided men, victuals, and a fraught for the said Ship, and so sent her home to Dartmouth in Deuon, though I neuer had so much as thankes for my kindenesse therein. And so leauing Easton, I came for England, and gaue notice of his intention, letting passe my Voyage I intended for Naples, and lost both my labour and charges: for before my arriuall, there was a pardon granted, and sent him from Ireland. But Easton houering with those ships and riches vpon the Coast of Barbary, as he promised, with a longing desire, and full expectation to be called home, lost that hope by a too much delaying of time by him who carried the Pardon. Whereupon he sailed to the Straights of Gibraltar, and was afterwards entertained by the Duke of Sauoy, vnder whom he liued rich.

I was there also in the yeere 1614. when Sir Henry Mainwaring was vpon that Coast, with fiue good Ships strongly prouided: he caused me to spend much time in his company, and from him I returned into England, although I was bound from thence to Marsellis, to make sale of such goods as I then had, and other imploiments, &c.

In the yeere 1615. I returned againe to New-found-land, carrying with mee a Commission out of the high Court of Admiraltie, vnder the great Seale thereof, authorising me to empannell Iuries, and to make inquirie vpon Oath, of sundry abuses and disorders committed amongst Fishermen yeerly vpon that Coast, and of the fittest means to redresse the same, with some other points, hauing a more particular relation to the Office of the Lord Admirall.

What was then there done, by vertue of that Commission, which was wholly executed at my owne charge, hath bin at large by me already certified into the high Court of Admiraltie. Neuertheless, seeing the same hath beene ouerslipt euer since, & not produced those good effects which were expected, I will, in some conuenient place of this Discourse, set downe a briefe collection of some part of my endeuours spent in that seruice; not doubting but it will be as auaileable for the furtherance of our intended designe, as any other reason I shall deliuer.

In the yeere 1616. I had a Ship at New-found-land of a hundred tun, which returning laden from thence, being bound for Lisbone, was met with by a French Pirate of Rochell, one Daniel Tibolo, who rifled her, to the ouerthrow and losse of my Voyage, in more then the summe of 860. pounds, and cruelly handled the Master and the Company that were in her; and although I made good proofe thereof at Lisbone, and represented the same also to this Kingdome, as appertained, after my returne from thence; yet for all this losse, I could neuer haue any recompence.

Shortly after my returne from Lisbone, I was sent for by a Gentleman, who about a yeere before, by a grant from the Patentees, had vndertaken to settle people in New-found-land; he acquainted me with his designes, & after some conference touching the same, we so concluded, that he gaue me a conueiance vnder his hand and seale for the terme of my life, with full power to gouerne within his circuit vpon that Coast; whereupon (being desirous to aduance that worke) in Anno 1618. I sailed thither in a Ship of my owne, which was victualled by that Gentleman, my selfe, and some others. We likewise then did set forth another Ship, for a fishing Voyage, which also carried some victuals for those people which had beene formerly sent to inhabit there: but this Ship was intercepted by an English erring Captain (that went forth with Sir Walter Raleigh) who tooke the Master of her, the Boatswaine, & two other of the best men, with much of her victuals (the rest of the Company for feare running into the woods) and so left the Ship as a Prize, whereby our intended Fishing Voyages of both our Ships were ouerthrown, and the Plantation hindered.

Now seeing it pleased your Maiestie many yeers since, to take good notice of the said New-found-land, and granted a Patent for a Plantation there; wherein many Honorable and worthy mens endeuours, and great charge therein, haue deserued good commendations (as is well known) the which I desire to further with all my best endeuours: and not to disgrace or disable the foundation and Proiects of others, knowing they haue beene greatly hindered by Pirats, and some erring Subiects that haue arriued vpon that Coast; it being indifferent to me, whether there be a new foundation laid, or whether it be builded vpon that which hath already beene begun; so that the Plantation go forward. Yet I may truly say, that hitherto little hath beene performed to any purpose, by such as therein were imploied, worthy the name of a Plantation, or answerable to the expectation, and desert of the Vndertakers; neither haue such good effects followed, as may be expected from a thorow performance hereafter. And seeing that no man hath yet published any fit motiues or inducements, whereby to perswade men to aduenture, or plant there; I haue presumed plainly to lay downe these following reasons, &c.

A Relation of the New-found-land.

The situation of the Country

New-found-land is an Iland, bordering vpon the continent of America, from which it is diuided by the Sea: so far distant, as England is from the neerest part of France, & lieth between 46. and 53. deg. North-latitude: It is neere as spacious as Ireland, and lieth neere the course that Ships vsually hold in their return from the West Indies, and neere halfe the way between Ireland and Virginia. I shall not much neede to commend the wholsome temperature of that Countrie, seeing the greatest part thereof lieth aboue 3. degrees neerer to the South, then any part of England

The temperature of the Ayre.

doth. And it hath bin well approued by some of our Nation, who haue liued there these many yeeres, that euen in the winter it is as pleasant and healthfull as England is. And although the example of one Summer be no certain rule for other yeeres; yet thus much also can I truely affirme, that in the yeere 1615. of the many thousands of English, French, Portugals, and others, that were then vpon that Coast (amongst whom I sailed to and fro more then one hundred leagues) I neither saw nor heard in all that trauell, of any man or boy of either of these Nations, that died there during the whole Voyage; neither was so much as any one of them sicke.

The Inhabitants, with their nature and customes.

The naturall Inhabitants of the Countrie, as they are but few in number, so are they something rude and sauage people; hauing neither knowledge of God, nor liuing vnder any kinde of ciuil gouernment. In their habits, customs & manners, they resemble the Indians of the Continent, from whence (I suppose) they come; they liue altogether in the North and West part of the Country, which is seldome frequented by the English: But the French and Biscaines (who resort thither yeerely for the Whale-fishing, and also for the Cod-fish) report them to be an ingenious and tractable people (being well vsed) they are ready to assist them with great labour and patience, in the killing, cutting, and boyling of Whales; and making the Traine Oyle, without expectation of other reward, then a little Bread, or some such small hire.

The conueniency of the Bayes in that Countrie.

All along the coast of this Countrie, there are many spacious and excellent Bayes, some of them stretching into the land, one towards another, more then twentie leagues. On the East side of the Land, are the Bayes of Trinitie and Conception, which stretcheth themselues towards the South-west: Tor Bay, and Capelin Bay, lying also on the East, stretch reward the West: the Bayes of Trepassey, S. Mary, Barrell, and Plaisance, on the South part of the Land, extend their armes toward the North: The great Bay of S. Peters, lying on the South-west side of the Land, and East, Southerly from the great Riuer of Canada, being about twentie leagues distant, the same stretcheth toward the East. And here I pray you note, that the bottoms of these Bayes doe meete together within the compasse of a small circuit: by meanes whereof our men passing ouer land from Bay to Bay, may with much facilitie discouer the whole Countrie.

From the Bay of S. Peter round about the West side of the Land, till you come to the grand Bay, which lieth on the North-side of the Countrie; and so from thence, till you come round, back to Trinitie Bay, are abundance of large and excellent Bayes; which are the lesse knowne, because not frequented by the English, who seldome fish to the Northward of Trinitie Bay.

Commodious Ilands & worthy Harbours.

And it is to be obserued, that round about the Coast and in the Bayes, there are many small Ilands (none of them further off then a league from the land) both faire and fruitfull: neither doth any one part of the world afford greater store of good Harbours, more free from dangers, or more commodious, then are there built by the admirable workmanship of God; I will onely instance two or three of the chiefest, for some speciall reasons.

Trinitie Harbor affording diuers good commodities.

Trinitie Harbour lyes fortie nine degrees North-latitude, being very commodiously seated to receiue shipping in reasonable weather, both to anchor in, and from thence to saile towards either the East, West, or South: It hath three Armes or Riuers, long and large enough for many hundred sayle of Ships, to moore fast at Anchor neere a mile from the Harbours mouth; close adioyning to the Riuers side, and within the Harbour is much open land, well stored with Grasse sufficient, Winter and Summer, to maintaine great store of ordinary Cattell, besides Hogges and Goats, if such beasts were carried thither: and it standeth North, most of any Harbour in the Land, where our Nation practiseth Fishing; It is neere vnto a great Bay lying on the North-side of it, called the Bay of Flowers, to which place no Ships repaire to fish; partly in regard of sundry Rockes and Ledges lying euen with the water, and full of danger: but chiefly (as I coniecture) because the Sauage people of that Countrey doe there inhabite: many of them secretly euery yeere, come into Trinitie Bay and Harbour, in the night time, purposely to steale Sailes, Lines, Hatchets, Hookes, Knines, and such like. And this Bay is not three English miles ouer Land from Trinitie Bay in many places; which people, if they might bee reduced to the knowledge of the true Trinitie indeed, no doubt but it would bee a most sweet and acceptable sacrifice to God; an euerlasting honour to your Maiesty, and the heauenliest blessing to those poore Creatures, who are buried in their own superstitious

Sauages liuing neer to Trinitie Harbour.

igno-

Digitized by Google

ignorance. The taske thereof would proue easie, if it were but well begun, and constantly seconded by industrious spirits: and no doubt but God himselfe would set his hand to reare vp and aduance so noble, so pious, and so Christian a building.

The bottome of the Bay of Trinity lieth within foure leagues through the land South-west, Southerly from Trinity, as by experience is found, and it comes neere vnto the Bay of Trepassey, and the bottome of some other Bayes, as I haue alreadie touched before. The bottoms of diuers Baies meeting neere together.

Trepassey in like manner is as commodious a Harbour, lying in a more temperate climate, almost in 46. degrees, the like latitude, and is both faire and pleasant, and a wholesome Coast, free from Rockes and Shelues: so that of all other Harbours, it lies the South-most of any Harbour in the Land, and most conueniently to receiue our Shipping to and from Virginia, and the Bermuda Ilands; and also any other Shipping that shall passe to and from the Riuer of Canady and the Coast thereof; because they vsually passe and returne in the sight of the Land of Trepassey; and also for some other purposes, as shall be partly declared in the following discourse. The Harbour of Trepassey lying commodiously.

The soile of this Countrie in the Vallies and sides of the Mountaines, is so fruitfull, as that in diuers places, there the Summer naturally produceth out of the fruitfull wombe of the earth, without the labour of mans hand, great plentie of greene Pease and Fitches, faire, round, full and wholesome as our Fitches are in England: of which I haue there fed on many times: the hawmes of them are good fodder for Cattell and other Beasts in the winter, with the helpe of Hay; of which there may be made great store with little labour in diuers places of the Countrie. The fertilitie of the soyle.

Then haue you there faire Strawberries red and white, and as faire Raspasse berrie, and Gooseberries, as there be in England; as also multitudes of Bilberries, which are called by some Whortes, and many other delicate Berries (which I cannot name) in great abundance. There are also many other fruites, as small Peares, sowre Cherries, Filberds, &c. And of these Berries and Fruits the store is there so great, that the Marriners of my Ship and Barkes Companie, haue often gathered at once, more then halfe an Hogshead would hold; of which diuers times eating their fill, I neuer heard of any man, whose health was thereby any way impaired. Seuerall sorts of Fruits there growing.

There are also Herbes for Sallets and Broth; as Parslie, Alexander, Sorrell, &c. And also Flowers, as the red and white Damaske Rose, with other kindes, which are most beautifull and delightfull, both to the sight and smell. And questionlesse the Countrie is stored with many Physicall herbs and roots, albeit their vertues are not knowne, because not sought after; yet within these few yeeres, many of our Nation finding themselues ill, haue bruised some of the herbs and streined some of the iuice into Beere, Wine or Aquauita; and so by Gods assistance, after a few drinkings, it hath restored them to their former health. The like vertue it hath to cure a wound or any swelling, either by washing the grieued places with some of the herbes boiled, or by applying them so thereunto (plaister-wise) which I haue seene by often experience. This being the naturall fruitfulnesse of the earth, producing such varietie of things, fit for foode, without the labour of man: I might in reason hence inferre, that if the same were manured, and husbanded in some places, as our grounds are, it would be apt to beare Corne, and no lesse fertill then the English soile. Herbs & Flowers both pleasant and medicinable.

But I neede not confine my selfe to probabilities; seeing our men that haue wintred there diuers yeeres, did for a triall and experiment thereof sowe some small quantitie of Corne, which I saw growing verie faire; and they found the increase to be great, and the graine very good; and it is well knowne to me, and diuers that trade there yeerely, how that Cabbage, Carrets, Turneps, Lettice, and such like, proue well there. Corn growing there, yeelding good increase.

In diuers parts of the Countrie there is great store of Deere, & some Hares, manie Foxes, Squirrels, Beuers, Wolues, and Beares, with other sorts of Beasts, seruing as well for necessitie, as for profit and delight. Neither let me seeme ridiculous, to annex a matter of noueltie, rather then weight, to this discourse. In the yeere 1615. it was well knowne to eight and fortie persons of my Companie, and diuers other men, that three seuerall times, the Wolues & Beasts of the Countrie came downe neere them to the Sea-side, where they were labouring about their Fish, howling and making a noise: so that at each time my Mastiffe Dogge went vnto them (as the like in that Countrie hath not been seene) the one began to fawne and play with the other, and so went together into the Woods, and continued with them, euerie of these times, nine or ten daies, and did returne vnto vs without any hurt. Store of Deere & other Beasts. A rare example of the gentle nature of the Beasts of that Country. M. Guies Mastiffe & Greyhound vsed a Wolfe there more doggedly, one pulling out the throat, the other the belly.

The Land Fowle (besides great number of small Birds flying vp and downe, some without name, that liue by scraping their food from the earth in the hardest winter that is) there are also Hawkes great and small, Partridges, Thrush, and Thrussels abundance, very fat. As also Filladies, Nightingales, and such like, that sing most pleasantly. There are also Birds that liue by prey, as Rauens, Gripes, Crowes, &c. For Water-fowle, there is certainly so good, and as much varietie, as in any part of the world; as Geese, Ducks, Pidgeons, Gulls, Penguins, and many other sorts. These Penguins are as bigge as Geese, and flie not, for they haue but a little short wing, and they multiply so infinitely, vpon a certaine flat Iland, that men driue them from thence vpon a boord into their Boates by hundreds at a time; as if God had made the innocencie of so poore a creature Great store of Land Fowle. Water Fowle. Penguins.

ture to become such an admirable instrument for the sustentation of man. There are also God-wits, Curlewes, and a certaine kinde of Fowle are called Oxen and Kine, with such like; which Fowle doe not onely steed those that trade thither greatly for foode, but also they are a great furthering to diuers Ships voyages, because the abundance of them is such, that the Fishermen doe bait their hookes with the quarters of Sea-Fowle on them: and therewith some Ships doe yeerely take a great part of their Fishing Voyages, with some baite, before they can get others.

Fresh water and Springs.

The fresh waters and Springs of that Countrie, are many in number, and withall very pleasant, delightfull and wholesome, that no Countrie in the world hath better. And Fewell for fire is so plentifull, that there is neuer like to be want of that commoditie.

Many sorts of Timber there growing.

In like manner there is great abundance of Trees fit to be imploied in other seruiceable vses: There are Furre and Spruce trees, sound, good, and fit to mast Ships withall; and as commodious for boords and buildings as the Spruce and Firre trees of Norway, and out of these came abundance of Turpentine. No Countrie can shew Pine and Birch trees, of such height and greatnesse as those are there: and doubtlesse, if some store of your Maiesties subiects doe once settle there to liue, and would be industrious to search further, and more throughly into the Countrie, then as yet it hath beene, there might be found many other commodities of good worth. Amongst the which I may not omit, that there is much probabilitie of finding Mines, and making of Iron and Pitch.

Good hope of Mines, and making of Iron and Pitch.

Fish in great abundance.

The Riuers also and Harbors are generally stored with delicate Fish, as Salmons, Pearles, Eeles, Herring, Mackerell, Flounders, Launce, Capelin, Cod, and Troutes the fairest, fattest and sweetest, that I haue seene in any part of the world. The like for Lobsters, Crabfish, Muskles, Hens, and other varietie of Shel-fish great store. And also obserue here, that in these places there is vsually store of the spawne and frie of seuerall sorts of fishes: whereby the Sea-fowle liue so fat as they are there in the winter: And likewise the Beuers, Otters, and such like, that seeke their foode in the Ponds, and fresh Riuers. The Seas likewise all along the Coast, doe plentifully abound in other sorts of fish, as Whales, Spanish Mackerell, Dorrell, Pales, Herring, Hogs, Porposes, Seales, and such like royall fish, &c.

Cod-fishing a great hope of benefit therefrom.

The benefit arising to France, Spaine and Italy from fishing vpon those coasts.

But the chiefe commodity of New-found-land yet knowne, and which is growne to be a setled trade, and that may be much bettered by an orderly Plantation there (if the Traders thither will take some better course, then formerly they haue done, as shall be declared) if the Cod-fishing vpon that Coast, by which our Nation and many other Countries are enriched. And if I should here set downe a valuation of that Fish, which the French, Biscaines, and Portugals fetch yeerely from this Coast of New-found-land, and the Banke, which lieth within fiue and twentie leagues from the South-Cape of that Countrie, where the French vse to fish Winter and Summer, vsually making two Voyages euery yeere thither: (To which places, and to the Coast of Canady, which lieth neere vnto it, are yeerely sent from those Countries, more then foure hundred saile of Ships:) It would seeme incredible, yea some men are of opinion, that the people of France, Spaine and Italy, could not so well liue, if the benefit of the fishing vpon this Coast, and your Maiesties other Dominions, were taken from them.

250. saile of Ships lying vpon that coast, Anno 1615.

What the valew of the Fish contained in most Ships did amount vnto.

But I trust it will be sufficient, that I giue an estimate of our owne trading thither, and partly of the wealth and commodities we reape thereby, without any curious search into other mens profits. In the yeere 1615. when I was at New-found-land with the Commission before mentioned, which was an occasion of my taking the more particular obseruations of that Country, there were then on that Coast, of your Maiesties subiects two hundred and fiftie saile of Ships great and small. The burthens and Tunnage of them all, one with another, so neere as I could take notice, allowing euery Ship to be at least threescore tun (for as some of them contained lesse, so many of them held more) amounting to more then 15000. tunnes. Now for euery threescore tun burthen, according to the vsuall manning of Ships in those Voyages, agreeing with the note I then tooke, there are to be set downe twentie men and boyes: by which computation in these two hundred and fiftie saile, there were no lesse then fiue thousand persons. Now euery one of these Ships, so neere as I could guesse, had about 120000. fish, and fiue tunne of traine Oyle one with another. So that the totall of the Fish in these two hundred and fiftie saile, when it was brought into England, France or Spaine (being sold after the rate of foure pound, for euery thousand of fish, sixscore fishes to the hundred, which is not a pennie a fish, and if it yeelde lesse, it was ill sold) amounted in monie to 120000. pound.

Now, as I haue said before, allowing to euery Ship of sixtie tun, at least fiue tun of traine Oyle, the totall of that ariseth to 1250. tun; each tun, whether it be sold in England, or elsewhere, being vnder-valued at twelue pound. So as the whole value thereof in monie, amounteth to the sum of 15000. pound, which added to the fish, it will appeare that the totall value of the fish, and Traine Oyle of those 250. saile of Ships that yeere, might yeelde to your Maiesties subiects better then the Summe of 135000. pound, omitting to reckon the ouer-prices which were made and gotten by the sale thereof in forrain Countries, being much more then what is vsually made at home, and so the like in other yeeres. And this certainly, in my vnderstanding, is a point worthy of consideration, that so great wealth should yearely be raised, by one sole commodity of that Countrie, yea by one onely sort of fish, and not vpon any other trade thither, which must needes yeelde, with the imploiments thereof, great riches to your Maiesties Subiects: And this also to be gathered and brought home by the sole labour and industry of men, without exchange or exportation of our Coine, and native commodities, or other aduenture (then of necessarie prouisions for the fishing) as Salt, Nets, Leads, Hookes, Lines, and the like; and of victuals, as Bread, Beefe, and Porke, in competent measure, according to the number and proportion of men imployed in those Voyages. The conuerting of these commodities (gotten by fishing) into mony, cannot choose but be a great benefit, to all your Maiesties Kingdomes in many respects.

thy

What the charge in setting forth of these two hundred and fiftie saile might amount vnto (being onely for victuals, which our Country yeeldeth) I hold it not fit here to set down, least I should be accused by some therein. And withall it is to be considered, that the trade thither (as now it is) doth yearely set on worke, and relieue many numbers of people, as Bakers, Brewers, Coopers, Ship-Carpenters, Smiths, Net-makers, Rope-makers, Line-makers, Hooke-makers, Fisher-makers, and many other trades, which with their families haue their best meanes of maintenance from these New-found-land Voyages. Adde vnto them the families or seruants of diuers Owners and Masters of such Ships as goe thither, and Mariners with their families, hereby imployed and maintained, * &c.

The relief that the trading there will afford to seuerall sorts of people

* After this the author vseth reasons to perswade to a Plantation there; which I haue omitted, as busied in history. The Booke is common to such as desire to reade it. I haue also omitted his Admiralty commission and proceedings.

THe Natiues of the Countrey haue great store of red Oaker, which they vse to colour their Bodies, Bowes and Arrowes, and Cannowes withall, which Cannowes are built in shape, like the Wherries on the Riuer of Thames; but that they are much longer, made with the rinds of Birch trees, which they sew very artificially and close together, and ouerlay euery seame with Turpentine; and in like manner they sew the rindes of Spruce trees, round and deepe, in proportion like a Brasse Kettle, to boyle their meate in, which hath beene well proued by three Mariners of a Ship, riding at Anchor by me, who being robbed in the night by the Sauages, of their apparell and diuers prouisions, did the next day seeke after them, and came suddenly where they had set vp three Tents, and were feasting, hauing three Canoas by them, and had three Pots made of such rindes of trees, standing each of them on three stones boyling with twelue Fowles in each of them; euery Fowle as bigge as a Widgeon, and some so bigge as a Ducke: they had also many such pots so sewed, and fashioned like the leather Buckets that are vsed for quenching of fire, and those were full of the yolks of Egges, that they had taken and boiled hard, and so dried small, which the Sauages vsed in their broth, as Sugar is vsed in some meates: they had great store of the Skins of Deere, Beauers, Beares, Seales, Otters; and diuers other fine skins which were well dressed; as also great store of seuerall sorts of flesh dried; and by shooting off a Musket towards them, they all ran away naked without any apparell, but onely their hats on their heads, which were made of Seales skins, in fashion like our hats, sewed handsomely with narrow bands about them, set round with fine white shels, such as are carried from Portugall to Brasile; where they passed to the Indians as ready monie. All their three Canoas, their Flesh, Skins, Yolks of Egges, Targets, Bowes and Arrowes, and much fine Okar, and diuers other things, they tooke & brought away, and shared it amongst those three that tooke it, and brought to me the best Canoa, Bowes and Arrowes, and diuers of their Skins, and many other things worth the noting: which may seeme to inuite vs to finde out some other trades with them.

Commodities vsed by the Natiues.

Now also I will not omit to relate something of a strange Creature that I first saw there in the yeere 1610. in a morning early as I was standing by the water side, in the Harbour of Saint Iohns; which I espied verie swiftly to come swimming towards me, looking cheerefully, as it had beene a woman, by the Face, Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Chin eares, Necke and Forehead: It seemed to be so beautifull, and in those parts so well proportioned, hauing round about vpon the head, all blew strakes, resembling haire, downe to the Necke (but certainly it was haire) for I beheld it long, and another of my companie also, yet liuing, that was not then farre from me; and seeing the same comming so swiftly towards mee, I stepped backe, for it was come within the length of a long Pike. Which when this strange Creature saw that I went from it, it presently thereupon dined a little vnder water, and did swim to the place where before I landed; whereby I beheld the shoulders and backe downe to the middle, to be as square, white and smooth as the backe of a man, and from the middle to the hinder part, pointing in proportion like a broad hooked Arrow; how it was proportioned in the forepart from the necke and shoulders, I know not; but the same came shortly after vnto a Boat, wherein one William Hawkridge, then my seruant, was, that hath bin since a Captaine in a Ship to the East Indies, and is lately there imploied againe by Sir Thomas Smith, in the like Voyage; and the same Creature did put both his hands vpon the side of the Boate, and did striue to come in to him and others then in the said Boate: whereat they were afraid; and one of them strooke it a full blow on the head; whereat it fell off from them: and afterwards it came to two other Boates in the Harbour; the men in them, for feare fled to land: This (I suppose) was a Mermaide. Now because diuers haue written much of Mermaides, I haue presumed to relate, what is most certaine of such a strange Creature that was seene at New found-land: whether it were a Mermaide or no, I know not; I leaue it for others to iudge, &c.

R. W.

CHAP. IX.

The names of diuers honorable persons and others who haue vndertaken to helpe aduance his Maiesties Plantation in the New-found-land: written by the said R. W. with extracts of certaine Letters written from thence.

THE right Honorable, Henry Lord Cary, Viscount of Faulke-land, Lord Deputie for the Kingdome of Ireland, hath vndertaken to plant a Colonie of his Maiesties subiects in the New-found-land, and is well pleased to entertaine such as are willing to be Aduenturers with him therein, vpon such Conditions as may appeare in the latter part of this Booke: And in his Lordships absence, hee hath authorized this Agent, Master Leonard Wellsted, by warrant vnder his hand and Seale, to ratifie whatsoeuer shall be by him concluded therein. The said Master Wellsteds Chamber is neere one Master Gatlands house, at the lower end of Saint Martins lane in the fields.

The right Honorable Sir George Caluert, Knight, one of the principall Secretaries vnto his Maiestie, hath also vndertaken to plant a large Circuit of that Countrie: who hath already sent thither this yeare and the former yeare, a great number of men and women, with all necessarie prouisions fit for them: where they liue pleasantly, building of Houses, clensing of Land for Corne, and Meddowes, Cabage, Carrets, Turneps, and such like: as also for Wood and Tobacco. Likewise they are there preparing to make Salt, for the preseruation of Fish another yeere, and for diuers other seruices. And his Honor is likewise well pleased to entertaine such as will aduenture with him therein vpon very fit conditions.

The Worshipfull Iohn Slany of London Merchant, who is one of the vndertakers of the New-found-land Plantation, and is Treasurer vnto the Patentees of that Societie, who haue maintained a Colonie of his Maiesties subiects there aboue twelue yeeres, and they are willing to entertaine such as will further his Maiesties said Plantation, vpon fit conditions.

Diuers Worshipfull Citizens of the Citie of Bristoll, haue vndertaken to plant a large Circuit of that Countrie, & they haue maintained a Colony of his Maiesties subiects there any time these fiue yeeres, who haue builded there many faire Houses, and done many other good seruices, who liue there very plesantly, and they are well pleased to entertaine vpon fit conditions such as will be Aduenturers with them.

The Worshipfull William Vaughan of Torracod, in the Countie of Carmarthen, Doctor of the Ciuill Law, hath also vndertaken to plant a Circuit in the New-found land, and hath in two seuerall yeeres sent thither diuers men and women, and hee is willing to entertaine such as will be Aduenturers with him vpon fit conditions.

And there are many other worthy persons Aduenturers in the said Plantation, whose names are not herein mentioned. And it is well hoped, that diuers others will also put their helping hand to aduance the same, when they are giuen to vnderstand what honour and benefit may accrue thereby. And if his Maiesties subiects of this Kingdome may be willing to set forth from euerie seuerall Countrie, but one good Ship yearely thither, with people and prouisions fit for them, it will be then not onely a great honour and benefit to his Maiestie, but also a great increase of Shipping and Marriners, and the imploying and inriching of many thoulands of poore people which now liue chargeably to the Parishioners. The which may be easily performed by the able Subiects, to set forth the charge at first, and so euerie Parish to recouer yearely their equall parts of the benefit which may accrue by the said stocke; and thereby not onely disburden yeerely themselues of some of those which lie chargeable vnto them within their seuerall Parishes; but also yeerely yeelde a great benefit to euery seuerall Countie, though it lie something remote from the Sea-coast, if they imploy a discreete honest man there, who may yearely be accomptable to euerie Parish of the charge, and likewise the benefit. The which will not be anie way burdensome or hurtfull vnto any: as the following discourse which I haue written will plainly informe them.

Extracts

Extracts of a Letter from Captaine EDWARD WINNE, Gouernour of the Colony at Ferryland, within the Prouince of Avalon, in Newfoundland, vnto the Right Honourable Sir GEORGE CALVERT Knight, his Maisties Principall Secretary; July 28. 1622.

May it please your Honour:

VPon the seuenteenth day of May, I receiued here your Letters of the nineteenth of February, from the hands of Robert Stoning. Vpon the six and twentieth of the same, a Ship of Master Iennins, with your people and prouision arriued here in safetie: and from the hands of Captaine Powell I receiued then your Honours Letters of the fourteenth of March. And vpon the last of Iune Master Iames came hither from Renouse, and the Salt-maker Master Iohn Hickson; from whose hands I receiued two Letters more, that by Master Iames, being of the fourth of May, and the other by Hickson of the tenth of the same, &c.

It may please your Honour, that as soone as I had deliuered my last Letters of the fifth of September, I immediately addressed my selfe onely to our businesse: Notwithstanding our diligent labour and extraordinary paines-taking, it was Allhallontide before our first range of building was fitted for an habitable being, &c. This was the last Letter sent into England the yeere before, 1621.

After Christmasse, wee imployed our selues in the Woods, especially in hard weather, whence wee got home as many Board-stockes as afforded vs two hundred Boards, and about two hundred Timber-trees besides. Wee got home as much or as many Trees, as serued vs to palizado into the Plantation about foure Acres of ground, for the keeping off of beast from man and beast, with Post and Rayle seuen foot high, sharpened in the top, the Trees being pitched vpright and fastened with Spikes and Nayles. Wee got also together as much Fire-wood as will serue vs yet those two moneths. We also fitted much Garden ground for Seed, I meane Barley, Oates, Pease, and Beanes.

For addition of building, we haue at this present a Parlour of fourteene foot besides the Chimney, and twelue foot broad, of conuenient height, and a lodging Chamber ouer it; to each a Chimney of Stone-work with Staires, and a Stauue-case: besides a tenement of two roomes, or a story and a halfe, which serues for a Store-house till wee are otherwise prouided. The Forge hath beene finished these fiue weekes: the Salt-worke is now almost ready. Notwithstanding this great taske for so few hands, we haue both sowne, Barley, Oates, Pease and Beanes about the quantitie of two Acres. Of Garden roome about halfe an Acre: Corne, though late sowne, is now in earing: the Beanes and the goodliest Pease that I euer saw, haue flourished in their blossomes this twentie dayes. Wee haue a plentifull Kitchin Garden of Lettice, Raddish, Carrets, Coleworts, Turneps, and many other things. Wee haue also at this present, a flourishing Meadow, &c. They were but twelue men all the last Winter, vntill the new supply came in the Spring following.

For the Countrey and Clymate: It is better, and not so cold as England hitherto: My comfort is, that the Lord is with your Honour, and your designes: for we haue prospered, to the admiration of all the beholders in what is done. And thus with my humble duty remembred, I rest, &c.

Another Letter to Master Secretary CALVERT, from Captaine WINNE, of the seuenteenth of August, 1622.

May it please your Honour:

WE haue Wheat, Barley, Oates, and Beanes both eared and codded, and though the late sowing and setting of them might occasion the contrary, yet it ripens now so fast, that it carries the likelihood of an approaching Harvest. Wee haue also a plentifull Kitchen-Garden of many things, and so ranke, that I haue not seene the like in England. Our Beanes are exceeding good: our Pease shall goe without compare: for they are in some places as high as a man of an extraordinary stature; Raddish as big as mine arme, Lettice, Cale or Cabbage, Turneps, Carrets, and all the rest is of like goodnesse. We haue a Meadow of about three Acres: it flourished lately with many cockets of good Hay, and now it is made vp for a Winter feeding. Wee hope to bee well fitted with many Acres of Meadow against another yeere: of Pasture-land, wee haue already to serue at least three hundred heads of Cattell; and to all this, if it please God, a good quantitie of Seed-ground shall be fitted, and such buildings as wee shall be able to accomplish.

Now in the next place it may please your Honour to vnderstand; That touching this Countrey, the Summer time here is so faire, so warme, and of so good a temperature, that it produceth many Hearbes and Plants very wholsome, medicinable, and delectable, many fruit Trees of sundry kindes, many sorts of Berries wholsome to eate, and in measure most abundant: insomuch as many sorts of Birds and Beasts are relieued with them in time of Winter, and wherof with further experience I trust to find some for the turne of Dyers. Our high levells of Land are adorned with Woods, both fare and seemely to behold, and greene all Winter. Within Land there are Plaines innumerable, many of them containing many thousand Acres, very pleasant to see to, and well furnished with Ponds, Brookes and Riuers, very plentifull of sundry dry ſorts of Fiſh: beſides ſtore of Deere and other Beaſts that yeeld both Food and Furre. Touching the ſoyle, I find it in many places, of goodneſſe farre beyond my expectation: the Earth as good as can be: the Graſſe both fat and vnctious, and if there were ſtore of Cattell to eate it vp, and with good ordering, it would become a moſt ſtedfaſt nourishment: whereof the large breed of Cattell to our Northerne Plantation, haue lately giuen prooфe ſufficient, though ſince, they haue beene moſt ſhamefully deſtroyed. The ayre here is very healthfull, the water both cleer and wholſome, and the Winter ſhort & tolerable, continuing onely in Ianury, February and part of March: the day in Winter longer then in England: the nights both ſilent and comfortable, producing nothing that can be ſaid, either horrid or hideous. Neither was it ſo cold here the laſt Winter as in England the yeere before. I remember but foure ſeuerall dayes of hard weather indeed, and they not extreame neither: for I haue knowne greater Frosts, and farre greater Snowes in our owne Countrey.

Digitized by Google

Temperate Winter.

At the Briſtow Plantation, there is as goodly Rye now growing, as can bee in any part of England: they are alſo well furniſhed with Swine, and a large breed of Goates, fairer by far then thoſe that were ſent ouer at the firſt.

Briſtow Plantation.

The Stones, Kernells, and Seeds that Stoning brought mee, were put into the ground preſently after his arriuall, the which are already of a prettie growth, though late ſet; for they came to my hands but vpon the ſeuenteenth of May. The Vines that came from Plimouth, doe proſper very well: nay, it is to be aſſured, that any thing that growes in England, will grow and proſper very well here: whereby it plainly appeares vnto your Honour, what manner of Countrey the ſame is.

It may pleaſe your Honour to vnderſtand, that our Salt-maker hath performed his part with a great deale of ſufficiency, by whom I haue ſent your Honour a Barrell of the beſt Salt that euer my eyes beheld, who with better ſetting doth vndertake to better this, which hee hath made already. I ſhall humbly alſo deſire you to remember my laſt yeeres ſuit, that our delicate Harbours and Woods may not bee altogether deſtroyed. For there hath beene rinded this yeere not ſo few as 50000. Trees, and they beane out ballaſt into the Harbors, though I looke on. It may likewiſe pleaſe your Honour to giue expreſſe order, Firſt, that ſuch as be ſent thither hereafter, may be ſuch men as ſhall bee of good ſtrength: whereof wee ſtand in need of ſixe Maſons, foure Carpenters, two or three good Quarry-men, a Slater or two, a Lyme-burner, and Lyme-ſtones, a good quantitie of hard Laths; a couple of ſtrong Maids, that (beſides other worke) can both Brew and Bake, and to furniſh vs with Wheeles, Hempe, and Flax, and a conuenient number of Weſt-countrey Labourers to fit the ground for the Plough. Secondly, that no more Boyes or Girles be ſent hither, I meane, vpon your Honors charge, nor any other perſons which haue not beene brought vp to labour: for they are vnfit for theſe affaires. Thirdly, your Honor of neceſſitie muſt needes ſend ſome Gunnes, and a Gunner with his neceſſaries: for the place and time doe require it. It is a durable Chattell; they will command the Harbour, and ſecure all, &c.

Salt made there.

Abuſes of Fiſhermen.

A Copie of a Letter from N. H. a Gentleman liuing at Ferryland in Newfound-Land, to a worthy Friend W. P. of the 18. of Auguſt, 1622.

SIR,

MY humble ſeruice remembred; accounting my ſelfe bound vnto you in a double bond, namely, loue and dutie: I could not be vnmindfull to ſhew the ſame vnto you in theſe rude lines, thereby to acquaint you with our health, the temperature of the Countrey, and the commodities and bleſſings therein. And firſt, for the firſt: Concerning our health, there is not any man amongſt our company, that hath beene ſicke ſcarcely one day ſince he came, but hath beene able to follow his worke. The Climate differs but little from England, and I my ſelfe felt leſſe cold here this Winter, then I did in England the Winter before by much. The ayre is ſweeter: for I neuer ſmelt any euill ſauor in the Countrey, nor ſaw any venemous creature to hurt mee. Gods bleſſings vpon this Land are manifold: As for wood and water, it paſſeth England: the one moſt ſweet in growing and burning, the other moſt pleaſant to taſte, and good to drinke. For in Whitſon-holidayes (I taking with me Maſter Stoning) did coaſt ſome ten miles into the Countrey Weſtward from our Plantation, to make ſome diſcouery of the Countrey, and to kill a Deere; and being ſome fiue miles into the Land, where wee lodged that night in a Wood, we found much Champion ground, and good leuels of one, two, three or foure hundred Acres together, and at the foot of each Mountaine and ſmall Hill, wee alwayes met with a faire freſh Riuer, or a ſweet Brooke of running water, whereof wee freely dranke, and it did quench my thirſt as well as any Beere, and much refreſh vs both, and neuer offended our ſtomackes at all. Wee trauelled three dayes, but found no Deere ſaue their footings, which came to paſſe by meanes of a great fire that had burned the Woods a little before ten miles compaſſe. It began betweene Formouſe and Aquafort; it burned a weeke, and then was quenched by a great raine.

I know not how or what hee was that gaue fire to it, but I thinke hee was a ſeruant hired by the Deuill to doe that wicked deed, who (I doe not doubt) will pay him for his worke. In the night the Wolues being neere, did ſomething affright vs with howlings, but did not hurt vs: for wee had Dogs, Fire, and Sword to welcome them. As for the Beares, although there bee many; they beare vs no ill will, I thinke, for I haue eaten my part of two or three, and taken no hurt by them. Foxes heere are many, and as ſubtill as a

Foxe,

Digitized by Google

Foxe, yet haue wee coozned many of them of their rich coats, which our worshy Gouernour keepes carefully, as also of Cattagena's and Otters, whose couerings wee preserue as fitting presents for greater persons. The Fowles and Birds of the Land are Partridges, Curlues, Fillidayes, Black-birds, Bullfinches, Larkes, Sparrowes, and such like. Those of the Sea, are Goose, Ducks of foure sorts, Capderace, Teale, Snipes, Penguyns, Murres, Hounds, Sanderlings, Redshanks and others, all very fat, sweete and wholsome. The Fowles of prey, are Tercells, Goshawkes, Falcons, Laners, Sparhawkes, Gripes, Ospreis, Owles great and small, Rauens, Gulls, Pitterils, and some others; and of most of these sorts I haue killed many. As for the plentie of Codfish it is well knowne vnto you. Salmons, Eeles, Mackarell, Herrings, Lance, Caplin, Dog-fish, Hollibuts, Flowkes, Lobsters, Crabs and Muskles: All and more then all these are here in great plentie, very good and sweet meat. The wild fruit and berries, are small Peares, Cherries, Nuts, Resberries, Strawberries, Barberries, Dewberries, Hurtleberries, with others, all good to eate. Many faire Flowers I haue seene here, which I cannot name, although I had learned Gerrards Herball by heart: But wild Roses are here both red and damaske, as fragrant and faire as in England. All our Corne and Seedes haue prospered well, and are already growne almost to perfect maturitie, &c.

THE SECOND PART OF THE TENTH BOOKE.

CHAP. X.

Diuers Warlike Fleets set forth to Sea against the Spaniards, by our English DEBORA, Queene ELIZABETH, of Glorious memory: Her manifold Deliueries and Victories.

LOI the Man, whose Muse mus'd on Plantations,
New England, Virgin, Bermude, Newfound-landed,
Laurell for olive take, and make Relations
Of Armes, Harmes, Fights, Frights, Flights, Depopulations, Romes Buls, Spaines broyles, Irelands ire, Traitors branded.
GOD, Angels, Winds, Seas, Men, Elizas Glory
Conspire; Shee outlines Death, in Heauen, in Story.

HAile greatest of English Names, Glorious ELIZABETH! Nor may wee after thy voyage and peregrination out of this World, vnto thy true and heauenly home & Country, forget the great Acts of thy earthly Pilgrimage. Thou wast indeed the Mother of English Sea-greatnesse, and didst first by thy (Generalls) not salute alone, but awe and terrifie the remotest East and West, stretching thy long and strong armes to India, to China, to America, to the Peruvian Seas, to the Californian Coast and New Albions Scepters: Thou mad'st the Northerne Muscouite admire thy Greatnesse: Thou gauest name to the North-west Straits (Meta Incognita) and the Southern Negros, and Ilands of the South-vnknowne-continent which knew not humanitie, were compelled to know Thee; Thou imbracedst the whole earthly Globe in thy Maritime Armes: thou freedst England from Easterlings and Lumbards borrowed legs, and taughtst her not onely to stand and goe without helpe, but become helpe to our friends, and with her own Sea forces to stand against, yea to stand vpon, and stampe vnder feet the proudest of her foes. Thou wast a Mother to thy Neighbours, Scots, French, Dutch; a Mirrour to the remotest of Nations. Great Cumberlands twelue voyages before recited are thine, and the fiery vigour of his Martiall Spirit was kindled at thy bright Lamp, & quickened by the Great Spirit of ELIZABETH. Drake, Candish, Iohn and Richard Hawkins, Raleigh, Dudley, Sherley, Preston, Grenuile, Lancaster, Wood, Raimund, Louison, Monson, Winter, Frobisher, Danies, and other the Star-worthies of Englands Sphere, whose Planet-courses we haue before related, acknowledge ELIZAS Orb to be their First and highest Mouer. How many Royall Fleets did shee set forth? In the yeeres 85. and 87. those vnder Sir Francis Drake, before mentioned, as that also in 95. vnder him and Sir Iohn Hawkins: another Fleet 1590. vnder Sir Iohn Hawkins, and Sir Martin Frobisher to the Ilands; also 1591. the Iland Fleet vnder the Lord Thomas Howard, now Earle of Suffolke; that 1592. by Sir Iohn Burroughs and

The Fleets set forth by queen Elizabeth. Sup pag. 1082. &c.

Digitized by Google

and Sir Robert Crosse, when the Madre de Dios was taken, and another Carrike burnt: An. 1594. Shee sent forth a Fleet to Brest, where Frobusher was slaine. Another 1599. vnder the Lord Thomas Howard. A. 1600. vnder Sir Richard Lewison a Fleet to the Ilands; 1601. another to Ireland. A. 1602. vnder Sir Richard Lewison and Sir William Munson; and another vnder the same Commanders, 1603. as bequeathing in her fatall extreames, Marine Actions and Glory to her Successour. These and other her Sea-glories I purpose not here to dilate, hauing already handled some of them; but haue singled from the rest the actions of 88. 89. 96. and 97. præmising somthing as a Preface of the great deliuerances which God vouchsafed that Virgin Queen.

Apoc. 17. 6. Her persecution from the Papacie from the wombe.

That Church which is mystically called, The woman drunken with the bloud of Saints, had begun to persecute her from her birth, Pope Clement the sixt decreeing against her Mothers mariage, and Pope Paul the third thundring a terrible sentence against her Fathers Soueraignty. And although King Henry had first enacted against his daughters, and after for them by Parliamentary authoritie, yet when King Edward (which vsed to call her his sweet sister Temperance) was dead, there wanted not some which extruded both the sisters, and obtruded another succession. Queene Mary dispersing that storme, raised another, wherein shee was exposed to the calumni.. of faire-foule-mouthed sycophants, which would haue stained the reigne of that Queene, otherwise branded, as short, bloody, vnfortunate, with the slaughter of that Royall Virgin: Story and others saying, That in vaine the boughs of Heresie were lopped off, if the Root were suffered to continue. Long and straight imprisonment shee indured, and was forced by them to Masse, Confession and externall profession of that Romish Catholicisme, which perhaps had not diuerted her enemies designe, had not the peruersest of her enemies Gardiner beene auerted by his owne death; and had not also King Philip with the Spaniards enuied to the French so rich an Inheritance, as by Queene Maries death without issue (which could scarsly from her sicke and aged body be expected) was likely to fall vpon Queene Mary of Scotland betrothed to the Dolphin of France, whereby the Spanish greatnesse already embroyled enough, was likely to bee ouermatched by the French, increased with addition of three mightie Kingdomes. Queene Mary dying, and Cardinall Poole with many Prelates, as it were, attending her exequies with their owne, with generall applause Shee was acknowledged Queen. Her first care was to restore Religion, notwithstanding the dangers thence incompassing her: shee also reiected the mariage with King Philip, whereof hee had treated with her by the Earle of Feria his Embassadour, promising to procure thereunto the Popes dispensation: neither admitted shee the offered match of Charles, sonne to Ferdinand the Emperour; and when Henry the French King by the Guisians was perswaded to challenge England to his sonne and daughter in law, causing them to vie her title Francis & Mary by the Grace of God King and Queene of Scotland, England, and Ireland) and prepared Warres against her, God tooke him out of the world, being slaine at a Tilt sport.

In queen Maries daies.

French wrongs

The new King and Queene continued their former challenge, Title and Ensignes, which gaue no small occasions of those euills, which afterwards inuolued her, breeding a great disgust betwixt those two greatest Ladies which Christendome had, both Heires to an absolute Soueraignty. Shee expelled the French out of Scotland, stablished the affaires of Ireland, procured armour and weapons out of Germany, caused much Artillery to bee cast of Brasse and Iron, new Mynes of Brasse being found at Keswicke, and the stone Calaminaris vsefull for Brasse-workes found here also: prouision for Gunpowder was first at her commandement made here at home; Barwicke fortified, the Nauie furnished, the Sea Townes imitating her example and increasing dayly in Naual forces, answered by Martiall Spirits for Land and Sea seruice. Thus did God blesse her that had glorified him in establishing his Truth, notwithstanding the pouertie of the State at her entrance, deepely indetted by her predecessours; and the faint friendship or professed enmitie of Rome and all her disciples. Thus shall it bee done to the Woman God will honour, and more then thus: for what was all the time of her reigne but vicissitudes of Treasons, Warres, and manifold externall and internall broyles? and yet in an admirable working of Diuine Grace, when had England so long and flourishing peace at home, or glory and renowme abroad? as if hee which brought light out of darknesse, would permit all such contrary workings to bee the obiect of his goodnesse, the fewell and materialls of her greatnesse.

Q. Elizabeths prosperitie. See of Gods mercies in this & other kinds, the B. of Chichester his Religious Tractate of Thanksgiuing. See also Camdens Elizabetha, and others Annales of her Reigne.

Arthur Poole of the house of George Duke of Clarence.

Arthur Poole, the fourth yeere of her reigne abused the greatnesse of his bloud with other conspirators, to the Guisian purposes, but taken and sentenced receiued not bloudie reward from her mild and mercifull hand.

Ann. 1569. Pius his impious Bull.

Pope Pius the fift denounceth her excommunicate, discharging her Subiects from loyaltie and allegeance and arming them against her: Ridolfi a Florentine playes the Merchant of Popish wares, the Earles of Northumberland and Westmerland take armes, the Duke of Norfolke is entangled, the French and Spaniard are perswaded by the Pope, who promised also if need were, to ingage to this purpose all the goods of the Sea Apostolike, Chalices, Crosses, and holy Vestments: Vitellius is commanded to inuade England with an Army from the Low-countries: but God protected ELIZABETH, and her Enemies abroad were disappointed, the Traitors at home falling into their owne pit.

Irish action.

About the same time Edmund and Peter, brethren to the Earle of Ormond were busie in Ireland, land, to inflame which rebellion Mendoza came out of Spaine, but before it brake forth into any great combustion it was extinct.

Don Iohn of Austria enters next vpon the Stage (for I omit Barnes and Mathers), Sir Henry Percie, the B. of Ros his attempts, and other Acts and Arts sauouring more of the Foxe then the Lion) and pretended a peace, whiles hee intended the deliuerance of the Scottish Queene, and matrying her, to make himselfe King of England and Scotland, by helpe of fugitiues and fauour of the Pope and Guisians: and in the midst of his warlike preparations suddenly dieth. When Pius his impious curses had thus proued blessings, hee deceaseth, and Gregory his successour in the Papacie, and malice to Queene ELIZABETH, the great Founder of Seminaries, gaping for no lesse then a Kingdome to his base sonne Iames Boncompagno, treateth with the Spaniard, who had swallowed England also in his conceit. Thomas Stukley an English fugitiue promiseth Ireland to the Popes bastard, who in recompence giues him the titles of Marquesse of Lagen, Earle of Wexford and Caterlough, Vrcount of Morough, and Baron of Ross (all places of note in Ireland) and made him Generall of eight hundred Italian Souldiers; the King of Spaine paying their wages. But Sebastian King of Portugall, which should haue conducted the Spanish forces against England, being intangled with an African Expedition, procured Stucley to goe thither with him, where both lost their liues. And the Spaniard was now diuerted from English designes to those neerer of Portugall, there imploying the forces intended against vs.

Don Iohn base son of Charles Emperour. 1576.

A. 1572. Greg. 13. confirmeth the sentence against Q. Elis. Stukly treason

A. 1578.

Doctor Nicolas Sanders playeth the next part, who hauing written in defence of the Popes visible Monarchy Ecclesiasticall, and belched out the fowlest slanders of Queen ELIZABETHS parentage that Hell could deuise, would make his writings visible by his deeds; and with Iames Fitz Morice an Irish Traitor, hauing obtained to be the Popes Nuntio, with a banner consecrated at Rome, and some forces out of Spaine, entreth Ireland, there fortifieth and winneth Desmond to his partie. San Iosephus followeth with seuen hundred Italians and Spaniards, with Armour for fiue thousand. Their Fort is taken, Fitz morice first, and after the Earle with many others slaine, Sanders runnes mad, and wandering vp and downe in the Woods and Mountaines dieth miserably; the Country is pacified and ELIZABETH preuaileth. The Seminaries (Schooles of Treason) were now erected at Rome and Rhemes, to become worse then that Troian Horse; Cells of desperate Emissaries, incendaries of their owne Countrey: Campion and others suffer; seditious Bookes are written against the Queene, whereby Somerill was instigated to kill her.

1579. 1580. Sanders Author of the booke De visib. Monarch. & of the forged tale De schismate Anglicano. In which he abuseth the queens Mother with grosse lies, neuer before seen or dreamt of by the sharpest and spitefullest eyes which Malice could entertain, euen then when she was most malicious & most serpent-sighted.

Mendoza the Spanish Embassadour was commanded to depart out of England, hauing practised with *Throckmorton and others about an inuasion of the Land, and to remoue the Queene. About the same time in manner miraculously, traiterous projects came to light by certaine papers of one Creighton a Scottish Iesuite, who being taken by Dutch Pirates tare them and threw them into the Sea; which would not bee accepted to Iesuiticall plots, but by the helpe of the winde brought them backe to the Ship; which being deliuered to Sir William Wade were ioyned again, and reuealed new plots of the Pope, the Spaniard, and Guisians to inuade England: Whereupon an Association was made by many thorow the Kingdome, binding themselues by their hands and seales to prosecute all such to death as should attempt any thing against the life of the Queene. Cardinall Allen for the English Catholikes Ecclesiasticall, Ingleseld for the Laikes, the Bishop of Rosse for the Queene of Scots, were said to haue agreed to depriue the Queene, and to disinherite King IAMES as a fauourer of Heresie, &c.

* 1583.

* 1584. Mendoza. Throckmorton. Creighton papers. Association. Parsons treason Allens booke.

A. 1585. Doctor Parry (whom Queene ELIZABETH had before pardoned his life) being heartned by Ragazonius the Popes Nuntio in France, and absolued in the Popes name by the Cardinall Comensis, vndertooke to kill the Queene, being thereunto incouraged by Allens booke, teaching that excommunicated Princes may bee dispoyled of liues and Scepters. His partner reuealed him, and his mischiefe lighted on himselfe. Henry Earle of Northumberland (brother of Thomas before executed at Yorke) low himselfe in the Tower; and the Lord Chancellour three dayes after in the Starre Chamber declared that he had beene committed for traiterous deuises against the Queen and State; the particulars whereof were then opened by the Atturney Popham, seeking to set free the Queene of Scots, to destroy the Queene and the Religion, to haue dealt with Charles Paget (termed Mops) about these things, with the inuasion of England, &c. The Burkes rebellion in Ireland fell out that yeere, and many broyles, which cost three thousand their liues at one time, the title Mac-William in Connagh extinguished, and the insolence of the Flanders betwixt Scotland and England repressed. The Spaniard arrested the English Ships in his Ports, whence the Expeditions of the Earle of Cumberland, and Sir Francis Drake before mentioned tooke their beginning, and the Warres betwixt the two Kingdomes.

Earle of Northumberland.

Burks & Flanders rise in Ireland.

A. 1586. that prodigious plot of Savage, Ballard, Babington, and the rest of that bloudy crue conspiring to kill the Queene, was detected and the plotters were executed. In 87. the French Embassadour, a Guisian, conferred with Stafford to kill the Queene, making great promises to that purpose. And he and Moody were further treated with on that point by Trappius his Secretary, which by Stafford was reuealed and preuented. But whiles all pretended the freeing of the Queen of Scots, by this meanes they shortned her dayes and freed her of her life.

Babington, &c.

French Embassadors plot with Moody.

The story is knowne, and I shall not need to insist vpon these later things, nor on Tyrones Tragicall

Tyrons treasons

Lopez.

Luke 8.29.

gicall rebellion, the death of so many thousands English, Irish, Spanish; nor Lopez his plot to poison the Queene, &c. I but propound these things to excite English thankfulnesse to God, and hatred to that Whoore, drunken with bloud, which hath thus enchanted the Kings of the earth; yea like the Legion Deuill hath broken all chaines of allegeance, and hath initiated in hellish mysteries naturall sworne subiects to inuasion and mutuall massacres; yea to account it tolerable, lawfull, commendable, meritorious, and in ordine ad deum, necessary (ô times! ô monsters!) to kill and murther; and hath made it a compendious way to win the Kingdome of Heauen by killing the Kings of the Earth. And if the bloud of so many Saints from Abel to Zacharias were threatned to fall on Ierusalem, sometimes the holy Citie; what may be said of Rome? whose Temporall Monarchy first founded in the bloud of Rhemus brother of Romulus, proceeded in exiling their owne Kings, and in exterminating worlds of men out of the world (Cæsar alone is said in fiftie battells to haue slaine * 1192000. men, besides what was slaine in his Ciuill Warres) in a world of time together: exceeded in the sanctitie of the bloud of so many thousand Saints and Martyrs in ten dismall persecutions, and yet fell short of the pretended Catholike Rome, that mysticall Woman drunken with bloud.

Rome, Citie of murthers & haters of kings

* Plin. l. 7. c. 25.

I dare boldly auer, and by History make it good, (yea * in great part to a iudicious obseruer the former parts of this Worke haue shewed) that since the Papall challenge of Monarchy ouer Monarkes by Gregory the seuenth, the Deuills thousand yeeres of imprisonment being expired, Antichristian Rome hath by Sword, Fire, Warres, Ciuill and Forraine, and other inhumane, immane, diuelliish furies procured the shedding of more humane bloud, then euer Heathen Rome in farre longer time had shed to erect their Heathenish Empire, from the dayes of Romulus which founded the Citie, to Augustus which grounded and stablished the Empire, and Tiberius vnder whom Christ was crucified: Yea if you adde the persecutions of the succeeding Emperors till Iulian the Apostata; yet haue the later Antichristian exceeded in numbers, as much as the executions of Warres are vsually beyond all comparison of the Iudiciall and Legall. I adde, that as the Ethnike Romans spilt none (except in persecutions) but Ethnike bloud: so the pretended Christian Romists (except in the Indies and the Holy Land Wars) shed none in this account but Christian. This may seem a prodigal speech & prodigious paradox, to those which know not the millions which perished in the Holy Land Wars, set & kept on foot about 200. yeers together by Papall ambition; so many hundreths of thousands which perished in the same times, by open warres made by the Popes Crusades against the Albigenses, Waldenses, and what other names it pleased them to giue to better men then themselues, in almost eightie yeeres continued warres: So many Ciuill Warres in Germany, the subiects and competitors armed by Crusades against the Emperours till that Eagle was plucked; where one Henry whom Hildebrand first deposed, fought sixtie battells: In England, France, Italy, and other parts, in the daies of King Iohn, Fredericke the second, Conrade, Manfred, Phillip, and others: and after that, the long Bohemian broiles drenched in bloud after Husses fire: and lately so innumerable millions (pauperis est numerare) in America and the Ilands which these bookes plainly euince to haue beene written in bloud by Romen authoritie and pretence; not to make mention of the Philippines, the East Indies, the Wars in Sicile and Naples; and the Greeke Empire first weakned, and after by Romen ambition lost: how many hundreth thousands hath France lost of Christians within these last hundreth yeeres? how many more haue taken their fatall farewells in the Belgian quarrell? How doe those Low-countries and Germany still flow in bloud? That I speake not of our England and Ireland? But I hate the thoughts of those things, and therefore come to the 88. businesse, that also set on worke from Rome, the widest and openest passage from hell for his ingresse and egresse, that was a Murtherer from the beginning, and in the last ages turning himselfe into an Angell of light, hath there established his principall Vicar vnder pretended titles and seemings of Christ and Christianitie. Yea this is also remarkable that in the treasons against Queene Elizabeth, and in those against our present Souereigne King Iames (whom God long preserue) by Watson, Clerke, Cobham, &c. at first, and in the Master and Monster-peece (which was now ready to breake forth with violence and virulence from Hell, and to blow vp all other Treasons) that of the Gun-powder Traitors; still the busiest part of the Tragedie is committed to some Romish Priest or Iesuite, who should fit and frame the resolute dissoluteneese of wild spirits to the execution of it or themselues. The Master Workman (I say not Beelzebub) is the Pope, as appeareth in those before mentioned, and in this of 88. whose Bull declaratory against that Worthy of women followeth, as the contents thereof are deliuered by Meteranus, to whose labours in this Story wee are principally indebted. It was to be published in the Popes name by Cardinall Allen after the Nauie had arriued in England, to command the English to yeeld their obedience to the Duke of Parma. From the Pope therefore wee will begin our 88 Story, touching the preparation and successe of that Armada surnamed inuincible.

Present Rome greater man-slaier & Saint-slaier then the Ethnike.

* See to. 1. l. 8. c. 1. 2. 3. 4. & 6. l. 2. c. 1. to. 2. l. 8. c. 4. &c.

Priests, agents in euery treason.

The Pope Master Workman.

Allen or Allen was by Spanish procurement made Cardinall for this purpose; and to this purpose had written a violent booke which heartned Parry to vndertake to kill the Queen. He and Bristow & Martin were Authors of the Rhemish Translation and Notes of the N.T.

CHAP.

Digitized by Google

CHAP. XI.

Octagesimus Octauus mirabilis Annus.

The Popes Bull, the King of Spaines preparations, the Duke of Medinas Expedition, the Duke of Parmas Forces, for the inuasion of England: diuers Sea-fights twixt the English and Spanish Fleets, the Sea flight of the Spanish, and miserable disasters in their returne. Their lies. The Queens Religious Triumph.

SIxtus Quintus, by diuine prouidence, vniuersall Pastor of the Flock of Christ, to whom by continued and lawfull succession, the administration and charge of the Catholike Church pertaineth; taking into consideration the miseries and calamities whereinto the famous Kingdomes of England and Ireland had falne, which in times past were commended so much for Vertues, Religion, and Christian Pietie and Obedience, and now by the impious and vniust Empire of Elizabeth pretended Queene, and a few adhering to her, not onely to haue come to a dissolute estate and dangerous to it selfe, but also as infected and venemous members are wont to cause infection and disease to the whole body of Christians: and wanting there the due remedies which elswhere by help of Christian Princes he vseth, to prevent abuses & to maintaine Ecclesiasticall discipline: Forasmuch as Henry the Eight, late King of England, a Rebell and forsaker of the Sea Apostolike, separated himselfe and his from the communion of Christians by force, and Elizabeth the present Vsurper perseuereth therein, not without great commotion and danger of the Neighbour Regions, shewing her selfe obstinate and impenitent, so that there is no hope that those Kingdomes may at any time be reformed and reduced to the exercise of Christian Religion, true peace and quietnesse, except shee be depriued of the administration of the Kingdome.

Therefore our most holy Father desiring (as his Office requireth) to prouide for this euill, with present and strong remedies inspired to him from God, to the health of the vniuersall Church, incited as well by his owne, as his predecessors affection and zeale, alway borne toward England; and moued by the continuall sollicitation, vehement and importunate exhortation of very many, and those principall men of the said Nation; hee hath vsed great diligence with diuers Princes, and especially with the Mightie and Catholike King of Spaine, imploring his aide hereunto, by the reuerence which hee beareth the Roman Sea, by the old friendship and consanguinitie which his Family hath had with the Kings of England, by his singular charitie and benevolence formerly shewed to the Catholikes of that Countrey; for obtaining by that meanes his desire of peace and quietnesse in his Neighbour Prouinces, for his studie and readinesse towards the propagation of Catholike Religion, and lastly for the furtherance of the common good of Europe; hath besought him to confer all the Forces which God almightie hath giuen him hereunto, that that Woman may be deiected from her degree, and that the euill men and hurtfull to mankind, which adhere to her may be punished, and that Kingdome may bee reduced to certaine reformation and quietnesse, from which great good and many commodities to the Common-wealth might be to be expected. Wherefore that hee might make knowne to all the world the Iustice of this Cause, and the Subiects also of that Kingdome might fully be satisfied, likewise that hee might denounce the iust iudgement of God against her; It hath seemed meet to his Holinesse, with the Declaratory Sentence made against this Woman, to shew the cause also why he had so proceeded against her.

First, because shee is an Heretike [a] and Schismatike [b] and therefore excommunicated of two Popes, his predecessors, contumacious, disobedient to God and the supreme [c] Sea: Also shee tooke to her selfe with presumptious vsurpation supreme Authoritie and Ecclesiasticall iurisdiction ouer the Soules [d] of Men, against Nature, Reason, against all Lawes Diuine and Humane; and that as well by vertue of the sentences giuen by Clement the Seuenth, and Paul the Third, as of the publike declaration of King Henry her Father. Thirdly, because shee vsurped the Kingdome against all right, not onely in regard of the impediments aforesaid, but also against the old Contracts in times past made betwixt the Sea Apostolike and the Kingdome of England in the time of Henry the Second, when the said Kingdome reconciled it selfe to the Roman Sea, for the murther of Saint Thomas of Canturbury. At which time it was agreed [e], that none should bee taken for lawfull King of England without consent of the Great Bishop; which conuention or contract was after renewed by King Iohn, and confirmed by Oath. Which thing was most profitable, and so established by the request of the Nobilitie and People.

For many and grieuous iniuries [f], extorsions, and other wrongs perpetrated by her and by others, through her permission, against the distressed innocent Subiects of both Kingdomes.

For seditions and rebellions betwixt the Inhabitants of neighbour Prouinces, raised against their lawful Magistrate and a naturall Prince, by which shee seduced innumerable Soules and many potent Regions.

Papall pretended causes of depriuing the Queene.

Fugitiues impotent Zeale.

Spanish arguments to requite good with euill.

a Act. 24. 14. By the way which they cal heresie, so worship wee the God of our fathers, beleeuing all things written in the Law, &c.

b They make the schisme or rent, which vniustly excommunicate & cut off from the body of Christ, as Io. 9. Simile illos, cæci sunt, &c.

c Hinc ille lacrymæ.

d With lie and all shee reiected the title of supreme head, to auoid from appearance of this euill, and declared her selfe to challenge, onely, power ouer all her subiects, to command them to do their duties & execute their offices, excluding forrain iurisdiction as Dauid, Salomon, Constantine, & her predecessors had done, exercising power ouer Priests, not in the Priesthood.

e O impudency! What King of England euer sought the Popes confirmation: King Iohn by Papall Arts made himselfe tributary, but without and against his subiects consent; as Ma. Paris & R. Wendouer then liuing testifie at large: that writing being burnt and disclaimed; the subiects also rebelling against the Author thereof. f Quia totum telum non recepisset: Shee wronged them much in sauing her throat from their blades. g Vnnaturall Prince, which not content with Inheritance, would haue made conquest of the Prouinces, so to swallow all their priuiledges, and subiect them to forraine inquisition and rule: so buying with 100. millions of treasure and the liues of 400000. Christians, the losse of those which would haue bought and sought to be his subiects, if hee would haue kept the oathes which the Pope dispensed with, twice made to them; and ruled as his predecessors had done.

For entertainment h giuen to Fugitiue Heretikes, and Rebells, wicked and publike malefactors, and vndertaking their protection, to the great losse and detriment of Christian Regions.

Also for sending to and procuring the Turke, that our mightie i and cruell Enemy, to inuade Christendome and disturbe k the setled Peace.

For the horrible and l long persecution of the Saints of God, for holy m BB. ill handled, spoyled, imprisoned, and diuers torments and miserable tortures and slaughters done to the members of the holy and Catholike Church.

For the inhumane and vniust imprisonment and crueltie, lately exercised against the most gracious Princesse, Mary Queene of Scotland, which had fled into England, hauing first n receiued promise of securitie, protection, and aide.

For abolishing the true Catholike Religion o, the profanation of holy Sacraments, also of Monasteries p, Temples, Persons consecrated to the memory of Saints, and all other things which make or may help to eternall life.

And concerning Secular affaires q and the State politike, for that the ancient Nobilitie being reiected and excluded, shee hath promoted obscure and vnworthy men to Ciuill and Ecclesiasticall dignities; and by this meanes hath made a sale of Lawes and Rights; and lastly for the absolute tyranny r which shee vsurpeth and continually exerciseth, to the great contempt of God, oppression of the miserable s People, the losse of Soules, and destruction of Countries.

Wherefore seeing those offences are of that nature and moment, that some make her vncapable of the kingdome, others make her vnworthy of life, his Holinesse by the power of Almightie God, and of Apostolicall authoritie committed to him, doth renew the sentence of his predecessors, Pius the Fifth, and Gregory t the Thirteenth, whereby the said Elizabeth is excommunicated and depriued of her Kingdome. And now by these present Letters, the same Elizabeth againe excommunicateth and depriueth of all Royall Dignitie, Titles, Rights and pretences to the said Kingdomes of England and Ireland; declaring her illegitimate, and a true Vsurper of the Kingdomes; and absoluing the Subiects of that Land, and all others from all dutie u of Dominion, Fidelitie and Obedience, and from the Oath x giuen to her or to any of her substitutes.

Further, expresly commanding vnder paine of the anger y of God Almightie, that none of whatsoeuer condition or degree, after hee shall haue notice hereof; doe presume to yeeld her any obedience, fauour, or ayde whatsoeuer: but that all may imploy all their power and indeuour, that due punishment may be taken of her; that shee at length, which hath separated her selfe by many wayes from God and his Church, seeing her selfe forsaken and destitute of all worldly refuge, may be brought to acknowledge her faults, and to subiect her selfe to the iudgement of the most High, with all submission.

And therefore commands all and euery the Inhabitants of the said Kingdomes, and all others, that with all their power they execute the premisses, withdrawing all helpe publike and priuate from the said person and her adherents: and that as soone as they shall be hereof certified, they ioyne themselues to the Catholike Armie, led by the Illustrious and victorious Prince Alexander Farnesius, Duke of Parma, and Deputie of the Catholike King; with all the forces they can gather, that they may assist the said deprimation and punishment of the parties aforesaid, and the restitution of the holy Catholike Religion, declaring that all which shall show themselues disobedient z to this Mandate, shall not escape deserued punishments.

Be it knowne further to all men, that it is not the purpose of his Holinesse, the Catholike King, or the said Dukes Highnesse, in this Expedition, to oppresse the said Kingdomes, or thereof to make conquest, or to alter the Lawes, Priuiledges or Customes thereof, or to deprime any man there, of his libertie or life (except the rebellious and contumacious) or to bring any change a, besides that which shall be iudged fit by common voyces of his Holinesse, the Catholike Maiesty and the States of that Kingdome, to the restoring and continuing of the Catholike Religion, and the punishment of that Vsurper and her adherents: Certifying and securing all, that all controuersies which may happen by the deprimation of that Woman (whether they shall arise about priuate mens affaires, or about the Royall Succession, or betwixt the Clergy and Laity, or what soeuer other discords) they shall be all compounded and decided according to the Lawes, Iustice, and Christian equitie, without any iniury or damage. Neither shall it onely bee prouided conueniently that the Catholikes which haue suffered so many euills be not spoyled, but fauour is also granted to all others, which being penitent shall submit themselues vnto the Chiefe Commander of the Army. And h The Pope confesseth hee gaue entertainment to the Queenes Fugitiues, and for their sakes thus roared. The Spaniard entertained her Fugitiues, and she might not admit those whom he would not suffer to obey him as his Ancestors had done

i A mighty & cruell forgery of his Holinesse k Who is here the inuader & disturber of peace? And whereto tends all this but to disanull peace?

l Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione querentes?

m Boner, &c. was ill handled because they were not so handled as they had handled Cranmer, Ridley, &c.

n See M. Camdens History, Anno 1568. & seq. where those occurrents are otherwise related.

o Ap. 2. Thou hast tried them that say they are Apostles and are not and hast found them liers.

p How much more did Hezekiah & Iosias in demolishing the meanes of superstition, how holy soeuer at their first institution? So the brasen Serpent, a Diuine type of Christ crucified was demolished, &c.

q Vis dicam quid sis? magnus es ardelio. Pitie she promoted not Cardinal Allen or Father Parsons, the one to Lambeth, the other to Tib. I should say the Broad Seale.

r What a faire deliuerance from this tyranny should we haue had by the Spanish Whips and Kniues?

s We had indeed bin miserable, had we falne into the hands of such Physicians.

t The holinesse of three Popes curse her, and the holy and blessed Trinitie blesse her.

u Dutie and faith acknowledged and yet denied! Is not this babbling?

x But God will not hold him guiltlesse that taketh his name in vaine.

y Yet this is the first commandement of promise; so contrary are Gods blessing and the Popes cursing. Eph. 6. 2.

z A false Prophet! for neither did England euer prosper more, or feare the Pope or Spaniard lesse, or so much loue or honour Her or any of her progenitors, as Her Maiesty after this: such a blessed haruest God raised out of this Cursers cursed seed.

a The Duke of Medina Generall of this Fleet was of another mind, who being told of Catholikes in England which would take his part, &c. answered, That he must make way howsoeuer for his Master. And were not Count Egmond and Count Horne and others, Papists, which D'Alua executed? There were 700. English Fugitiues in Parmas Army for this inuasion, Qui omnium despicatissime habiti, the baggage of the Armies estimate: nor was respect giuen to Stanly and Westmerland, Traitors of note, Sed pro impietate in Patriam omni aditu prohibiti & tanquam pessima auspicia merito non sine detestatione reiecti, saith Camden. They were excluded all Councells of Warre; for men vse to loue the Treason and hate the Traytor.

whereas by due information made, wee are giuen to vnderstand that there are many innocents, which through ignorance of Christian Faith hauing falne, haue hitherto erred onely of ignorance, being neuertheleſſe reckoned amongſt Heretikes: wee purpoſe not at all to puniſh ſuch perſons, but to inaure patiently, till by conference of learned men, and good ſound counſells, they may be better inſtructed touching the truth; and not ſhew themſelues obſtinate, but deſirous to preuent the effuſion of Chriſtian bloud, and deſtruction of Countries which may be expected by the reſiſtance of ſome wicked principall aduerſaries.

Therefore by theſe Preſents wee declare, that it is not onely lawfull for all, as well publike as priuate perſons, beſides thoſe which haue vndertaken this Expedition, to lay hand on the ſaid Vſurper, and other her adherents, to take them and deliuer them to the Catholike ſide; but alſo this deed ſhall bee eſteemed of vs for a faithfull and ſingular ſeruice, and ſhall be recompenced with very great rewards, according to the qualitie of the perſons taken or betrayed. All others alſo which heretofore haue giuen ayde, or ſhall hereafter aſſiſt to the puniſhment of the exill, and the reſtitution of Catholike Religion in thoſe Kingdomes, ſhall receiue their reward and recompence, increaſed by vs in Dignities and Honours, as their good and faithfull ſeruice to the Common-wealth ſhall deſire. Wherein as much as may be, care ſhall be had that reckoning and reſpect be holden of the antient and honourable Houſes and Stockes of the ſaid Kingdomes. Laſtly, free acceſſe and ſafe conduct by theſe Preſents is granted to all men, which will ioyne themſelues to the Catholike Armie, and will bring thereto proviſion, furniture of warre, and other neceſſaries, full and liberall ſatisfaction is promiſed for all things, which for the ſeruice and commoditie of the ſaid Armie ſhall be ſupplied by them. And all are admoniſhed and plainly commanded, that they doe their vtmoſt indeuour and diligence, that by their meanes cauſe may bee removed of vſing force in puniſhing thoſe which ſhall neglect this Precept.

Matth. 26. 14. Iudas Iſcariot went to the chiefe Priests: here the chiefe Prieſt preuents the Traitor & couenants for more then 30. pieces, before he be ſollicited with what will you giue me? The Iewiſh Prieſts were dull, compared to theſe Romiſh.

Further more the * Holy Father, in his fatherly loue and ſingular affection to this Expedition, out of the Spirituall Treaſure * of the holy Church (which is committed to his cuſtody and diſpenſation) doth liberally grant plenary Indulgences and remiſſion of Sins, to all thoſe which ſhall bring any aid or fauour to the deprimation and puniſhing of the ſaid perſons, and the reformation of both Kingdomes: to wit, after due penance, Contrition and Confeſſion had according to the Lawes of God and Men, and the receiued cuſtome amongſt Chriſtians.

* Holy Father.
* Pro theſauro carbonis.
The Pope grants that liberally which is all-ly.

NOw that all might bee carried more cloſely, and that this Expedition might ſeeme made againſt the Low-countries, rather then the Engliſh, a ſolemne meeting was appointed firſt neer Oſtend, after at Bruncksburg in Flanders for a treaty of peace with the Queene of England. Henry Earle of Derby, the Lord Cobham, Sir Iames Croſt, D. Dale, D. Rogers were ſent. Richardot plainly ſaid that he knew not what might be put in practiſe in the meane time againſt England. But the Prince and he being demanded if their were any enterpriſe of inuading England, they vtterly denied any thoughts therof. Count Aremberg, Campignie, Richardot, Maes & Garnier were the Princes Delegates, and profeſſed that they had ſufficient Commiſſion for treaty of peace. Firſt a truce was propounded by the Engliſh, and by them denied. Then the Engliſh required that the ancient leagues betwixt the Kings of England and the Houſe of Burgundy might be renewed and confirmed, that the Low-countrymen might inioy their priuiledges and libertie of conſcience, that Spaniards and forraine forces might be removed, that neither they nor their neighbours ſhould haue cauſe to feare; and then the Queene would redeliuer her foure Cautionary Townes. They whiled them with ſuch anſwers as ſuted to their purpoſes, and long adoe was made in weauing and vnweauing Penelopes web, till the Spaniſh Armada was vpon the Coaſt, and the very Ordnance proclaimed in their eares a ſurceaſe from further illuſions. Then did Parma diſmiſſe them, pulled off his Viſor, vncaſing the Fox, and truly appearing in the Lions skin. But let vs now come to take view of this Fleet, and the preparations made for it.

The King of Spaine hauing with ſmall fruit, aboue twenty yeeres together waged warre againſt the Netherlands, after deliberation with his Counſellours thereabout, thought it moſt conuenient to aſſault them once againe by Sea, which had bin attempted ſundry times heretofore, but not with forces ſufficient. Vnto the which expedition it ſtood him now in hand to ioine great puiſſance, as hauing the Engliſh people his profeſſed enemies; whoſe Iland is ſo ſituate, that it may either greatly helpe or hinder all ſuch as ſaile into thoſe parts. For which cauſe he thought good firſt of all to inuade England, being perſwaded by his Secretary Eſconedo, and by diuers other well experienced Spaniards and Dutchmen, and by many Engliſh fugitiues, that the conqueſt of that Iland was leſſe difficult, then the conqueſt of Holland and Zealand. Moreouer the Spaniards were of opinion, that it would be farre more behouefull for their King to conquer England and the Low-countries all at once, then to bee conſtrained continually to maintaine a warlike Nauie to defend his Eaſt and Weſt Indie Fleets, from the Engliſh Drake, and from ſuch like valiant enemies.

And for the ſame purpoſe the King Catholike, had giuen commandement long before in Italy & Spaine, that a great quantitie of timber ſhould be felled for the building of Ships; and had beſides made great preparation of things and furniture requiſite for ſuch an expedition, as namely in founding of braſen Ordnance, in ſtoring vp of corn and victuals, in training of men to vſe warlike weapons, in leuying and muſtering of Souldiers: inſomuch that about the beginning of the yeer 1588. he had finiſhed ſuch a mightie Nauie, & brought it into Lisbon Hauen, as neuer the like had before that time ſailed vpon the Ocean Sea.

Digitized by Google

A very large and particular deſcription of this Nauie was put in print and publiſhed by the Spaniards, the tranſlated copy whereof, in perpetuam rei memoriam, to incite Engliſh thankfulneſſe, I haue here inſerted, but abridged.

Squadron of the Galeons of Portugall.

THe Galeon S. Martin, Captain Generall of the Armie, of 1000. tuns, carrieth 177. Mariners, 300. Souldiers, choſen men, 50. Peeces of Canon, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Cord, and all that which is needfull.

The Galeon S. Iohn, Admirall Generall, of 1050. tuns, carrieth 170. Mariners, 231. Souldiers, 50. Peeces of Canons, and Bullets, Powder, Lead, Cords, and that which is neceſſary.

The Galeon of S. Marke is of 792. tuns, and carrieth 292. Souldiers, 117. Mariners, and Powder, Bullets, Lead, Match, as much as is needfull.

The Galeon S. Philip, of 800. tuns, hath 415. Souldiers, 117. Mariners, 40. Peeces of Artillery, and Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all that is needfull.

The Galeon S. Lewes 830. tuns, hath 376. men of Warre, and 116. Mariners, 40. Peeces of Ordnance, and Bullets, Match, Powder, and other things as much as is needfull.

The Galeon of S. Mathew 750. tuns, 177. men of Warre, 50. Mariners, 40. great Peeces, and Powder, Bullets, Lead, Match, and all other things as much as is needfull.

The Galeon S. Iames 520. tunnes, 300. Souldiers, 100. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, and Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all that which is needfull.

The Galeon of Florence, of 961. tuns, 300. Souldiers, 100. Mariners, 52. Peeces of Ordnance, and Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all the reſt as much as is needfull.

The Galeon S. Chriſtopher, 352. tuns, 300. men of Warre, 90. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Lead, Powder, Match, and all that which they need.

The Galeon S. Bernard, 352. tuns, hath 280. Souldiers, 100. Mariners, 30. Canons, and Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and other neceſſary things as much as they need.

The Zabra Auguſta, of 166. tuns, carrieth 55. Souldiers, 55. Mariners, 13. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and other neceſſary things as much as they need.

The Zabra Iulia, of 166. tuns, 60. Souldiers, 50. Mariners, with Ordnance, Bullets, Powder, and other neceſſaries.

There is in this Squadron, 12. Veſſells, 10. of them Galeons, and two Zabres, which are of 7737. tuns: & there are imbarked in them 3330. Souldiers footmen, & 1290. mariners, which are in ſum 4624. men, & they carry 350. great Peeces, and all that which is neceſſary to the reſt, as bullets, powder, match, lead, &c.

The Armie of Biſcay, of which is Captain Generall Iuan Martines of Ricalde.

THe Ship S. Angell, the Captaine is of 768. tuns, and hath 323. men of War, 114. Mariners, 30. Canons, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all that which is needfull. The Gangrin, Admirall of 1160. tuns, carrieth 300. Souldiers, 100. Mariners, 36. great Peeces of Canons, Bullets, Powder, Match Lead, and all that which is needfull. The Veſſell of S. Iames, 660. tuns, hath 250. Souldiers, 102. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and other neceſſary prouiſions. The Conception of Zubelzu, 468. tuns, hath 100. men of War, and 70. Mariners, 20. great Canons, and Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all other neceſſary things. The Conception de Iuanes del Cano, 418. tuns, hath 164. men of Warre, 70. Mariners, 24. great Peeces, and Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all that which they need. The Magdalene of Iohn Frauncis of Ayala, 330. tuns, carrieth 200. Souldiers, 70. Mariners, 22. great Peeces, and Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and that which is neceſſary to the reſt. The Ship S. Iohn, 350. tuns, hath 130. men of Warre, and 80. Mariners, and 24. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all that which they need for the reſt. The Mary of 165. tuns, carrieth 180. Souldiers, and 100. Mariners, 24. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and other neceſſary things. The Mariela of 520. tuns, hath 130. Souldiers, 54. Mariners, 16. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and the reſt of their fraught. The Ship of S. Mary of Monte-major, of 707. tuns, 220. Souldiers, 50. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, and Match, and other prouiſions. The Pinnace, called the Marie of Aguiare, of 70. tuns, hath 30. men of War, 23. Mariners, 10. Peeces of Canon, Powder, Bullets, Lead, Match, and other neceſſary things. The Pinnace, called Iſabella, of tuns, hath 30. Souldiers, 23. Mariners, 12. Canons, Bullets, and other neceſſary things. The Pinnace of Michel Saſo, of 96. tuns, 30. Souldiers, 24. Mariners, 12. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all other neceſſary things. The Pinnace of S. Steuen, of 78. tuns, hath 30. men of Warre, 26. Mariners, 12. Peeces of Canon, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all other neceſſary things of prouiſion.

There is in this Squadron, 14. Ships, ten of them great, and foure Pinnaces, which are of 6567. tuns of burden, in which Ships bee imbarked 2037. Souldiers, 868. Mariners, which make in all 2802. and 260. great Peeces of Canon, 119000. Bullets, 467. Quintals of Powder, 140. of Lead, 89. of Match.

The Armie of the Gallyes of Caſtille, of the which is Generall, Iaques Flores de Valdes.

THe Galeon S. Chriſtopher, Captaine of 70. tuns, hath 205. men of Warre, and 120. Mariners, and 40. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all that which is neceſſary to the reſt. The Galeon S. Iohn Baptiſt, of 750. tuns hath 250. Souldiers, 140. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, &c Bullets, bullets, Powder, lead, Match, & other necessary things. The Galeon S. Peter, of 530. tuns, 130. men of Warre, 140. Mariners, and 40. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all the rest needfull. The Galeon S. Iohn, of 530. tuns, 170. Souldiers, 120. Mariners, and 30. great Peeces, Powder, Bullets, Lead, Match, and all the rest. The Galeon S. Iames the great, of 530. tuns, 230. Souldiers, 132. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all the rest. The Galeon S. Philip, and S. Iames, of 530. tuns, 159. Souldiers, and 116. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all that is necessary. The Galeon of the Ascension, of 530. tuns, 226. Souldiers, 114. Mariners, and 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all other necessary things. The Galeon of our Lady del Barrio, of 130. tuns, 170. Souldiers, 108. Mariners, and 30. Canons, Bullets, Powder, Lead, and all other necessary furnitures. The Galeon of S. Medel and Celedon, of 530. tuns, 170. Souldiers, 110. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all the rest. Galeon S. Anne of the Port, of 250. tuns, 100. men of Warre, and 80. Mariners, 24. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all the rest. The Ship of our Lord of Vigonia, 750. tuns, 190. men of Warre, and 130. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all the rest. The Vessell of the Trinitee, of 780. tuns, 200. Souldiers, 122. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all the rest. The Ship of S. Katherine, of 862. tuns, 200. men of Warr, 160. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, and Powder, Bullets, Match, Lead, and all the rest. The Ship of S. Iohn Baptist, of 652. tuns, 200. Souldiers, 30. Mariners, 30. Canons, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all the rest. The Pinnace of our Lord Rosary, 30. Souldiers, 25. Mariners, 24. great Peeces, Powder, Bullets, Lead, Match, and the rest of their prouision.

There are in this Squadron, fourteene Galeons and Ships, and two Pinnaces, which beare 8714. tuns. In these Vessells there are imbarked 2458. Souldiers, 1719. Mariners, which are in all, 4177. and 348. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all that which they need.

THe Captaine Ship of 1550. tuns carrieth 304. men of War, 118. Mariners, 50. Canons, Powder, Bullets, and the rest of their prouision. The Ship S. Francis, the Admirall of 915. tuns, 230. Souldiers, 60. Mariners, 30. Canons, Powder, Bullets, and the rest of their prouision. The Galeon S. Iohn Baptist, of 810. tuns 250. Souldiers, and 40. Mariners, 40. great Peeces, Powder, Bullets, Match, Lead, and the rest. The Ship S. Iohn Gargaran, of 569. tuns, 170. men of War, 60. Mariners, 20. great Peeces, Powder, Bullets, Match, Lead, and the rest. The Conception of 862. tuns, 200. men of War, 65. Mariners, 25. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Match, Lead, and all the rest. The Hulke Duquesa, S. Anne of 900. tuns. 250. men of War, and 80. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Powder, Bullets, Match, Lead, and all the rest. The Trinitie, 650. tuns, 200. men of Warre, 80. Mariners, 20. Canons, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and the rest. The Ship S. Mary de Iuncar, of 730. tuns, 240. men of War, 80. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all the rest. The Pinnace of the Holy Ghost, 40. men of War, 33. Mariners, 10. Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match and Cord, and all that which they need.

The Armie of the Ships of Andelozie, of the which is Cap. Don Pedro de Valdes. This Pedro de Valdes was taken, and prisoner in England.

There are in this Squadron 11. Ships, 10. great, and a Pinnace, of the burden of 8762. tuns, in which are imbarked 2400. Souldiers, 800. Mariners, and 260. great Peeces.

THe Ship of S. Anne, the Captaine, of 1200. tuns of burden, hath 300. men of Warre, 60. Mariners, 50. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, and all the rest. The Ship of our Lord of the Rose, Admirall of 945. tuns, 230. Souldiers, 64. Mariners, and 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all the rest. The Ship S. Sanior, of 958. tuns, 330. Souldiers, 50. Mariners, 30. Canons, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and the rest: The Ship of S. Steuen, of 936. tuns, 200. men of Warre, 70. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, Bullets, Powder, Lead, Match, and all the rest. The Ship of S. Marthe of 548. tuns, 180. men of Warre, 70. Mariners, 25. great Peeces, bullets, powder, and the rest. The ship S. Barbe of 525. tuns, 160. Souldiers, 50. Mariners, 15. Canons, bullets, powder, lead, match, and all the rest. The ship of S. Bonaventure, of 369. tuns, 170. Souldiers, 60. Mariners, 15. great Peeces, bullets, powder, lead, and the rest. The Mary of 291. tuns, 120. Souldiers, 40. Mariners, 15. great Peeces, bullets, powder, lead, and the rest. The S. Croix 686. tuns, 150. Souldiers 40. Mariners, 20. great Peeces, bullets, powder, match, lead, and the rest. The Hulke Dowella, 500. tuns, 160. men of War, 40. Mariners, 18 great Peeces, powder, bullets, match, lead and all the rest. The Patax of the Annunciation of 60. tuns, 30. men of War, 16. Mariners, 12. great Peeces, bullets, powder, match, lead, and all the rest. The Patax S. Bernabe, is the same burden as the aforenamed. The Patax of our Lady of Guadalupe is of the same burden also. The Pinnace of Magdelene, is also the same burden.

The Armie of Ships come from the Prouince of Giporce, of which is Generall Michell de Oquendo.

There are in this Squadron, 14. Ships, ten great Ships, two Pataches, and two Pinnaces, of 6991. tuns of burden. In which Vessels, there are imbarked 2092. men of Warre, and 670. Mariners, all commeth 2708.

THe Regasona, the Captaine, which is of 1294. tuns, hath 350. Souldiers, 90. Mariners, 35. great Peeces, powder, bullets, lead, match, and all the rest: The Lama, the Admirall, of 728. tuns, 210. Souldiers, 80. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, powder, bullets, lead, match, and all the rest.

The Armie of the East, of the which is chief Martin de Vrtendona.

Digitized by Google

The Rata S. Mary crowned of 820. tuns, 340. men of Warre, 90. Mariners, 40. great Peeces, powder, bullets, match, lead, and the rest. The S. Iohn of Cicile, of 880. tuns, 290. men of Warre, 70. Mariners, 30. Canons, and all the rest. The Trinitie Valencera, of a 1000. tuns, 240. Souldiers, 90. Mariners, 41. great Peeces, and all the rest of their furnitures. The Annuntiation of 730. tuns, 200. Souldiers, 90. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, and all the rest. The S. Nicholas Prodaueli of 834. tunnes, 280. Souldiers, 84. Mariners, 30. great Peeces, and all the rest. The Iuliane of 780. tuns, 330. Souldiers, 80. Mariners, 36. great Peeces, and the rest. The Mary Pison of 666. tuns, 256. Souldiers, 80. Mariners, 22. great Peeces, and the rest of their need. The Trinitie Escala of 900. tunnes, 302. Souldiers, 25. great Peeces, and all the rest of their furniture.

In which Squadron there are ten Ships, which are of 7705. tuns of burthen, and there are imbarked in them 2880. Souldiers, 807. Mariners, 310. great Peeces, with the rest of that they haue.

The Armie of Hulkes in the which is Cap. Iohn Lopez of Medina.

THe great Grifon, the Captaine, of 600. tuns, 250. Souldiers, 60. Mariners, 40. great Peeces, and the rest. The S. Sauior the Admirall of 650. tuns, 230. Souldiers, 60. Mariners, 30. great Peeces and the rest of their prouision. The Sea Dog, of 200. tuns, 80. Souldiers, 30. Mariners, 10. great Peeces, and the rest. The White Faulcon the great, of 500. tuns, 160. men of Warre, 40. Mariners, 18. great Peeces, and all the rest. The Blacke Caſtle of 750. tuns, 250. Souldiers, 50. Mariners, 25. great Peeces, and all the rest. The Barke of Awburg, of 600. tuns, 250. men of War. 50. Mariners, 25. Canons, and the rest. The Houſe of peace the great, of the ſame burthen. The S. Peter the great of the ſame burthen alſo. The Sampſon, and Peter the ſmall, doe beare the ſame. The Barke of Anzique, of 450. tuns, 210. Souldiers, 50. Mariners, 26. great Peeces, and the reſt of their prouiſion. The Falcon, the meane White, of 300. tuns, 80. men of War, 30. Mariners, 18. great Peeces, and all the reſt. The S. Andrew of 400. tuns, 160. Souldiers. 40. Mariners, 15. great Peeces, and the reſt of their prouiſion. The Little houſe of peace, of 350. tuns, 160. Souldiers, 40. Mariners, 15. great Peeces, and the reſt of their prouiſion. The Flying Rauen of 400. tuns, 210. Souldiers 40. Mariners, 18. great Peeces, and the reſt of their furniture.

Pataches and Zabres, wherein Don Antony of Mendoza commandeth.

THe White Doue, of 250. tuns, 60. Souldiers, 30. Mariners, 12. great Peeces, and the reſt. The Aduenture, S. Barbe traughted of the ſame. The S. Iames 600. tuns, 60. Souldiers, 40. Mariners, 19. great Peeces, and all the reſt. S. Gabriel of the Port, of 280. tuns, 50. Souldiers, 25. Mariners, 9. great Peeces, and the reſt of their furniture. The Eſay is fraughted of the ſame.

There are in this Squadron 23. Hulkes, which are of 10271. tuns, in the which are imbarked 3221. men of Warre, 708. Mariners, 410. great peeces, and their neceſſary prouiſion.

The Captaine of our Lord of Pilier of Zaragoſſe of 300. tunnes, 120. Souldiers, 50. Mariners, 12. great Peeces, and their furniture. The Engliſh Charity, of 180. tuns, 80. Souldiers, 36. Mariners, 12. great Peeces, and the reſt. The Scottiſh S. Andrew of 150. tuns, 51. Souldiers, 30. Mariners, 12. great Peeces, and their furniture. The Patache of the Crucifix, 150. tuns, 50. Souldiers, 30. Mariners, 8. great Peeces, and their furniture. Our Lord of the Hauen fraught alike. The Conception of Caraſſa, and our Lord of Begona, and the Conception de Capitilla, and S. Hieroſ, being of the burthen of 60. or 70. tuns, 50. Souldiers, 30. Mariners, 8. great Peeces, a Peece, and their furniture. Our Lady of grace, the Conception of Frauncys Laſtero, our Lady of Guadalupe, S. Frauncys, the Holy Spirit, our Lady of Freneſida, all fraughted alike. The Zabra of the Trinitie, the Zabra of our Lady Caſtre, S. Andrew, the Conception of Zomartiba, S. Clere, S. Iohn of Caraſſa, and the Aſſumption, all fraughted alike.

There are in this Squadron 22. Pataches and Zabres, which are of the burthen of 1131. tuns, in the which there are imbarked 479. Souldiers, 574. Mariners, and there is 193. great Peeces, and all their furniture.

The foure Galeaces of Naples, which are giuē in charge to Don Vgo de Moncada.

THe Galeace the Captaine called S. Laurence, hath 270. Souldiers, 130. Mariners, 300. Slaues, 50. Peeces of Canon, and their furniture. The Galeace Patrone, 180. Souldiers, 112. Mariners, 300. Slaues, 50. great Peeces, and their furniture. The Galeace Girone, 170. Souldiers, 120. Mariners, 300. Slaues, 50. great Peeces. The Galeace Neapolitaine 124. Souldiers, 115. Mariners, 300. Slaues, 50. great Peeces, and the reſt of their neceſſary fraught.

There are in theſe foure Galeaces 873. Souldiers, 468. Mariners, 200. great Peeces, 1200. Slaues, and the reſt of their furniture.

The Gally Captaine, 110. Souldiers, 106. Mariners, 306. Slaues, and fiftie great Peeces, and other neceſſaries. The Gally Princeſſe, the Gally Diana, the Gally Vacana, are the like.

In the aboue named Galeaces, there are 1200. Slaues, and in the foure gallies, 888. which is in all 2088. Moreouer, they carry powder for their need, if it be offered to doe battery, 600. Quintals.

So that there are in the ſaid Army 130. Ships of 57868. tuns, 19295. Souldiers, and 8450. Mariners, 2088. Slaues, and 2630. great Peeces of Braſſe of all ſorts, among which there are Colewines, and demy Colewines, and Canons to the Stone, and other neceſſaries for their fraught.

In the Booke follow the names of the Aduenturers, alſo of ſuch as in the Army were entertained for pay; ſuch alſo as were imbarked for the ſeruice of the Canon, for the Hoſpitall, the Regiments, and Companies in pay, the Officers, &c. which for breuitie I omit.

The

The Galeons were sixtie foure in number, being of an huge bignesse, and verie stately built, being of maruelous force also, and so high, that they resembled great Castles, most fit to defend themselues and to withstand any assault, but in giuing any other Ships the encounter farre inferiour vnto the English and Dutch Ships, which can with great dexteritie weild & turne themselues at all assaies. The vpper worke of the said Galeons was of thickneſſe and strength sufficient to beare off Musket-shot. The lower worke and the timbers thereof were out of measure strong, being framed for plankes and ribs foure or fiue foot in thickneſſe, insomuch that no bullets could pierce them, but such as were discharged hard at hand: which afterward proued true, for a great number of bullets were found to sticke fast within the masse substance of those thicke plankes. Great and well pitched Cables were twined about the masts of their Ships, to strengthen them against the battery of shot. A description of the Galeons

The Galliasses were of such bignesse, that they contained within them Chambers, Chappels, Turrets, Pulpits, and other commodities of great houses. The Galliasses were rowed with great Oares, there being in each of them 300. slaues for the same purpose, and were able to doe great seruice with the force of their Ordnance. All these together with the rest aforenamed were furnished and beautified with Trumpets, Streamers, Banners, warlike Ensignes, and other such like ornaments. A description of the Galliasses.

Their Pieces of Brasen Ordnance were 1600. and of Iron 1000. The Bullets thereto belonging were 120. thousand. Item of Gunpowder 5600. quintals. Of Match 1200 quintals. Of Muskets and Kaleiuers 7000. Of Halberts and Partisans 10000. Moreouer, they had great store of Canons, double Canons, Culuerings and field-pieces for land seruice. The great Ordnance, bullets, Gunpowder, and other furniture.

Likewise they were prouided of all instruments necessarie on Land to conueigh and transport their furniture from place to place; as namely of Carts, Wheeles, Wagons, &c. Also they had Spades, Mattocks and Baskets to set pioners on worke. They had in like sort great store of Mules and Horses, and whatsoeuer else was requisite for a Land-armie. They were so well stored of Biscuit, that for the space of halfe a yeere, they might allow each person in the whole Fleete halfe a quintall euery moneth: whereof the whole summe amounteth vnto an hundreth thousand quintals. Their prouision of victuals & other things necessary.

Likewise of Wine they had 147. thousand Pipes, sufficient also for halfe a yeeres expedition. Of Bacon 6500. quintals, Of Cheese three thousand quintals. Besides Fish, Rice, Beanes, Peise, Oyle, Vinegar, &c.

Moreouer, they had 13000. Pipes of fresh water, and all other necessarie prouision; as namely Candles, Lanternes, Lampes, Sa les, Hempe, Oxe-hides and Lead to stop holes that should be made with the batterie of Gunshot. To be short, they brought all things expedient either for a Fleete by Sea, or for an Armie by land.

This Nauie (as Diego Pimentelli afterward confessed) was esteemed by the King himselfe to containe 32000. persons, and to cost him euery day 30. thousand Ducates. 31000. persons in the Nauie.

There were in the said Nauie fiue Tercaes of Spaniards (which Tercaes the Frenchmen call Regiments) vnder the command of fiue Gouernours, tearmed by the Spaniards Masters of the field, and amongst the rest there were many old and expert Souldiers chosen out of the Garrisons of Sicilie, Naples, and Terçera. Their Captaines or Colonels were Diego Pimentelli, Don Francisco de Toledo, Don Alonzo de Luçon, Don Nicolas de Isla, Don Augustin de Mexia: who had each of them two and thirty Companies vnder their conduct. Besides the which Companies there were many bands also of Castilians and Portugals, euery one of which had their peculiar Gouernours, Captaines, Officers, Colours and weapons. A Spanish tercio consisteth of 3200. souldiers.

It was not lawfull for any man, vnder grieuous penaltie, to carry any woman or harlots in the Fleete: for which cause the women hired certaine Ships, wherein they sailed after the Nauie: some of the which being driuen by tempest arriued vpon the coast of France. Baggage of the Armada.

The Generall of this mightie Nauie, was Don Alonso Perez de Guzman Duke of Medina Sidonia, Lord of S. Lucar, and Knight of the golden Fleece: by reason that the Marqueſſe of Santa Cruz appointed for the same dignity, deceased before the time.

Iohn Martines de Ricalde was Admirall of the Fleete.

Francis Bonadilla was chiefe Marshall: who all of them had their officers fit and requisite for the guiding and managing of such a multitude. Likewise Martin Alorcon was appointed Vicar generall of the Inquisition, being accompanied with more then a hundreth Monkes, to wit, Iesuites, Capuchines, and Friers Mendicant. Besides whom also there were Phisitians, Chirurgians, Apothecaries, and whatsoeuer else pertained vnto the Hospitall.

Ouer and besides the forenamed Gouernours and Officers, being men of chiefe note, there were 124. very noble and worthy Gentlemen, which went voluntarily of their owne costs and charges, to the end they might see fashions, learne experience, and attaine vnto glory. Amongst whom was the Prince of Ascoli, Alonzo de Leiua, the Marqueſſe de Pennafiel, the Marqueſſe de Gaues, the Marqueſſe de Barlango, Count de Paredes, Count de Telnua, and diuers other Marqueſſes and Earles of the honorable families of Mendoza, of Toledo, of Pacheco, of Cordoua, of Guzman, of Manriques, and a great number of others.

Digitized by Google

I haue by me the Duke Orders for the whole Nauie, during this Voyage, made aboard the Gallion Saint Martin, May 28. the beginning whereof I haue added, the whole would be too long.

DON ALONSO PERES DE GVSMAN, the good Duke of Medina, Sidonia, Countie of Nebla, Marqueſſe of Caſheſhe in Africa, Lord of the Citie Saint Lucar, Captaine Generall of the Occian Sea, of the Coaſt of Andaluzia, and of this Armie of his Maieſtie, and Knight of the honorable Order of the golden Fleece.

I Doe ordaine and command, that the generall Maſters of the field, all Captaines of the Sea, Pilats, Maſters, Souldiers, Mariners, and Officers, and whatſoeuer other people for the Land or Sea ſeruice commeth in this Armie, all the time that it indureth, ſhall be thus gouerned, as hereafter followeth, viz.

The cauſe of the iourney.

First, and before all things, it is to be vnderſtood by all the aboue named from the higheſt to the loweſt: that the principall foundation and cauſe that hath moued the King his Maieſtie to make and continue this iournie, hath beene, and is, to ſerue God, and to returne vnto his Church a great many of contrite ſoules that are oppreſſed by the Heretikes, enemies of our holy Catholike faith, which haue them ſubiects to their ſects and vnhappineſſe: and for that euery one, may put his eyes vpon this marke, as we are bound, I doe command and much deſire euery one, to giue charge vnto the inferiors and thoſe vnder their charge to imbarke themſelues, being ſhriuen, and hauing receiued the Sacrament with competence and contrition for their ſinnes; by the which contrition and zeale to doe God ſuch great ſeruice, he will carry and guide vs to his great glory; which is, that which particularly and principally is pretended.

Their ſhrift.

For auoiding blaſphemy and raging oathes, and others.

In like manner, I doe charge and command you, to haue particular care, that no Soldier, Mariner, or other, that ſerueth in this Armie, doe blaſpheme, or rage againſt God, or our Lady, or any of the Saints, vpon paine that he ſhall therefore ſharply be corrected, and very well chaſtened, as it ſhall ſeeme beſt vnto vs: and for other oathes of leſſe qualitie, the Gouernours in the ſame Ships they goe in, ſhall procure to remedy all: they ſhall puniſh them in taking away their allowance of Wine, or otherwiſe as they ſhall thinke good. And for that the moſt occaſions come by play, you ſhall publikly prohibit it, eſpecially the games that are forbidden: and that none doe play in the night by no meanes.

Debarring play.

Articles follow to ſuppreſſe quarrels, to auoid diſgracing any man, and all occaſions of ſcandall, forbidding carriage of common women; with other orders for watchwords, attendance on the Admirall, for fire and wilde-fire, and lights, armours, ſhot, powder, match, and other neceſſary inſtructions, too long to be here particularized: that in the height of humaine policie, and religious hypocriſie, the hand of God in Englands preſeruation may be made euident.

The preparation of the Duke of Parma to aide the Spaniards.

While the Spaniards were furniſhing this their Nauie, the Duke of Parma, at the direction of King Philip, made great preparation in the low Countries, to giue aide and aſſiſtance vnto the Spaniards, building Ships for the ſame purpoſe, and ſending for Pilots and Ship-wrights out of Italy. In Flanders he cauſed certaine deepe channels to be made, and among the reſt, the channell of Yper, commonly called Yper-lee, employing ſome thouſands of workemen about that ſeruice: to the end that by the ſaid Cannell he might tranſport Ships from Antwerp and Ghendt to Bruges where he had aſſembled aboue a hundreth ſmall Ships, called Hoyes, being well ſtored with victuals, which Hoyes he was determined to haue brought into the Sea by the way of Sluys, or elſe to haue conueied them by the ſaid Yper-lee, being now of greater depth, into any port of Flanders whatſoeuer.

In the Riuer of Waten, he cauſed 70. Ships with flat bottomes to be built, euery one of which ſhould ſerue to carry 30. horſes, hauing each of them Bridges likewiſe for the Horſes to come on boord, or to goe forth on land. Of the ſame faſhion he had prouided 200. other veſſels at Neuport, but not ſo great. And at Dunkerk he procured 28. Ships of warre, ſuch as were there to be had, and cauſed a ſufficient number of Mariners to be leuied at Hamburg, Breme, Emden, and at other places. He put in the ballaſt of the ſaid Ships, great ſtore of beames of thicke plankes, being hollow and beſet with Iron pikes beneath, but on each ſide full of claſpes and hookes, to ioyne them together.

He had likewiſe at Graueling prouided 20. thouſand of caske, which in a ſhort ſpace might be compact and ioyned together with nailes and cords, and reduced into the forme of a Bridge. To be ſhort, whatſoeuer things were requiſite for the making of Bridges, and for the barring & ſtopping vp of Hauens mouthes with ſtakes, poſts, and other meanes, he commanded to be made ready. Moreouer, not far from Neuport hauen, he had cauſed a great pile of wooden fagots to be laid, and other furniture to be brought for the rearing vp of a Mount. The moſt part of his Ships contained two Ouens a peece to bake Bread in, with a great number of ſaddles, bridles, and ſuch other like like apparell for Horſes. They had Horſes likewiſe, which after their landing ſhould ſerue to conuey and draw engines, field-pieces, and other warlike prouiſions.

Neere vnto Nerupert he had aſſembled an armie, ouer the which hee had ordained Camillo de Monte to be Camp-maſter. This army conſiſted of 30. bands or enſignes of Italians, of ten bands of Wallons, eight of Scots, and eight of Burgundians, all which together amount vnto 56. bands euery band containing a hundreth perſons. Neere vnto Dixmund there were muſtered eightie bands of Dutchmen, ſixtie of Spaniards, ſix of high Germans, and ſeuen bands of Engliſh fugitiues, vnder the conduct of Sir William Stanlie, an Engliſh Knight. In the ſuburbs of Cortreight there were 4000. horſemen together with their horſes in a readineſſe: and at Waten 900. horſes, with the troupe of the Marqueſſe del Guaſto Captaine generall of the horſemen.

Vnto this famous expedition and preſuppoſed victorie, many potentates, Princes, and honorable perſonages lued themſelues: out of Spaine the Prince of Melito, called the Duke of Paſtrana, and taken to be the Son of one Ruygomes de Silua, but in very deede accompted among the number of King Philips baſe ſons. Alſo the Marqueſſe of Burgraue, one of the ſons of Arch-duke Ferdinand and Philippa Welſera. Veſpaſian Gonſaga of the family of Mantua, being for chiualry a man of great renowne, and heretofore Vice-roy in Spaine. Item Iohn Medices, baſe ſon vnto the Duke of Florence. And Amadas of Sauoy, the Duke of Sauoy his baſe ſon, with many others of inferiour degrees.

At length when as the French King about the end of May ſignified vnto her Maieſtie in plaine tearmes that ſhe ſhould ſtand vpon her guard, becauſe he was now certainly enformed, that there was ſo dangerous an inuaſion imminent vpon her Realme, that he feared much, leaſt all her land and ſea-forces would be ſufficient to withſtand it, &c. then began the Queenes Maieſtie more carefully to gather her forces together, and to furniſh her own ſhips of warre, and the principall ſhips of her ſubiects, with ſouldiers, weapons, and other neceſſary prouiſion. The greateſt and ſtrongeſt ſhips of the whole Nauie ſhe ſent vnto Plimmouth, vnder the conduct of the right honorable Lord Charles Howard, Lord high Admirall of England, &c. Vnder whom the renowned Knight Sir Francis Drake was appointed Vice-admirall. The number of theſe ſhips was about an hundreth. The leſſer ſhips being 30. or 40. in number, and vnder the conduct of the Lord Henry Seimer were commanded to lie betweene Douer and Caleis. Her Maieſties warlike preparation by Sea.

On land likewiſe throughout the whole realme, ſouldiers were muſtered and trained in all places, and were committed vnto the moſt reſolute and faithfull captaines. And whereas it was commonly giuen out, that the Spaniard hauing once vnited himſelfe vnto the Duke of Parma, ment to inuade by the riuer of Thames, there was at Tilburie in Eſſex, ouer-againſt Grauеſend, a mighty army encamped: and on both ſides of the riuer fortifications were erected, according to the preſcription of Frederike Genebelli an Italian enginier. Likewiſe there were certaine ſhips brought to make a Bridge, though it were very late firſt. Vnto the ſaid Armie came in proper perſon the Queenes moſt roiall Maieſtie, repreſenting Tomyris that Scithian warlike Princeſſe, or rather diuine Pallas her ſelfe. Alſo there were other ſuch armies leuied in England. Her Maieſties Land-forces.

The principal Reculants (leaſt they ſhould ſtir vp any tumult in the time of the Spaniſh inuaſion) were ſent to remaine at certain conuenient places, as namely in the Iſle of Ely and at Wisbich. And ſome of them were ſent vnto other places, to wit, vnto ſundry Biſhops and Noblemen, where they were kept from endangering the ſtate of the common wealth, and of her ſacred Maieſtie, who of her moſt gracious clemency gaue expreſſe commandement, that they ſhould be intreated with all humanitie and friendſhip. Catholike Roman.

The Prouinces of Holland, Zeland, &c. giuing credit vnto their intelligence out of Spaine, made preparation to defend themſelues: but becauſe the Spaniſh ſhips were deſcribed vnto them to be ſo huge, they relied partly vpon the ſhallow and dangerous Seas all along their coaſts. Wherefore they ſtood moſt in doubt of the Duke of Parma, his ſmall and flat-bottomed ſhips. Howbeit they had all their ſhips of warre to the number of nintie and aboue, in a readineſſe for all aduentures: the greater part whereof were of a ſmall burthen, as being more meete to ſaile vpon their Riuers and ſhallow Seas: and with theſe ſhips they beſieged all the hauens in Flanders, beginning at the mouth of Scheld, or from the towne of Lillo, and holding on to Greneling, and almoſt vnto Caleis, and fortified all their Sea-townes with ſtrong garriſons. The preparation of the vnited Prouinces.

Againſt the Spaniſh fleets arriuall, they had prouided fiue and twenty or thirty good ſhips, committing the gouernment of them vnto Admirall Lonck, whom they commanded to ioine himſelfe vnto the Lord Henry Seymor, lying betweene Douer and Cales. And when as the foreſaid ſhips (whereof the greater part beſieged the hauen of Dunkerke) were driuen by tempeſt into Zeland, Iuſtin of Naſſau the Admirall of Zeland ſupplied that ſquadron with fiue and thirty ſhips, being of no great burthen, but excellently furniſhed with Guns, Mariners and Souldiers in great abundance, & eſpecially with 1200 braue Muſquetiers, hauing beene acouſtomed vnto Sea-fights, and being choſen out of all their company for the ſame purpoſe: and ſo the ſaid Iuſtin of Naſſau kept ſuch diligent ward in the Station, that the Duke of Parma could not iſſue forth with his Nauie into Sea out of any part of Flanders.

In the meane while the Spaniſh Armada ſet ſaile out of the hauen of Lisbon vpon the 19. of May

The Spaniſh fleete ſet ſaile vpon the 19 of May.

O multum dilecta Deo, tibi militat æther conjurati veniunt ad claſſica venti &c.

Guins valour.

May; An. Dom. 1588. vnder the conduct of the Duke of Medina Sidonia, directing their courſe for the Bay of Corunna, alias the Groine in Gallicia, where they tooke in ſouldiers, and warlike prouiſion, this port being in Spaine the neereſt vnto England. As they were ſailing along, there aroſe ſuch a mighty tempeſt, that the whole Fleet was diſperſed, ſo that when the Duke was returned vnto his company, he could not eſcry aboue eighty ſhips in all, whereunto the reſidue by little and little ioyned themſelues, except eight which had their Maſts blowne ouer-boord. One of the foure Gallies of Portingall eſcaped very hardly, retiring her ſelfe into the hauen. The other three were vpon the coaſt of Baion in France, by the aſſiſtance and courage of one David Gwin, an Engliſh Captine (whom the French and Turkiſh ſlaues aided in the ſame enterpriſe) vtterly diſabled and vanquiſhed: one of the three being firſt ouercome, which conquered the two other, with the ſlaughter of their Gouernour and ſouldiers, and among the reſt of Don Diego de Mandrana, with ſundry others: and ſo thoſe ſlaues arriued in France with the three Gallies, ſet themſelues at libertie.

They ſet ſaile from the Groine vpon the 11. of Iuly.

The Spaniards come within kenning of England.

Cap. Fleming.

The Nauie hauing refreſhed themſelues at the Groine, and receiuing daily commandement from the King to haſten their iournie, hoiſed vp ſailes the 11. day of Iuly, and ſo holding on their courſe till the 19. of the ſame moneth, they came then vnto the mouth of the narrow Seas or Engliſh channell. From whence (ſtriking their ſailes in the meane ſeaſon) they diſpatched certain of their ſmall ſhips vnto the Duke of Parma. At the ſame time the Spaniſh Fleete was eſcried by an Engliſh Pinnace, Captaine whereof was Maſter Thomas Fleming, after they had beene aduertiſed of the Spaniards expedition by their ſcoutes and eſpials, which hauing ranged along the coaſt of Spaine, were lately returned home into Plimmoth for a new ſupply of victuals and other neceſſaries, who conſidering the foreſaid tempeſt, were of opinion that the Nauie being of late diſperſed and toſſed vp and downe the maine Ocean, was by no meanes able to performe their intended Voyage. Moreouer, the Lord Charles Howard, Lord high Admirall of England, had receiued Letters from the Court, ſignifying vnto him, that her Maieſty was aduertiſed that the Spaniſh Fleete would not come forth, nor was to be any longer expected for, and therefore, that vpon her Maieſties commandement hee muſt ſend backe foure of her talleſt and ſtrongeſt Ships vnto Chattam.

The L. Admirals ſhort warning vpon the 19. of Iuly.

The Lord high Admirall of England being thus on the ſudden, namely vpon the 19. of Iuly about foure of the clocke in the afternoone, enformed by the Pinnace of Captaine Fleming aforeſaid, of the Spaniards approach, with all ſpeede and diligence poſſible hee warped his Ships, and cauſed his Mariners and Souldiers (the greater part of whom was abſent for the cauſe aforeſaid) to come on boord, and that with great trouble and difficultie, inſomuch that the Lord Admirall himſelfe was faine to lie without in the road with ſix Ships onely all that night, after the which many others came forth of the hauen.

The 20. of Iuly.

The very next day, being the 20. of Iuly about high noone, was the Spaniſh Fleet eſcried by the Engliſh, which with a South-weſt winde came ſailing along, and paſſed by Plimmouth; in which regard (according to the iudgement of many skilfull Nauigators) they greatly ouerſhot themſelues, whereas it had beene more commodious for them to haue ſtaied themſelues there, conſidering that the Engliſhmen being as yet vnprouided, greatly relied vpon their owne forces, and knew not the eſtate of the Spaniſh Nauie. Moreouer, this was the moſt conuenient Port of all others, where they might with greater ſecurity haue beene aduertiſed of the Engliſh forces, and how the commons of the land ſtood affected, and might haue ſtirred vp ſome mutinie, ſo that hither they ſhould haue bent all their puiſſance, and from hence the Duke of Parma might more eaſily haue conueied his Ships. But this they were prohibited to doe by the King and his Counſell, and were expreſly commanded to vnite themſelues vnto the ſouldiers and ſhips of the ſaid Duke of Parma, and ſo to bring their purpoſe to effect. Which was thought to be the moſt eaſie and direct courſe, for that they imagined that the Engliſh and Dutch men would be vtterly daunted and diſmaied thereat, and would each man of them retire vnto his owne Prouince or Port for the defence thereof, and tranſporting the Armie of the Duke vnder the protection of their huge Nauie, they might inuade England. It is reported that the chiefe commanders in the Nauy, and thoſe which were more skilfull in nauigation, to wit, Iohn Martines de Ricalde, Diego Flores de Valdez, and diuers others, found fault that they were bound vnto ſo ſtrict directions and inſtructions, becauſe that in ſuch a caſe many particular accidents ought to concurre and to be reſpected at one and the ſame inſtant, that is to ſay, the opportunitie of the winde, weather, time, tide, and ebbe, wherein they might faile from Flanders to England. Oftentimes alſo the darkneſſe and light, the ſituation of places, the depths and ſhoalds were to be conſidered: all which eſpecially depended vpon the conueniency of the windes, and were by ſo much the more dangerous. But it ſeemed that they were enioyned by their Commiſſion to ancre neere vnto, or about Caleis, whither the Duke of Parma with his ſhips and all his warlike prouiſion was to reſort, and while the Engliſh and Spaniſh great ſhips were in the midſt of their conflict, to paſſe by, and to land his ſouldiers vpon the Downes. The Spaniſh Captiues reported that they were determined firſt to haue entred the Riuer of Thames, & thereupon to haue paſſed with ſmall ſhips vp to London, ſuppoſing that they might eaſily win that rich and flouriſhing Citie, being but meanely fortified and inhabited with Citizens not accuſtomed to the wars, who durſt Gods great mercy to England. For had not Flemming brought word, the Queenes Nauie had eaſily beene oppreſſed: nor could it ſo ſoon be ready, had the Spaniards then taken their opportunitie.

not not withstand their first encounter, hoping moreouer to finde many rebels against her Maiestie, and Popish Catholikes, or some fauourers of the Scottish Queene (not long before beheaded) who might be instruments of sedition.

Thus often aduertising the Duke of Parma of their approach, the 20. of Iuly they passed by Plimmouth, which the English pursuing and getting the winde of them, gaue them the chase and the encounter, and so both Fleetes frankly exchanged their Bullets.

The day following, which was the 21. of Iuly, the English Ships approached within Musket shot of the Spanish: at what time the Lord Charles Howard most hotly and valiantly discharged his Ordnance vpon the Spanish Vice-admirall. The Spaniards then well perceiuing the nimblenesse of the English ships in discharging vpon the enemy on all sides, gathered themselues close into the forme of an halfe Moone, and slackned their sailes, least they should outgoe any of their company. And while they were proceeding on in this manner, one of their great Galliasses was so furiously battered with shot, that the whole Nauie was faine to come vp rounder together for the safegard thereof: whereby it came to passe that the principall Galleon of Sivill (wherein Don Pedro de Valdez, Vasques de Silua, Alonzo de Sayas, and other Noble men were embarqued) falling foule of another ship, had her fore-mast broken, and by that meanes was not able to keepe way with the Spanish Fleete, neither would the said Fleete stay to succour it, but left the distressed Galeon behinde. The Lord Admirall of England, when hee saw this Ship of Valdez, and thought she had beene voide of Marriners and Souldiers, taking with him as many ships as he could, passed by it, that hee might not loose sight of the Spanish Fleete that night. For Sir Francis Drake (who was notwithstanding appointed to beare out his Lanterne that night) was giuing of chase vnto fiue great Hulkes which had separated themselues from the Spanish Fleete: but finding them to be Easterlings, hee dismissed them. The Lord Admirall all that night following the Spanish Lanterne instead of the English, found himselfe in the morning to be in the midst of his enemies Fleete, but when he perceiued it, he cleanly conueied himselfe out of that great danger.

The 21. of Iuly

Galeon forsaken.

The day following, which was the 22. of Iuly, Sir Francis Drake espied Valdez his ship, whereunto he sent for his Pinnace, and being aduertised that Valdez himselfe was there, and 450. persons with him, he sent him word that hee should yeelde himselfe. Valdez for his honours sake caused certaine conditions to be propounded vnto Drake: who answered Valdez, that he was not now at leisure to make any long parle, but if he would yeelde himselfe, he should finde him friendly and tractable: howbeit if he had resolued to die in fight, he should proue Drake to be no dastard. Vpon which answer, Valdez and his Company vnderstanding that they were fallen into the hands of fortunate Drake, being moued with the renowme and celebritie of his name, with one consent yeelded themselues, and found him very fauourable vnto them. Then Valdez with forty or fiftie Noblemen and Gentlemen pertaining vnto him, came on boord Sir Francis Drakes ship. The residue of his company were carried vnto Plimmouth, where they were detained a yeere and an halfe for their ransome.

The 22. of Iuly

Don Pedro de Valdez with his ships and company take.

Valdez comming vnto Drake, and humbly kissing his hand, protesting vnto him, that he and his had resolued to die in battell, had they not by good fortune fallen into his power, whom they knew to be right courteous and gentle, and whom they had heard by generall report to be most fauourable vnto his vanquished foe: insomuch, that he said it was to be doubted whether his enemy had more cause to admire and loue him for his great, valiant, and prosperous exploits, or to dread him for his singular felicity and wisdome, which euer attended vpon him in the wars, and by the which he had attained vnto so great honor. With that Drake embraced him, and gaue him very honorable entertainment, feeding him at his owne table, and lodging him in his Cabbin. Here Valdez began to recount vnto Drake the forces of all the Spanish Fleete, and how foure mighty Gallies were separated by tempest from them: and also how they were determined first to haue put into Plimmouth hauen, not expecting to be repelled thence by the English ships, which they thought could by no meanes withstand their impregnable forces, perswading themselues that by meanes of their huge Fleete, they were become Lords and commanders of the maine Ocean. For which cause they marueiled much how the Englishmen in their small Ships durst approach within musket shot of the Spaniards mighty wodden Castles, gathering the wind of them, with many other such like attempts. Immediately after, Valdez and his Company (being a man of principall authority in the Spanish Fleet, and being descended of one and the same family with that Valdez, which in the yeere 1574. besieged Leiden in Holland) were sent captiues into England. There were in the said ship 55. thousand Duckets in ready monie of the Spanish Kings gold, which the souldiers merrily shared among themselues.

Virtus in hoste laudanda.

55000. duckets

The same day was set on fire one of their greatest ships, being Admirall of the squadron of Guipusco, and being the ship of Michael de Oquendo Vice-admirall of the whole Fleete, which contained great store of Gunpowder, and other warlike prouision. The vpper part onely of this ship was burnt, and all the persons therein contained (except a very few) were consumed with fire. And thereupon it was taken by the English, and brought into England, with a number of miserable burnt and scorched Spaniards. Howbeit the Gunpowder (to the great admiration of all men) remained whole and vnconsumed.

A great Biscaine ship taken by the English.

In

In the meane season the Lord Admirall of England in his ship, called the Arke-royall, all that night pursued the Spaniards so neere, that in the morning hee was almost left alone in the enemies Fleete, and it was foure of the clocke at afternoone before the residue of the English Fleete could ouertake him. At the same time Hugo de Moncada, Gouernour of the foure Gallasses, made humble suite vnto the Duke of Medina that hee might be licenced to encounter the Admirall of England: which liberty the Duke thought not good to permit vnto him, because he was loath to exceede the limits of his Commission and charge.

The 23. of Iuly

Vpon tuesday, which was the 23. of Iuly, the Nauy being come ouer against Portland, the wind began to turne Northerly, insomuch that the Spaniards had a fortunate and fit gale to inuade the English. But the Englishmen hauing lesser and nimbler ships, recouered againe the vantage of the winde from the Spaniards, whereat the Spaniards seemed to be more incensed to fight then before. But when the English fleet had continually and without intermission from morning to night beaten and battered them with all their shot both great and small: the Spaniards vniting themselues, gathered their whole Fleete close together into a roundell, so that it was apparant that they ment not as yet to inuade others, but onely to defend themselues, & to make haste vnto the place prescribed vnto them, which was neere vnto Dunkerk, that they might ioyne forces with the Duke of Parma, who was determined to haue proceeded secretly with his small ships vnder the shadow and protection of the great ones, and so had intended circumspectly to performe the whole expedition.

Slow motions of the great Spanish ships.

Admirals hot fight.

Captaine Fenners valour.

This was the most furious and bloudy skirmish of all, in which the Lord Admirall of England continued fighting amidst his enemies Fleete, and seeing one of his Captaines a farre off, he spake vnto him in these words: Oh George, what doest thou? Wilt thou now frustrate my hope and opinion conceiued of thee? Wilt thou forsake mee now? With which words hee being enflamed, approached forthwith, encountered the enemy, and did the part of a most valiant Captaine. His name was George Fenner, a man that had beene conuersant in many Sea-fights. In this conflict there was a certaine great Venetian ship with other small ships surprized and taken by the English.

A great Venetian ship and other small ships taken by the English.

The English Nauy in the meane while increased, whereunto out of all Hauens of the Realme resorted ships and men: for they all with one accord came flocking thither as vnto a set field, where immortall fame and glory was to be attained, and faithfull seruice to be performed vnto their Prince and Countrey. In which number there were many great and honorable personages, as namely, the Earle of Oxford, of Northumberland, of Cumberland, &c. with many Knights and Gentlemen: to wit, Sir Thomas Cecill, Sir Robert Cecill, Sir Walter Raleigh, Sir William Hatton, Sir Horatio Palauicini, Sir Henry Brooke, Sir Robert Carew, Sir Charles Blunt; Master Ambrose Willoughbie, Master Henry Nowell, Master Thomas Gerard, Master Henry Dudley, Master Edward Darcie, Master Arthur Gorge, Master Thomas Woodhouse, M. William Harwie, &c. And so it came to passe that the number of the English ships amounted vnto an hundreth: which when they were come before Douer, were increased to an hundred and thirty, being notwithstanding of no proportionable bignesse to encounter with the Spaniards, except two or three and twenty of the Queenes greater ships, which onely, by reason of their presence, bred an opinion in the Spaniards minds concerning the power of the English Fleet: the Marriners and Souldiers whereof were esteemed to be twelue thousand.

12000. English Mariners and Souldiers.

The 24. of Iuly

The foute and twentie of Iuly, when as the Sea was calme, and no winde stirring, the fight was onely betweene the foure great Gallasses and the English ships, which being rowed with Oares, had great vantage of the English ships, which notwithstanding for all that would not be forced to yeelde, but discharged their chaine-shot to cut asunder their Cables and Cordage of the Gallasses, with many other such Stratagems. They were now constrained to send their men on land for a new supply of Gunpowder, whereof they were in great scarcitie, by reason they had so frankly spent the greater part in the former conflicts. The same day, a Counsell being assembled, it was decreed that the English Fleete should be deuided into foure squadrons: the principall whereof was committed vnto the Lord Admirall: the second to Sir Francis Drake: the third to Captaine Hawkins: the fourth to Captaine Frobisher.

Want of Powder.

Spanish order.

The Spaniards in their sailing obserued very diligent and good order, sailing three and foure and sometimes more ships in a ranke, and following close vp one after another, and the stronger and greater ships protecting the lesser.

The 25. of Iuly

The fiue and twenty of Iuly, when the Spaniards were come ouer-against the Isle of Wight, the Lord admirall of England being accompanied with his best ships (namely the Lion, Captaine whereof was the Lord Thomas Howard: The Elizabeth Ionas vnder the command of Sir Robert Southwell, son in law vnto the Lord Admirall: the Beare vnder the Lord Sheffield, Nephew vnto the Lord Admirall: the Victorie vnder Captaine Barker: and the Galeon Leicester vnder the foresaid Captain George Fenner) with great valour and dreadfull thunder of shot, encountered the Spanish Admirall, being in the very midst of all his Fleete. Which when the Spaniards perceiued, being assisted with his stronger ships, he came forth and entered a terrible combat with the Englishe: for they bestowed each on other the broad sides, and mutually discharged all their Terrible fight.

Ordnance,

Ordnance, being within one hundred or an hundred and twenty yards one of another. At length the Spaniards hoised vp their sailes, and againe gathered themselues vp close into the forme of a roundell. In the meane while Captaine Frobisher had engaged himselfe into a most dangerous conflict. Whereupon the Lord Admirall comming to succour him, found that hee had valiantly and discreetly behaued himselfe, and that he had wisely and in good time giuen ouer the fight, because that after so great a batterie he had sustained no damage. For which cause the day following, being the sixe and twenty of Iuly, the Lord Admirall rewarded him with the order of Knighthood, together with the Lord Thomas Howard, the Lord Sheffield, Master Iohn Hawkins, and others. The 26. of Iuly

The same day the Lord Admirall receiued intelligence from New-hauen in France, by certaine of his Pinnaces, that all things were quit in France, and that there was no preparation of sending aide vnto the Spaniards, which was greatly feared from the Guisian faction, and from the Leaguers: but there was a false rumour spread all about, that the Spaniards had conquered England. Guisians feared T.e. conquest.

The seuen and twentieth of Iuly, the Spaniards about the sun-setting were come ouer-against Deuer, and rode at ancre within the sight of Caleis, intending to hold on for Dunkerk, expecting there to ioyne with the Duke of Parma his forces, without which they were able to doe little or nothing. Likewise the English Fleete following vp hard vpon them, ancred iust by them within culuering-shot. And here the Lord Henry Seymer vnited himselfe vnto the Lord Admirall with his fleet of 30. ships which rode before the mouth of Thames. The 27 of Iuly. The Spaniards ancre before Caleis.

As the Spanish Nauie therefore lay at ancre, the Duke of Medina sent certaine Messengers vnto the Duke of Parma, with whom vpon that occasion many Noblemen and Gentlemen went to refresh themselues on land: and amongst the rest the Prince of Ascoli, being accounted the Kings base son, and a very proper and towardly yong Gentleman, to his great good went on shoare, who was by so much the more fortunate, in that he had not opportunity to returne on boord the same ship, out of which he was departed, because that in returning home it was cast away vpon the Irish coast, withall the persons contained therein. The Duke of Parma being aduertised of the Spanish Fleetes arriuall vpon the coast of England, made all the haste hee could to be present himselfe in this expedition for the performance of his charge: vainely perswading himselfe that now by the meanes of Cardinall Allen, hee should be crowned King of England, and for that cause he had resigned the Gouernment of the Low-Countries vnto Count Mansfeld the elder. And hauing made his vowes vnto Saint Mary of Hall in Hennult (whom he went to visite for his blinde deuotions sake) he returned toward Bruges the eight and twenty of Iuly. The next day trauelling to Dunkerk, hee heard the thundring Ordnance of either Fleete: and the same euening being come to Dixmud, hee was giuen to vnderstand the hard successe of the Spanish Fleete. Prince of Ascoli his good fortune. The 28. of Iuly. The 29. of Iuly

Vpon tuesday, which was the 13. of Iuly, about high noone, he came to Dunkerk, when as all the Spanish Fleete was now passed by: neither durst any of his ships in the meane space come forth to assist the said Spanish Fleet for feare of fiue and thirty warlike ships of Holland and Zeland, which there kept watch and ward vnder the conduct of the Admirall Iustin of Nassau. The foresaid fiue and thirty ships were furnished with most cunning Mariners and old expert Souldiers, amongst the which were twelue hundred Musketeers, whom the States had chosen out of all their Garrisons, and whom they knew to haue beene heretofore experienced in Sea-fights. This Nauie was giuen especially in charge not to suffer any ship to come out of the Hauen, nor to permit any Zabraes, Pataches or other small vessels of the Spanish Fleete (which were more likely to aide the Dunkerkers) to enter thereinto, for the greater ships were not to be feared by reason of the shallow Sea in that place. Howbeit the Prince of Parma his forces being as yet vnready, were not come on boord his ships, onely the English Fugitiues, being seuen hundred in number, vnder the conduct of Sir William Stanley, came in fit time to haue beene embarked, because they hoped to giue the first assault against England. The residue shewed themselues vnwilling and loath to depart, because they saw but a few Marriners, who were by constraint drawne into this expedition, and also because they had very bare prouision of Bread, Drinke, and other necessary victuals. Moreouer, the ships of Holland and Zeland stood continually in their sight, threatning shot and Powder, and many inconueniences vnto them: for feare of which ships, the Mariners and Sea-men secretly withdrew themselues both day and night, least that the Duke of Parma his Souldiers should compell them by maine force to goe on boord, and to breake through the Hollanders Fleete, which all of them iudged to be impossible, by reason of the straightnesse of the Hauen. The 30. of Iuly. States Fleete. English Hispaniolized traitors

But it seemeth that the Duke of Parma and the Spaniards grounded vpon a vaine and presumptuous expectation, that all the ships of England and of the Low-Countries would at the first sight of the Spanish and Dunkerk Nauie haue betaken themselues to flight, yeelding them Sea-roome, and endeuouring onely to defend themselues, their hauens, and Sea-coasts from inuasion. Wherefore their intent and purpose was, that the Duke of Parma in his small and flat-bottomed ships, should as it were vnder the shadow and wings of the Spanish Fleete, conuey ouer all his The Spaniards vaine opinion concerning their own fleet troupes, armour, and warlike prouiſion, and with their forces ſo vnited, ſhould inuade England; or while the Engliſh Fleete were buſied in fight againſt the Spaniſh, ſhould enter vpon any part of the coaſt, which he thought to be moſt conuenient. Which inuaſion (as the Captiues afterward confeſſed) the Duke of Parma thought firſt to haue attempted by the Riuer of Thames; vpon the bankes whereof hauing at his firſt arriuall landed twenty or thirty thouſand of his principall Souldiers, he ſuppoſed that he might eaſily haue won the Citie of London; both becauſe his ſmall ſhips ſhould haue followed and aſſiſted his Land-forces, and alſo for that the Citie it ſelfe was but meanely fortified and eaſie to ouercome, by reaſon of the Citizens delicacie and diſcontinuance from the warres.

When as therefore the Spaniſh Fleete rode at anker before Caleis, to the end they might conſult with the Duke of Parma what was beſt to be done according to the Kings commandement, and the preſent eſtate of their affaires, and had now (as we will afterward declare) purpoſed vpon the ſecond of Auguſt, being Friday, with one power and conſent to haue put their intended buſineſſe in practiſe; the Lord Admirall of England being admoniſhed by her Maieſties Letters from the Court, thought it moſt expedient either to driue the Spaniſh Fleet from that place, or at leaſtwiſe to giue them the encounter: and for that cauſe (according to her Maieſties preſcription) he tooke forthwith eight of his worſt and baſeſt ſhips which came next to hand, and diſburthening them of all things which ſeemed to be of any value, filled them with Gunpowder, Pitch, Brimſtone, and with other combuſtible and fiery matter; and charging all their Ordnance with powder, bullets and ſtones, and ſent the ſaid ſhips vpon the 28. of Iuly, being Sunday, about two of the clocke after midnight, with the winde and tide againſt the Spaniſh Fleete: which when they had proceeded a good ſpace, being forſaken of the Pilots, and ſet on fire, were directly carried vpon the King of Spaines Nauie: which fire in the dead of night put the Spaniards into ſuch a perplexitie and horror (for they feared leſt they were like vnto thoſe terrible ſhips, which Frederie Ieuebelli three yeeres before, at the ſiege of Antwerpe, had furniſhed with Gunpowder, ſtones, and dreadfull engines, for the diſſolution of the Duke of Parma his Bridge, built vpon the Riuer of Scheld) that cutting their cables whereon their ankers were faſted, and hoiſing vp their ſailes they betooke themſelues very confuſedly vnto the maine Sea.

Sea-ſtratagem

The 28. of Iuly

And this ſudden confuſion, the principall and greateſt of the foure Galliaſſes falling fowle of another ſhip, loſt her rudder: for which cauſe when ſhe could not be guided any longer, ſhe was by the force of the tide caſt into a certaine ſhoald vpon the ſhoare of Caleis, where ſhe was immediately aſſaulted by diuers Engliſh Pinnaces, Hoyes, and Drumblers. And as they lay battering of her with their Ordnance, and durſt not boord her, the Lord Admirall ſent thither his long Boate with an hundreth choiſe Souldiers vnder the command of Captaine Amias Preſton. Vpon whoſe approach their fellowes being more emboldened, did offer to boord the Galliaſſe; againſt whom the Gouernor thereof and Captaine of all the foure Galliaſſes, Hugo de Moncada, ſtoutly oppoſed himſelf, fighting by ſo much the more valiantly, in that he hoped preſently to be ſuccoured by the Duke of Parma. In the meane ſeaſon, Moncada, after hee had endured the conflict a good while, being hit on the head with a Bullet, fell downe ſtarke dead, and a great number of Spaniards alſo were ſlaine in his company. The greater part of the reſidue leaping ouer-boord into the Sea, to ſaue themſelues by ſwimming, were moſt of them drowned. Howbeit there eſcaped among others Don Anthonio de Mauriques, a principall officer in the Spaniſh fleete (called by them their Veador Generall) together with a few Spaniards beſides: which Anthonio was the firſt man that carried certaine newes of the ſucceſſe of their fleete into Spaine. This huge & monſtrous Galliaſſe, wherein were contained three hundred ſlaues to lug at the Oares, and foure hundred ſouldiers, was in the ſpace of three houres rifled in the ſame place; and there was found amongſt diuers other commodities 50000. Duckets of the Spaniſh Kings treaſure. At length when the ſlaues were releaſed out of their fetters, the Engliſh men would haue ſet the ſaid ſhip on fire, which Monſieur Gourdon, the Gouernour of Caleis, for feare of the damage which might thereupon enſue to the Towne and Hauen, would not permit them to doe, but draue them from thence with his great Ordnance.

The Galliaſſe of Hugo de Moncada caſt vpon the ſhoalds before Caleis.

M. Amias Preſton valiantly boordeth the Galliaſſe.

Moncada ſlain.

50000. duckets

Gourdon

Vpon the 29. of Iuly in the morning, the Spaniſh Fleete after the foreſaid tumult, hauing arranged themſelues againe into order, were, within ſight of Greuelyng, moſt brauely and furiouſly encountered by the Engliſh; where they once againe got the winde of the Spaniards: who ſuffered themſelues to be depriued of the commodity of the place in Caleis rode, and of the aduantage of the winde neere vnto Dunkerk, rather then they would change their array, or ſeparate their forces now conioyned and vnited together, ſtanding onely vpon their defence. And albeit there were many excellent and warlike ſhips in the Engliſh fleet, yet ſcarſe were there 22. or 23. among them all which matched 90. of the Spaniſh ſhips in bigneſſe, or could conueniently aſſault them. Wherefore the Engliſh ſhips vſing their prerogatiue of nimble ſtirrage, whereby they could turne and wield themſelues with the winde which way they liſted, came oftentimes very neere vpon the Spaniards, and charged them ſo ſore, that now and then they were but a Pikes length at ſunder: and ſo continually giuing them one broad ſide after another, they diſpatched all their ſhot both great and ſmall vpon them, ſpending one whole day from morning till night in that violent kind

The great fight before Greuelyng the 29. of Iuly.

Engliſh ſhips aduantage.

Digitized by Google

kinde of conflict, vntill such time as powder and bullets failed them. In regard of which want they thought it conuenient not to pursue the Spaniards any longer, because they had many great vantages of the English, namely for the extraordinary bigneſſe of their ſhips, and alſo for that they were ſo neerely conioyned, and kept together in ſo good array, that they could by no meanes be fought withall one to one. The English thought therefore, that they had right well acquitted themſelues, in chaſing the Spaniards firſt from Calais, and then from Dunkerk, and by that means to haue hindered them from ioyning with the Duke of Parma his forces, and getting the winde of them, to haue driuen them from their owne coaſts.

The Spaniards that day ſuſtained great loſſe and damage, hauing many of their ſhips ſhot thorow and thorow, and they diſcharged likewiſe great ſtore of Ordnance againſt the Engliſh; who indeede ſuſtained ſome hinderance, but not comparable to the Spaniards loſſe; for they loſt not any one ſhip or perſon of account. For very diligent inquiſition being made, the Engliſhmen all that time wherein the Spaniſh Nauie ſailed vpon their Seas, are not found to haue wanted aboue one hundreth of their people: albeit Sir F. Drakes ſhip was pierced with ſhot aboue forty times, and his very cabben was twiſe ſhot thorow, and about the concluſion of the fight, the bed of a certaine Gentleman lying weary thereupon, was taken quite from vnder him with the force of a Bullet. Likewiſe, as the Earle of Northumberland and Sir Charles Blunt were at dinner vpon a time, the Bullet of a Demi-culuering brake thorow the middeſt of their Cabbin, touched their feete, and ſtrooke downe two of the ſtanders by, with many ſuch accidents befalling the Engliſh ſhips, which it were tedious to rehearſe. Whereupon it is moſt apparant, that God miraculouſly preſerued the Engliſh Nation. For the Lord Admirall wrote vnto her Maieſty, that in all humaine reaſon, and according to the iudgement of all men (euery circumſtance being duely conſidered) the Engliſhmen were not of any ſuch force, whereby they might, without a miracle, dare once to approach within the ſight of the Spaniſh Fleete: inſomuch, that they freely aſcribed all the honour of their victory vnto God, who had confounded the enemy, and had brought his counſels to none effect.

Gods prouident mercies to the Engliſh.

The ſame day the Spaniſh ſhips were ſo battered with Engliſh ſhot, that that very night and the day following, two or three of them ſunke right downe: and among the reſt a certain great ſhip of Biſcay, which Captaine Croſſe aſſaulted, which periſhed euen in the time of the conflict, ſo that very few therein eſcaped drowning; who reported that the Gouernors of the ſame ſhip ſlew one another vpon the occaſion following: one of them which would haue yeelded the ſhip was ſuddenly ſlaine; the brother of the ſlaine party in reuenge of his death ſlew the murtherer, and in the meane while the ſhip ſunke.

Three Spaniſh ſhips ſunke in the fight.

The ſame night two Portugall galeons of the burthen of ſeuen or eight hundreth tuns a peece; to wit, Saint Philip and Saint Matthew, were forſaken of the Spaniſh Fleete, for they were ſo torne with ſhot, that the water entered into them on all ſides. In the Galeon of Saint Philip was Francis de Toledo, brother vnto the Count de Argas, being Colonell ouer two and thirty bands; beſides other Gentlemen; who ſeeing their maſt broken with ſhot, they ſhaped their courſe, aſwell as they could, for the coaſt of Flanders: whither when they could not attaine, the principall men in the ſhip committed themſelues to their skiffe, arriued at the next towne, which was Oſtend; and the ſhip it ſelfe being left behinde with the reſidue of their company, was taken by the Vliſhingers. In the other Galeon, called the Saint Matthew, was embarked Don Diego Pimentelli another Camp-maſter and Colonell of two and thirty bands, being brother vnto the Marqueſſe of Tamnares, with many other Gentlemen and Captaines. Their ſhip was not very great, but exceeding ſtrong, for of a great number of Bullets which had batterd her, there were ſcarce twenty where with ſhe was pierced or hurt: her vpper worke was of force ſufficient to beare off a Musket ſhot: this ſhip was ſhot thorow and pierced in the fight before Gruueling: inſomuch that the leakage of the water could not be ſtopped: whereupon the Duke of Medina ſent his great skiffe vnto the Gouernour thereof, that he might ſaue himſelfe and the principall perſons that were in his ſhip: which he, vpon a hault courage, refuſed to doe; wherefore the Duke charged him to ſaile next vnto himſelfe: which the night following hee could not performe, by reaſon of the abundance of water which entered his ſhip on all ſides; for the auoiding whereof, and to ſaue his ſhip from ſinking, he cauſed fifty men continually to labour at the Pump, though it were to ſmall purpoſe. And ſeeing himſelfe thus forſaken and ſeparated from his Admirall, he endeuored what he could to attaine vnto the coaſt of Flanders; where being eſpied by foure or fiue men of war, which had their ſtation aſſigned them vpon the ſame coaſt: he was admoniſhed to yeelde himſelfe vnto them; which he refuſed to doe, was ſtrongly aſſaulted by them altogether, & his ſhip being pierced with many bullets, was brought into far worſe caſe then before, & forty of his ſouldiers were ſlain. By which extremity he was enforced at length to yeelde himſelfe vnto Peter Banderdueſt and other Captaine, which brought him and his ſhip into Zeland; and that other ſhip alſo laſt before mentioned: which both of them, immediatly after the greater and better part of their goods were vnladen, ſunke right downe. For the memory of this exploit, the foreſaid Captain Banderdueſt cauſed a Banner of one of theſe ſhips to be ſet vp in the great Church of Leiden in Holland, which is of ſo great a length, that being faſted to the very roofe, it reached downe to the ground.

Two Galeons taken and carried into Zeland

A ſmall ſhip caſt away about Blankenberg.

About the ſame time another ſmall ſhip being by neceſſity driuen vpon the coaſt of Flanders, about Blankenberg, was caſt away vpon the ſands, the people therein being ſaued. Thus Almighty God would haue the Spaniards huge ſhips to be preſented, not onely to the view of the Engliſh, but alſo of the Zelanders; that at the ſight of them they might acknowledge of what ſmall ability they had beene to reſiſt ſuch impregnable forces, had not God endued them with courage, prouidence, and fortitude, yea, and fought for them in many places with his owne arme.

The diſhonorable flight of the Spaniſh nauy: & the prudent aduice of the L. Admiral.

The 29. of Iuly the Spaniſh fleete being encountered by the Engliſh (as is aforeſaid) and lying cloſe together vnder their fighting ſailes, with a South-weſt winde ſailed paſt Dunkerk, the Engliſh ſhips ſtill following the chaſe. Of whom the day following, when the Spaniards had got Sea roome, they cut their maine ſailes; whereby they ſufficiently declared that they meant no longer to fight, but to flie. For which cauſe the Lord Admirall of England diſpatched the Lord Henry Seymer with his ſquadron of ſmall ſhips vnto the coaſt of Flanders, where, with the helpe of the Dutch ſhips, he might ſtop the Prince of Parma his paſſage, if perhaps he ſhould attempt to iſſue forth with his army. And he himſelfe in the meane ſpace purſued the Spaniſh fleet vntill the ſecond of Auguſt, becauſe he thought they had ſet ſaile for Scotland. And albeit he followed them very neere, yet did he not aſſault them any more, for want of Powder and Bullets. But vpon the fourth of Auguſt, the winde ariſing, when as the Spaniards had ſpread all their ſailes, betaking themſelues wholly to flight, & leauing Scotland on the left hand, trended toward Norway (whereby they ſufficiently declared that their whole intent was to ſaue themſelues by flight, attempting for that purpoſe, with their battered and crazed ſhips, the moſt dangerous nauigation of the Northren Seas) the Engliſh ſeeing that they were now proceeded vnto the latitude of 57. degrees, and being vnwilling to participate that danger whereinto the Spaniards plunged themſelues, and becauſe they wanted things neceſſary, and eſpecially Powder and Shot, returned backe for England; leauing behinde them certaine Pinaſſes onely, which they enioyned to follow the Spaniards aloofe, and to obſerue their courſe. And ſo it came to paſſe, that the fourth of Auguſt, with great danger and induſtry, the Engliſh arriued at Harwich; for they had beene toſſed vp and downe with a mighty tempeſt for the ſpace of two or three dayes together, which it is likely did great hurt vnto the Spaniſh fleet, being (as I ſaid before) ſo maimed and battered. The Engliſh now going on ſhoare, prouided themſelues forthwith of Victuals, Gunpowder, and other things expedient, that they might be ready at all aſſayes to entertaine the Spaniſh fleete, if it chanced any more to returne. But being afterward more certainely informed of the Spaniards courſe, they thought it beſt to leaue them vnto thoſe boiſterous and vncouth Northren Seas, and not there to hunt after them.

Our want of Powder & Bullets proclaime the fulneſſe of Gods preſent power & merciful both deliuerance and victory.

The Engliſh return home vpon the purſuit of the Spaniards the 4. of Aug.

The Spaniards conſult to ſaile round about Scotland & Ireland, and ſo to returne home.

The Spaniards ſeeing now that they wanted foure or fiue thouſand of their people, and hauing diuers maimed and ſicke perſons, and likewiſe hauing loſt ten or twelue of their principall ſhips, they conſulted among themſelues, what they were beſt to doe, being now eſcaped out of the hands of the Engliſh, becauſe their victuals failed them in like ſort, & they began alſo to want cables, cordage, ankers, maſts, ſailes, and other naual furniture, and vtterly deſpaired of the Duke of Parma his aſſiſtance (who verily hoping & vndoubtedly expecting the return of the Spaniſh fleet, was continually occupied about his great preparation, commanding abundance of ankers to be made, and other neceſſary furniture for a Nauy to be prouided) they thought it good at length, ſo ſoone as the winde ſhould ſerue them, to fetch a compaſſe about Scotland and Ireland, and ſo to returne for Spaine.

Horſes caſt ouer-boord.

For they well vnderſtood, that commandement was giuen thorowout all Scotland, that they ſhould not haue any ſuccour or aſſiſtance there. Neither yet could they in Norway ſupply their wants. Wherefore, hauing taken certaine Scottiſh and other fiſherboats, they brought the men on boord their owne ſhips, to the end they might be their guides and Pilots. Fearing alſo leaſt their freſh water ſhould faile them, they caſt all their horſes and mules ouer-boord: and ſo touching no where vpon the coaſt of Scotland, but being carried with a freſh gale betweene the Orcades and Faar-Iſles, they proceeded farre North euen vnto 61. degrees of latitude, being diſtant from any land at the leaſt 40. leagues. Here the Duke of Medina, Generall of the Fleet, commanded all his followers to ſhape their courſe for Biſcay: and he himſelfe with twenty or fiue and twenty of his ſhips which were beſt prouided of freſh water and other neceſſaries, holding on his courſe ouer the maine Ocean, returned ſafely home. The reſidue of his ſhips being about forty in number, and committed vnto his Vice-admirall, fell neerer with the coaſt of Ireland, intending their courſe for Cape Clare, becauſe they hoped there to get freſh water, and to refreſh themſelues on land. But after they were driuen with many contrary windes, at length, vpon the ſecond of September, they were caſt by a tempeſt ariſing from the South-weſt vpon diuers parts of Ireland, where many of their ſhips periſhed: And amongſt others, the ſhip of Michael de Oquendo, which was one of the great Galliaſſes: and two great ſhips of Venice alſo, namely, la Ratta and Belanzara, with other 36 or 31. ſhips more, which periſhed in ſundry tempeſts, together with moſt of the perſons contained in them.

The ſhipwrack of the Spaniards vpon the Iriſh coaſt.

Likewiſe ſome of the Spaniſh ſhips were the ſecond time carried with a ſtrong Weſt wind into the channell of England, whereof ſome were taken by the Engliſh vpon their coaſt, and others by the men of Rochel vpon the coaſt of France.

More-

Moreouer, there arriued at Newhauen in Normandy, being by tempest inforced so to doe, one of the foure great Galliasses, whereby they found the ships with the Spanish women which followed the Fleet at their setting forth. Two ships also were cast away vpon the coast of Normandy, one of them being of a great burthen; howbeit all the persons in the said great ship were saued: insomuch that of 134. ships, which set saile out of Portugall, there returned home 53. onely, small and great: namely of the foure Galliasses but one, and but one of the foure Gallies. Of the 91. great Galleons and Hulkes there were missing 58. and 33. returned: of the Pataches and Zabraes 17. were missing, and 18. returned home. In briefe, there were missing 81. ships, in which number were Galliasses, Gallies, Galeons, and other vessels both great and small. And amongst these 53. ships remaining, those also are reckoned which returned home before they came into the English chanell. Two Galeons of those which were returned, were by misfortune burnt as they rode in the hauen; and such like mishaps did many other vndergoe. Of 30000. persons which went in this expedition, there perished (according to the number and proportion of the ships) the greater and better part; and many of them which came home, by reason of the toile & inconueniences which they sustained in this voiage, died not long after their arriuall. The Duke of Medina immediately vpon his returne was deposed from his authority, commanded to his priuate house, and forbidden to repaire vnto the Court, where he could hardly satisfie or yeeld a reason vnto his malicious enemies and backbiters. Many honorable personages and men of great renown deceased soone after their returne, as namely Iohn Martines de Ricalde, with diuers others. A great part also of the Spanish Nobility and Gentry employed in this expedition perished either by fight, diseases, or drowning, before their arriuall; and among the rest Thomas Perenot of Grandwell a Dutchman, being Earle of Cantebroi, and son vnto Cardinall Grandwell his brother.

Of 134. ships of the Spanish fleet there returned home but 53.

D. of Medina.

Ricaldes death.

Vpon the coast of Zeland Don Diego de Pimentell, brother vnto the Marquesse de Tauuares, and kinsman vnto the Earle of Benauentum & Calua, and Colonell ouer 32. bands with many other in the same ship was taken and detained as prisoner in Zeland.

Into England (as we said before) Don Pedro de Valdez, a man of singular experience, and greatly honoured in his country, was led captiue, being accompanied with Don Vasques de Silua, Don Alonzo de Sayas, and others.

Likewise vpon the Scottish Westerne Iles of Lewis, and Ila, and about Cape Cantyre vpon the maine land, there were cast away certaine Spanish ships, out of which were saued diuers Captaines and Gentlemen, and almost foure hundred souldiers, who for the most part, after their shipwracke, were brought vnto Edenborough in Scotland; and being miserably needy and naked, were there cloathed at the liberalitie of the King and the Merchants, and afterward were secretly shipped for Spaine; but the Scottish Fleete wherein they passed touching at Yarmouth on the coast of Norfolke, were there staied for a time vntill the Counsels pleasure was knowne; who in regard of their manifold miseries, though they were enemies, winked at their passage.

Spaniards pitied.

Vpon the Irish coast many of their Noblemen and Gentlemen were drowned, and diuers slain by the barbarous and wilde Irish. Howbeit there was brought prisoner out of Ireland, Don Alonzo de Lucon, Colonel of two and thirty bands, commonly called a Tercia of Naples; together with Rodarigo de Lasso, and two others of the family of Cordoua, who were committed vnto the custody of Sir Horatio Palauicini, that Monsieur de Teligny the son of Monsieur de la Noue (who being taken in fight neere Antwerpe, was detained prisoner in the Castle of Turney) might be ransomed for them by way of exchange. To conclude, there was no famous nor worthy family in all Spain, which in this expedition lost not a son, a brother, or a kinsman.

Spaines generall losse.

For the perpetuall memory of this matter, the Zelanders caused new coine of Siluer and Brasse to be stamped: which on the one side contained the armes of Zeland, with this inscription; GLORY TO GOD ONELY: and on the other side, the pictures of certaine great ships, with these words; THE SPANISH FLEET: and in the circumference about the ships, IT CAME, WENT, AND WAS. Anno 1588. That is to say, the Spanish fleet came, went and was vanquished this yeere; for which glory be giuen to God onely. Likewise they coined another kinde of mony; vpon the one side whereof was represented a ship fleeing, and a ship sinking: on the other side, foure men making prayers and giuing thankes vnto God vpon their knees; with this sentence: Man purposeth, God disposeth. 1588. Also, for the lasting memory of the same matter, they haue stamped in Holland diuers such coines, according to the custome of the ancient Romans. Also other coines were stamped with a Fleet flying with full saile, and inscribed; Venit, Vidit, Fugit: It came, saw, fled: others with the fired ships, and the fleet in confusion, the word DVX FOEMINA FACTI.

New coines stamped for the memory of the Spaniards ouerthrow.

While this wonderfull and puissant Nauie was sailing along the English coasts, and all men did now plainly see and heare that which before they would not be perswaded of, all people throughout England prostrated themselues with humble prayers and supplications vnto God: but especially the outlandish Churches (who had greatest cause to feare, and against whom by name, the Spaniards had threatned most grieuous torments) enioyned to their people continuall fastings and supplications, that they might turne away Gods wrath and fury now imminent vpon

The people of England and of the vnited prouinces, pray, fast, and giue thankes vnto God.

Digitized by Google

vpon them for their sins; knowing right well, that prayer was the onely refuge against all enemies, calamities, and necessities, and that it was the onely solace and reliefe for mankinde, being visited with affliction and misery. Likewise such solemne daies of supplication were obserued throughout the vnited Prouinces.

Also a while after the Spanish Fleet was departed, there was in England, by the commandement of her Maiesty, and in the vnited Prouinces, by the direction of the States, a solemne festiuall day publikely appointed, wherein all persons were enioyned to resort vnto the Church, and there to render thankes and praises vnto God: and the Preachers were commanded to exhort the people thereunto. The foresaid solemnity was obserued vpon the 19. of Nouember: which day was wholly spent in Preaching, praying, giuing thankes, with the accustomed solemnities of Bonfires, Singing, Ringing, and other wonted expressions of publike ioy.

Likewise, the Queenes Maiesty her selfe, imitating the ancient Romans, rode into London in triumph, in regard of her owne and her subiects glorious deliuerance. For being attended vpon very solemnly by all the principall estates and officers of her Realme, she was carried thorow her said Citie of London in a triumphant chariot, and in robes of triumph; from her Palace vnto the Cathedrall Church of Saint Paul, out of the which the ensignes and colours of the vanquished Spaniards hung displaied. And all the Citizens of London in their Liueries stood on either side the street, by their seuerall Companies, with their Ensignes and Banners: and the streets were hanged on both sides with Blew cloath, which, together with the foresaid Banners, yeelded a very stately and gallant prospect. Her Maiesty being entered into the Church, together with her Clergy and Nobles gaue thankes vnto God, and caused a publike Sermon to be preached before her at Pauls Crosse; wherein none other argument was handled, but that praise, honour, and glory might be rendered vnto God, and that Gods name might be extolled by thanksgiuing. And with her own Princely voyce she most Christianly exhorted the people to doe the same: whereupon the people with a loud acclamation wished her a most long and happy life, to the confusion of her foes. The Lord Admirall had a pension assigned for his good seruice.

This publike ioy was increased by Sir Robert Sidney (now Earle of Leicester) who returning out of Scotland, related to her Maiestie the King of Scots faithfull friendship, and loue to her, and to the Religion. He had beene employed to the said King, whiles the Spanish Fleet hoouered on the coast, to gratulate with him in the Queenes name, for his alacrity in the common cause, and to obtaine his promise of aide, if the Spaniards landed in Scotland; and to put him in minde how ambitiously the Spaniard sought to swallow in all Britaine, vrging the Pope to Excommunicate him, so to strip him of Scotland, and quit his succession in England; to admonish him of the threats of Mendoza and the Popes Nuntio, that therefore he should be very wary of the Papists in Scotland. He answered conceitedly, amongst other speeches, that he hoped for no other benefit from the Spaniard, then that which Polyphemus had promised Vlysses, namely, that when the rest were deuoured, he should be swallowed last.

The Kings wise speech.

Thus the magnificent, huge, and mighty fleet of the Spaniards (which themselues tearmed in all places inuincible) such as sailed not vpon the Ocean Sea many hundreth yeeres before, in the yeere 1588. vanished into smoake; to the great confusion and discouragement of the authours thereof. In regard of which her Maiesties happy successe all her neighbours and friends congratulated with her, and many Verses were penned to the honour of her Maiesty by learned men, whereof we will here annexe those of Master Beza.

Epinitian or triumphall verses.

Ad serenissimam Elizabetham Angliæ Reginam Theodor. Beza.

STraverat innumeris Hispanus nauibus æquor,
Regnis iuncturus sceptra Britanna suis.
Tanta hæsus, rogitas, qua motus causa? superbos
Impulit Ambitio, vexit Auaritia.
Quàm bene te ambitio mersit vanissima ventus?
Et tumidos tumida, vos superastis aqua!
Quàm bene totius raptores orbis auaros,
Hausit inexhausti insta vorago maris!
At tu, cui venti, cui totum militat æquor,
Regina, ô mundi totius vna, decus,
Sic regnare Deo perge, ambitione remota,
Prodiga sic opibus perge iuuare pios,
Vt te Angli, longùm Anglis ipsa fruaris,
Quàm dilecta bonis, tam metuenda malis.

The same in English.

THe Spanish Fleet did flote in narrow Seas,
And bêd her ships against the English shore,
With so great rage as nothing could appease,
And with such strength as neuer seene before:
And all to ioyne the Kingdome of that land
Vnto the Kingdomes that he had in hand.
Now if you aske what set this King on fire.
To practise warre when he of peace did treat.
It was his Pride, and neuer quencht desire,
To spoile that Ilãds wealth, by peace made great:
His Pride which far aboue the heauens did swel
And his desire as vnsuffic'd as hell.
But well haue winds his proud blasts ouerblown
And swelling waues alaid his swelling heart,
Well hath the Sea with greedy gulfs vnknown,
Deuoured the deuourer to his smart:
And made his ships a pray vnto the sand,
That meant to pray vpon anothers land.
And now, O Queene, aboue all others blest,
For whom both winds & waues are prest to fight
So rule your owne, so succour friends oppresst,
(As farre from pride, as ready to doe right)
That England you, you England long enioy,
No lesse your friends delight, then foes annoy.

Digitized by Google

I haue thought good to adde here the prime reports made by the Spaniards and their friends, touching the ſucceſſe of their Armada, as they were printed in Spaine, and after publiſhed and ſcorned in England.

The true Relation of the ſucceſſe of the Catholike Armie againſt their Enemies, by the Letters of the Poſt-maſter of Logrono of the fourth of September, and by Letters from Roan of the one and thirtieth of Auguſt, and by Letters from Paris of the Kings Embaſſadour there: wherein he declareth the impriſonment of Francis Drake, and other great Nobles of England, and how the Queene is in the Field with an Armie, and of a certaine Mutinie which was amongſt the Queenes Armie, with the ſucceſſe of the ſaid Catholike Armie ſince they entred in the Groyne, till they came on the Coaſt of England, with two Ballers * compounded by Chriſtouer Brauo, a blind man of Cordowa, Printed with licence by Gabriel Ramos Beiarano Printer.

* Like lips like lettuce. A blind Ballidmaker fit Homer for Achillian conqueſts.

THe newes of England is confirmed here, by a Letter of the Gouernour of Roan. Hee writeth hee hath in his power the chiefe Pilot of Captaine Drake, and that he knoweth that all the Engliſh Armie remained ouerthrowne, hauing ſunke two and twentie Ships, and taken fortie, and impriſoned Francis Drake, hauing giuen them chaſe almoſt as high as Abſpurge, and ſlaine many by the ſword, and likewiſe ſaith that there was found in Captaine Drakes Ship, a Peece of Ordnance of fiue and twentie foot long, which diſcharged a Shot of a hundreth weight at once made of purpoſe, with one onely Shot to ſinke our Spaniſh Admirall, and it pleaſed God, although ſhee was ſomewhat battered, yet was ſhee repaired againe, and ouerthrew the Engliſh Armie.

By a Letter of Diego Peres, chiefe Poſtmaſter of Logrono dated the ſecond of September, 1588.

THe Engliſh haue loſt aboue fortie Ships in one encounter where they could not flye, which was in Luxaten a Hauen in Scotland, to the which place, ſince the departure of the Spaniſh Armies from Calleis, the Engliſh Armie followed, and ſuppoſing they went to take that Hauen, they got before ours to defend the entrance: wee ſeeing them ſo neere the Engliſh Fleet, and that they could not retire, as they alwaies did when they pleaſed to the Engliſh Hauen, they ſet vpon them ſo valiantly that they ſunke twentie of their Ships, and they tooke twentie ſix whole and ſound, and the reſt ſeeing their deſtruction fled away with great loſſe of men, and their Ships very much battered, and with this (they ſay) the Spaniſh Armie tooke the Hauen where they are very well lodged, as euery one affirmeth, and ſo the newes is here: I pray God giue them good ſucceſſe: Wee vnderſtand by the Poſt come from Calleis, that in England it is forbidden vpon paine of death and loſſe of goods, that no bodie doe write newes from thence to any place: which confirmeth the newes aboue.

Copie of a letter that Iohn Gamarra wrote from Roan the 31. of Auguſt of the ſame yeere

I Doe not write newes of the Spaniſh Armie, becauſe they are diuers, and would gladly write the very truth. Now by the newes which runneth from diuers places, as Calleis, Deepe, and Holland, and preſumptions from England and other places, it is holden for certaine that they fought with the Engliſh, and broken their heads, hauing ſunke many of their Ships and taken others, and the reſt which they ſay were twentie ſeuen Ships, returned very much battered to the Riuer of London, which are all thoſe that could eſcape: There goeth with this Poſt another Poſt of Iorge Seguin of Calleis, which ſaith that certaine Maſters and Marriners of Zeland, did affirme to the Gouernours of Calleis, Mounſier de Gorden, that our Fleet is in a Hauen or Riuer in Scotland, called Triſta, where they ſay there may ride two thouſand Ships: this is that which commonly is currant here.

Copie of a Letter that Pedro de Alua did write from Roan the firſt of September of the ſame yeere.

BY newes from London the thirtie ſix of Auguſt, it is knowne for moſt certaine from perſons of credite, that the Queens Admiral Generall was arriued in the Riuer of London, with twentie fiue ſhips onely without his Admirall Ship, which was taken by our Admirall Saint Iohn, and it is well knowne in England, that to hide the loſſe of their Admirall Ship, they ſay hee put himſelfe in a ſmaller Ship the better to follow our Armie: and it is knowne for certaintie that he ſaued himſelfe in a Boat when he loſt his Ship. That Drake for certaintie is taken or ſlaine. The ſame is confirmed by the way of Holland, by a Pinnace of theirs. And from Auſterland, that the Queene commanded vpon paine of death, that no body ſhould ſpeake of her Fleet, and that there was great ſorrow in thoſe parts of England, and that the Queene had in the field thirtie thouſand raw Souldiers, betwixt Douer and Margate, and that the Catholikes vnderſtanding that all their Fleet was diſperſed, moued a certaine Mutinie, which forced the Queene to goe her ſelfe into the Field, and for certaine it is knowne that there is not brought into England, neither Ship nor Boat of ours, more then the Ship of Don Pedro Valdez, and that our Fleet was gone into Scotland, and arriued in a Hauen called Trapena Euxaten.

Aduiſe from London, which the Embaſſador of our Soueraigne Lord the King reſident in Paris had from thence.

AFter that I had written this, here is arriued a Scottiſhman, which ſaith that all the Spaniſh Fleet is arriued in Scotland, and that Scottiſhmen haue taken Armes againſt the Engliſh.

By a Letter of the chiefe Poſt maſter of Burdeux, written to the French Embaſſadour, the 2. of Sept. 1588.

That

Digitized by Google

Relation of that which hath passed till this day, the fifth of Sept. 1588. till three of the clock in the afternoon, knowne by the relations and aduice come to his Maiestie from the happy Fleet, whereof is Generall the Duke of Medina, in the conquest of England.

THat vpon the thirtieth of Iuly, without seeing any sayle of the Enemies in the Sea, hee came to the Channell, sixe leagues from Plimouth: where understanding the Enemies were, hee gathered together and set in order all the Fleet: and sayling the first of August, there was discouered some Sayles of the Enemies; the which the second day were numbred to bee threescore Sayle, of which the Duke tooke the wind, and passed without any fight, although he presented the same to them, howbeit they began to shoot at the Rearward: but the Duke in the Galleon S. Martin, set the Prow of his Ship against the biggest of the Enemies, the which being succoured by twentie others, fled away: of this fight and first encounter, there was sunke three Galeasses, and foure mightie Galeons of the Queenes: there was burnt also one by negligence of a Gunner, the Admirall of Oquendo, and the Enemies tooke the chiefe Ship of Don Pedro de Valdez, which being entangled with others vnder his charge: was left without Tackle, and so neere the Enemies, that shee could not be succoured by others.

With this, our Fleet seeing that the Enemy in euery point did flye from giuing battell, they sailed with some calme weather, and the Enemies after them, shooting alwayes at the Rearward, vntill the seuenth, that our Fleet ancored in the Road of S. Iohn, betwixt Calleis and Bollin, nine leagues from Dunkerk, and the Enemies did the like, the neerest they could to England.

The night being approached, the Enemies got vp their Ankers to get wind, and not to suffer our Ships to goe out of the Road to Sea, because they had trimmed eight Ships of fire, which with the current of the water, should haue put themselues amongst our Ships to haue burnt them. But my Lord the Duke, foreseeing the danger preuented them, with commandement that the Ships that were neerest should cut their Cables, and take vp the others with a readinesse vncredible: and with this the Enemies pretence was hindered, and so got the Sea most brauely and with good fortune, that if hee had not done it our Army should haue beene in an euill case, for in the very place where we left, there was shot off by them out of those fiery Ships, such Fires and other Engines, that were sufficient to burne the Sea, much more Ships which are made of Wood and Pitch.

In this departure, the Captaine of the Galeasses had a great mischance: for getting vp her Anker, a Cable fell foule of her Helme, that shee could not follow the rest, which caused one of her sides to lie so high that her Ordnance could not play, and so twentie fiue Pinnaces came and battered her, and with all this, if the Mariners, Souldiers and Rowers that were in her, had not cast themselues into the Sea, it is holden for certaine, that Don Hugo de Moncada had defended her, as he did vntill she came into Calleis, where at the entrance thereof, he was killed of two Culuer shot, the people on shoare defended the Galeasse, and all that was in her, and deliuered the same to our Soueraigne Lord the Kings Ministers.

At this time the Duke had a very franke wind, and the like had the Queenes Fleet: and so they both passed by the sight of Dunkerke, insomuch as they on Land knew the Galleon S. Martin, and others that went fighting with the English Army, and in this order they went till the twelfth.

Afterwards they write, that their came into Calleis a Ship, which saith, that the twelfth day they did see the two Fleets together in fight: another which came afterwards, said he had seene some Ships spoyled and torne, and from them they threw out their baggage which they saued in Boats, which argueth they were Ships of the Enemies, for that our men had no place to saue themselues, nor there were none of them arriued into Flanders, which was their place of returne.

OVt of England was aduise giuen, that on the thirteenth arriued fifteene of the Queenes Ships, and they said that the Galleon S. Martin, wherin my Lord the Duke is (whom God preserue) had encountred with Drake, and had grappled his Ship, and captiued his Person, and other Noble Englishmen, and taken other fifteene Ships, beside others that were distressed, and the Duke with his Fleet followed his way to Scotland, because the wind was not come about.

With these newes his Maiesty resteth very much contented, and caused them to be sent to the Empresse, by the hands of Francisco Ydiaquez, his Secretary of Estate.

Imprinted in Seuill, in the House of Cosme de Lara, Printer of Bookes, by licence of the Counte of Orgaz, Assistant in Seuill.

CHAP. XII.

A Discourse of the Portugall Voyage, A. 1589. Sir IOHN NORRIS and Sir FRANCIS DRAKE Generalls, written (as is thought) by Colonell ANTONIE WINGFIELD, imployed in the same Voyage, formerly published by his friend to whom it was written; and here abbreuiated.

HAuing determinately purposed to put on this habite of a Souldier, I grew doubtfull whether to employ my time in the warres of the Low-countries, which are in auxiliarie manner maintained by her Maiestie, or to follow the fortune of this voyage, which was an aduenture of her and many honourable personages, in reuenge of vnsupportable wrongs offered vnto the estate of our Countrey by the Castilian

Digitized by Google

Castilian King: in arguing whereof, I finde that by how much the Challenger is reputed before the Defendant, by so much is the iourney to bee preferred before those defensiue Warres. For had the Duke of Parma his turne beene to defend, as it was his good fortune to inuade: from whence could haue proceeded that glorious honour which these late warres haue laid vpon him, or what could haue beene said more of him, then of a Respondent (though neuer so valiant) in a priuate Duell? Euen that he hath done no more then by his honour he was tied vnto. For the gaine of one Towne, or any small defeat giueth more renowme to the Assailant, then the defence of a Countrey, or the withstanding of twentie encounters, can yeeld any man who is bound by his place to guard the same: whereof as well the particulars of our age, especially in the Spaniard, as the reports of former Histories may assure vs, which haue still layed the fame of all warres vpon the Inuader. And doe not ours in these dayes liue obscured in Flanders, either not hauing wherewithall to manage any warre, or not putting on Armes, but to defend themselues when the enemy shall procure them? Whereas in this short time of our Aduenture, we haue won a Towne by Escalade, battered and assaulted another, ouerthrowne a mightie Princes power in the Field, landed our Army in three seuerall places of his Kingdome, marched seuen dayes in the heart of his Country, lyen three nights in the Suburbs of his principall Citie, beaten his forces into the Gates thereof, and possessed two of his frontier Forts, as shall in discourse thereof more particularly appeare. But our Army, which hath not cost her Maiestie much aboue the third part of one yeeres expences in the Low-countries, hath already spoyled a great part of the prouision hee had made at the Groine of all sorts, for a new voyage into England; burnt three of his Ships, whereof one was the second in the last yeeres expedition, called S. Iuan de Colorado; taken from him aboue 150. Peeces of good artillery; cut off more then 60. Hulkes, and 20. French Ships well manned fit and ready to serue him for men of warre against vs, laden for his store with Corne, Victualls, Masts, Cables and other merchandizes; slaine and taken the principall men of Warre hee had in Galicia; made Don Pedro Enriquez de Guzman, Conde de Fuentes, Generall of his forces in Portugall, shamefully run at Peniche; laid along of his best Commander in Lisbon; wherefore I directly conclude that this proceeding is the most safe and necessary way to be held against him, and therefore more importing then the warre in the Low-countries. I doubt not but this voyage hath sufficiently made knowne what they are euen vpon their owne dunghill; which, had it bin set out in such sort as it was agreed vpon by their first demand, it might haue made our Nation the most glorious people of the world. For hath not the want of eight of the twelue Peeces of Artillery, which were promised vnto the Aduenture, lost her Maiesty the possession of the Groine and many other places, as hereafter shall appeare, whose defensible rampiers were greater then our battery (such as it was) could force: and therefore were left vnattempted? It was also resolued to haue sent 600. English Horses of the Low-countries, whereof wee had not one, notwithstanding the great charges expended in their transportation hither: and that may the Army assembled at Puente de Burgos thanke God of, as well as the forces of Portugall, who fore-ran vs six dayes together: Did we not want seuen of the thirteen old Companies, which we should haue had from thence; foure of the ten Dutch Companies; and six of their men of Warre for the Sea, from the Hollanders: which I may iustly say wee wanted, in that we might haue had so many good Souldiers, so many good ships, and so many able bodies more then wee had? Did there not vpon the first thinking of the iourney, diuers gallant Courtiers put in their names for Aduenturers to the sum of 10000. li. who seeing it went forward in good earnest, aduised themselues better, and laid the want of so much money vpon the iourney? Was there not moreouer a round summe of the aduenture spent in leuying, furnishing, and maintaining three moneths one thousand fiue hundred men for the seruice of Bergben, with which Companies the Mutinies of Ostend were suppressed, a seruice of no small moment?

A briefe rehearsall of the English explours in this voyage.

What misery the detracting of the time of our setting out, which should haue beene the first of February, did lay vpon vs, too many can witnesse: and what extremitie the want of that months victualls which wee did eat, during the moneth wee lay at Plimouth for wind, might haue driuen vs vnto, no man can doubt of, that knoweth what men doe liue by, had not God giuen vs in the end a more prosperous wind and shorter passage into Galitia then hath been often seene, where our owne force and fortune reuictualled vs largely: of which crosse winds, that held vs two dayes after our going out, the Generalls being weary, thrust to Sea in the same, wisely chusing rather to attend the change thereof there, then by being in Harbour to lose any part of the better, when it should come by hauing their men on shoare: in which two dayes twentie fiue of our Companies shipped in part of the Fleet were scattered from vs, either not being able or willing to double Vshant.

These burdens layed vpon our Generalls before their going out, they haue patiently endured, and I thinke they haue thereby much enlarged their honour: for hauing done thus much with the want of our Artillery, 600. Horse, 3000. Foot, 10000. li. of their aduenture, and one moneths victualls of their proportion, what may be coniectured they would haue done with their full complement? For our instruction against them, who had almost seduced you from the true opinion you hold of such men, you shall vnderstand that Generall Norris from his booke was trained vp Generall Norris and Generall Drake.

Generall Norris his Martiall education and employments.

in

in the warres of the Admirall of France, and in very young yeeres had charge of men vnder the Earle of Essex in Ireland: which with what commendations hee then discharged, I leaue to the report of them who obserued those seruices. Vpon the breach betwixt Don Iohn and the States, he was made Colonell Generall of all the English Forces there present, or to come, which he continued two yeeres: he was then made Marshall of the Field vnder Conte Hohenlo: and after that, Generall of the Army in Friseland: at his comming home in the time of Monsieurs gouernment in Flanders, he was made Lord President of Munster in Ireland, which he yet holdeth, from whence within one yeere hee was sent for, and sent Generall of the English Forces, which her Maiestie lent then to the Low-countries, which he held till the Earle of Leicesters going ouer. And he was made Marshall of the Field in England, the enemy being vpon our Coast, and when it was expected the Crowne of England should haue beene tried by battell. All which places of Command, which neuer Englishman successiuely attained vnto in forraine warres, and the high places her Maiestie hath thought him worthy of, may suffice to perswade you that hee was not altogether vnlikely to discharge that he vndertooke.

What fame Generall Drake hath gotten by his iourney about the world, by his aduentures to the West Indies, and the scourges hee hath laid vpon the Spanish Nation, I leaue to the Southerne parts to speake of. But to answere the reports, which haue beene giuen out in reproach of the Actors and Action by such as were in the same: let no man thinke otherwise, but that they, who fearing the casuall accidents of Warre had any purpose of returning, did first aduise of some occasion that should moue them thereunto: and hauing found any whatsoeuer did thinke it sufficiently iust, in respect of the earnest desire they had to seeke out matter that might colour their comming home.

Of these there were some, who hauing noted the late Flemish wars, did find that many young men haue gone ouer and safely returned Souldiers within few moneths, in hauing learned some words of Art vsed in the wars, and thought after that good example to spend like time amongst vs: which being expired they began to quarrell at the great mortalitie that was amongst vs. The neglect of discipline in the Armie, for that men were suffered to bee drunke with the plentie of Wines. The scarsitie of Surgions. The want of carriages for the hurt and sicke: and the penury of victualls in the Campe: It hath beene proued by strickt examinations of our Musters, that we were neuer in our fulnesse before our going from Plimouth 11000. Souldiers, nor aboue 2500. Mariners. It is also euident that there returned aboue 6000. of all sorts, as appeareth by the seuerall paiments made to them since our comming home. And I haue truely shewed you that of these numbers very neere three thousand forsooke the Armie at the Sea, whereof some passed into France, and the rest returned home. So as wee neuer being 13000. in all, and hauing broughe home aboue six thousand with vs, you may see how the world hath beene seduced, in beleeuing that we haue lost 16000. men by sickneese.

If at home in the eyes of your Iustices, Maiors, Preachers, and Masters, and where they pay for euery pot they take, they cannot be kept from their liquor: doe they thinke that those base disordered persons whom themselues sent vnto vs, as liuing at home without rule, who hearing of Wine doe long for it as a daintie that their purses could neuer reach to in England, and hauing it there without money euen in their houses where they lie and hold their guard, can be kept from being drunke; and once drunke, held in any order or tune, except we had for euery drunkard an Officer to attend him? But who bee they that haue run into these disorders? Euen our newest men, our youngest men, and our idlest men, and for the most part our slouenly prest men, whom the Iustices (who haue alwayes thought vnworthily of any warre) haue sent out as the scum and dregs of the Countrey. And those were they, who distempering themselues with their hot Wines, haue brought in that sickneese, which hath infected honester men then themselues. But I hope, as in other places the recouery of the disease, doth acquaint their bodies with the ayre of the Countrey where they be, so the remainder of these which haue either recouered, or past without sickneese will proue most fit for Martiall seruices.

If we haue wanted Surgeons, may not this rather be laid vpon the Captaines (who are to prouide for their seuerall Companies) then vpon the Generalls, whose care hath been more generall. And how may it be thought that euery Captaine, vpon whom most of the charges of raising their Companies was laid as an aduenture, could prouide themselues of all things expedient for a war, which was alwayes wont to be maintained by the purse of the Prince. But admit euery Captain had his Surgeon: yet were the want of curing neuertheleese: for our English Surgeons (for the most part) bee vnexperienced in hurts that come by shot; because England hath not knowne warres but of late, from whose ignorance proceeded this discomfort, which I hope will warne those that hereafter goe to the warres, to make preparation of such as may better preserue mens liues by their skill.

From whence the want of carriages did proceed, you may coniecture in that wee marched through a Country neither plentifull of such prouisions, nor willing to part from any thing: yet this I can assure you, that no man of worth was left either hurt or sicke in any place vnprouided for. And that the Generall commanded all the Mules and Asses, that were laden with any baggage gage to be vnburdened and taken to that vse: and the Earle of Essex and he for mony hired men to carry men vpon Pikes. And the Earle (whose true vertue and nobilitie, as it doth in all other his actions appeare, so did it very much in this) threw downe his owne stuffe, I meane apparell and necessaries which hee had there from his owne carriages, and let them be left by the way to put hurt and licke men vpon them. Earle of Essex his worthy Acts.

And the great complaint that these men make for want of victualls, may well proceed from their not knowing the wants of warre; for if to feed vpon good Beeues, Muttons, and Goates, be to want, they haue endured great scarcitie at Land, whereunto they neuer wanted two dayes together wine to mixe with their water, nor bread to eat with their meat (in some quantitie) except it were such as had vowed rather to starue then to stir out of their places for food: of whom we haue too many.

After six dayes laying from the Coast of England, and the fifth after we had the wind good, being the twentieth of Aprill in the euening, we landed in a bay more then an English mile from the Groine, in our long Boats and Pinnaces without any impeachment: from whence we presently marched toward the Towne, within one halfe mile wee were encountred by the enemy, who being charged by ours, retired into their gates. For that night our Armie lay in the Villages, Houses, and Mils next adioyning, and very neere round about the Towne, into the which the Galeon named S. Iohn (which was the second of the last yeeres Fleet against England) one Hulke, two smaller Ships, and two Gallies which were found in the Road, did beat vpon vs and vpon our Companies as they passed too and fro that night and the next morning. Generall Norris hauing that morning before day viewed the Towne, found the same defended on the Land side (for it standeth vpon the necke of an Iland) with a wall vpon a dry Ditch: whereupon hee resolued to try in two places what might be done against it by Escalade, and in the meane time aduised for the landing of some Artillerie to be vpon the Ships and Gallies, that they might not annoy vs: which being but in execution, vpon the planting of the first Peece the Gallies abandoned the Road, and betooke them to Ferroll, not farre from thence: and the Armada being beaten with the Artillery and Musketers that were placed vpon the next shoare, left her playing vpon vs. The rest of the day was spent in preparing the Companies, and other prouisions readie for the surprise of the base Towne, which was effected in this sort. Our men land within a mile of the Groine the 20. of April.

There were appointed to bee landed 1200. men, vnder the conduct of Colonell Huntley, and Captaine Fenner the Vice-Admirall, on that side next fronting vs by water in long Boates and Pinnaces, wherein were placed many Peeces of Artillery to beat vpon the Towne in their approach: at the corner of the wall, which defended the other water side, were appointed Captain Richard Wingfield, Lieutenant Colonell to Generall Norris, and Captaine Sampson, Lieutenant Colonell to Generall Drake, to enter at low water with fiue hundred men if they found it passable, but if not, to betake them to the Escalade, for they had also Ladders with them: at the other corner of the wall, which ioyned to that side that was attempted by water, were appointed Colonell Umpton, and Colonell Bret, with three hundred men to enter by Escalade. All the Companies which should enter by Boat being imbarked before the low water, and hauing giuen the alarme, Captaine Wingfield and Captaine Sampson betooke them to the Escalade, for they had in commandement to charge all at one instant. The Boats landed without any great difficultie: yet had they some men hurt in landing. Colonell Bret, and Colonell Umpton entred their quarter without encounter, not finding any defence made against them: for Captaine Hinder being one of them that entred by water, at his first entry, with some of his owne companie whom hee trusted well, betooke himselfe to that part of the wall, which hee cleered before that they offered to enter, and so scoured the wall, till he came on the backe of them, who maintained the fight against Captaine Wingfield and Captaine Sampson; who were twice beaten from their Ladders, and found very good resistance, till the enemies perceiuing ours entred in two places at their backes, were driuen to abandon the same. The reason why that place was longer defended then the other, is (as Don Iuan de Luna, who commanded the same affirmeth) that the enemie that day had resolued in counsell how to make their defence, if they were approached: and therein concluded, that, if wee attempted it by water, it was not able to bee held, and therefore vpon the discouery of our Boates, they of the high Towne should make a signall by fire from thence, that all the low Towne might make their retreat thither: but they (whether troubled with the sudden terror we brought vpon them, or forgetting their decree) omitted the fire, which made them guard that place till we were entred on euery side.

Then the Towne being entred in three seuerall places with an huge cry, the Inhabitants betooke them to the high Towne: which they might with lesse perill doe, for that ours being strangers there, knew not the way to cut them off. The rest that were not put to the sword in furie, fled to the Rocks in the Iland, others hid themselues in Chambers and Sellers, which were euery day found in great numbers.

Amongst those Don Iuan de Luna, a man of very good commandement, hauing hidden himselfe in a house, did the next morning yeeld himselfe. There was also taken that night a Commissarie of victuals, called Iuan de Vera, who confessed that there were in the Groine at our entrie fiue hundred dred Souldiers, being in ſeuen Companies, which returned very weake (as appeareth by the ſmall numbers of them) from the iourney of England. The reſt falling into the hands of the common Souldiers, had their throats cut, to the number of fiue hundred as I coniecture, firſt and laſt, after wee had entred the Towne; and in the entry thereof there was found euerie Seller full of Wine, whereon our men by inordinate drinking, both grew themſelues for the preſent ſenſleſſe of the danger of the ſhot of the Town, which hurt many of them being drunk, and tooke the firſt ground of their ſickneſſe; for of ſuch was our firſt and chiefeſt mortalitie. There was alſo abundant ſtore of Victualls, Salt, and all kind of prouiſion for ſhipping and the warre: which was confeſſed by the ſaid Commiſſary of Victualls taken there, to be the beginning of a Magaſin of all ſorts of prouiſion for a new Voyage into England: whereby you may coniecture what the ſpoile thereof hath aduantaged vs, and preiudiced the King of Spaine.

Digitized by Google

Intemperate drinking cauſe of ſickneſſe.

New voyage to England intended.

The next morning about eight of the clocke the enemies abandoned their Ships. And hauing ouercharched the Artillery of the Gallion, left her on fire, which burnt in terrible ſort two daies together, the fire and ouercharging of the Peeces being ſo great, as of fiftie that were in her, there were not aboue ſixteene taken out whole; the reſt with ouercharge of the powder being broken and molten with heat of the fire, were taken out in broken pieces into diuers Ships. The ſame day was the Cloiſter of the South ſide of the Towne entred by vs, which ioyned verie neere to the wall of the Town, out of the chambers and other places whereof we beat into the ſame with our Musketiers.

Gallion burnt.

The next day in the afternoone there came downe ſome two thouſand men, gathered together out of the Countrey, euen to the gates of the Towne, as reſolutely (led by what ſpirit I know not) as though they would haue entred the ſame: but at the firſt defence made by ours that had the guard there, wherein were ſlaine about eighteene of theirs, they tooke them to their heeles in the ſame diſorder they made their approach, and with greater ſpeed then ours were able to follow: notwithſtanding wee followed after them more then a mile. The ſecond day Colonell Huntley was ſent into the Countrey with three or foure hundred men, who brought home very great ſtore of Kine and Sheepe for our reliefe.

The third day in the night, the Generall had in purpoſe to take a long Munition-houſe builded vpon their wall, opening towardes vs, which would haue giuen great aduantage againſt them; but they knowing the commodity thereof for vs, burnt it in the beginning of the euening; which put him to a new councell: for he had likewiſe brought ſome Artillery to that ſide of the Towne. During this time there happened a very great fire in the lower end of the Towne; which, had it not bin by the care of the Generals heedily ſeene vnto, and the fury thereof preuented by pulling downe many houſes which were moſt in danger, as next vnto them, had burnt all the prouiſions we found there, to our wonderfull hinderance.

Dangerous fire

The fourth day, were planted vnder the guard of the Cloiſters two Demy-canons, and two Coluerings againſt the Towne, defended or gabbioned with a croſſe wall, the row which our battery lay; the firſt and ſecond tire whereof ſhooke all the wall down, ſo as all the Ordnance lay open to the Enemy, by reaſon wherof ſome of the Canoniers were ſhot and ſome ſlaine. The Lieutenant alſo of the Ordnance, M. Spencer, was ſlaine faſt by Sir Edward Norris, Maſter thereof: whoſe valour being accompanied with an honourable care of defending that truſt committed vnto him, neuer left that place, till he receiued direction from the Generall his brother to ceaſe the battery, which he preſently did, leauing a guard vpon the ſame for that day; and in the night following made ſo good defence for the place of the battery, as after there were very few or none annoyed therein. That day Captaine Goodwin had in commandement from the Generall, that when the aſſault ſhould be giuen to the Towne, he ſhould make a proffer of an Eſcalade on the other ſide, where he held his guard: but he (miſtaking the ſignall that would haue beene giuen) attempted the ſame long before the aſſault, and was ſhot in the mouth. The ſame day the Generall hauing planted his Ordnance ready to batter, cauſed the Towne to be ſummoned; in which ſummons they of the Towne ſhot at our Drum: immediately after that there was one hanged ouer the wall, and a parle deſired; wherein they gaue vs to vnderſtand, that the man hanged was hee that ſhot at the Drum before; wherein they all intreated to haue faire wars, with promiſe of the ſame on their parts. The reſt of the parle was ſpent in talking of Don Iuan de Luna, and ſome other priſoners, and ſomewhat of the rendring of the Towne, but not much, for they liſtned not greatly thereunto.

Generall Norris hauing by his skilfull view of the Towne (which is almoſt all ſeated vpon a Rocke) found one place thereof mineable, did preſently ſet workemen in hand withall; who after three daies labour (and the ſeuenth after we were entred the baſe Towne) had bedded their Powder, but indeed not farre enough into the wall. Againſt which time the breach made by the Canon being thought aſſaultable, and Companies appointed as well to enter the ſame, as that which was expected ſhould be blowne vp by the Mine: namely, to that of the Canon, Captaine Richard Wingfield, and Captaine Philpot, who led the Generalls Foot-company, with whom alſo Captaine Yorke went, whoſe principall commandement was ouer the Horſe-men. And to that of the Mine, Captaine Iohn Sampſon, and Captaine Anthony Wingfield Lieutenant Colonell to the Vndermining.

Maſter

Master of the Ordnance, with certaine selected out of diuers Regiments. All these Companies being in Armes, and the assault intended to be giuen in all places at an instant, fire was put to the traine of the Mine; by reason the Powder brake out backwardes in a place where the Caue was made too high, there could be nothing done in either place for that day. During this time Captain Hinder was sent with some chosen out of euery Company into the Country for prouisions, whereof he brought in good store, and returned without losse. Prouisions brought in.

The next day Cap. Anthony Sampson was sent out with some fiue hundred to fetch in prouisions for the Army, who was encountred by them of the Country, but he put them to flight, and returned with good spoile. The same night the Miners were set to worke againe, who by the second day after had wrought very well into the foundation of the wall. Against which time the Companies aforesaid being in readinesse for both places (Generall Drake on the other side, with two or three hundred men in Pinnaces, making proffer to attempt a strong Fort vpon an Iland before the Towne, where he left more then thirtie men) fire was giuen to the traine of the Mine, which blew vp halfe the Tower vnder which the Powder was planted. The assailants hauing in charge vpon the effecting of the Mine presently to giue the assault, performed it accordingly; but too soone: for hauing entred the top of the breach, the other halfe of the Tower, which with the first force of the Powder was onely shaken and made loose, fell vpon our men: vnder which were buried about twentie or thirtie, then being vnder that part of the Tower. This so amazed our men that stood in the breach, not knowing from whence that terror came, as they forsooke their Commanders, and left them among the ruines of the Mine. The two Ensignes of Generall Drake and Captaine Anthony Wingfield were shot in the breach, but their colours were rescued: the Generalls by Captaine Sampsons Lieutenant, and Captaine Wingfields by himselfe. Amongst them that the wall fell vpon, was Cap. Sydenham pittifully lost; who hauing three or foure great stones vpon his lower parts, was held so fast, as neither himselfe could stirre, nor any reasonable company recouer him. Notwithstanding the next day being found to be aliue, there was ten or twelue lost in attempting to relieue him. Tower falleth.

The breach made by the Canon, was wonderfully well assaulted by them that had the charge thereof, who brought their men to the push of the Pike at the top of the breach. And being readie to enter, the loose earth (which was indeede but the rubbish of the outside of the wall) with the weight of them that were thereon slipped outwardes from vnder their feet. Whereby did appeare halfe the wall vnbattered. For let no man thinke that Culuerin or Demy-canon can sufficiently batter a defensible rampire: and of those Peeces which we had; the better of the Demy-canons at the second shot brake in her carriages, so as the battery was of lesse force, being but of three Peeces.

In our retreat (which was from both breaches thorow a narrow lane) were many of our men hurt: and Captaine Dolphin, who serued very well that day, was hurt in the very breach. The failing of this attempt, in the opinion of all the beholders, and of such as were of the best iudgement, was the fall of the Mine; which had doubtlesse succeeded, the rather, because the approch was vnlooked for by the enemy in that place, and therefore not so much defence made there as in the other; which made the Generall grow to a new resolution: for finding that two daies battery had so little beaten their wall, and that he had no better preparation to batter withall: he knew in his experience, there was no good to be done that way; which I thinke he first put in proofe, to try if by that terror hee could get the vpper Towne, hauing no other way to put it in hazzard so speedily, and which in my conscience had obtained the Towne, had not the defendants bin in as great peril of their liues by the displeasure of their King in giuing it vp, as by the Bullet or Sword in defending the same. For that day before the assault, in the view of our Armie, they burnt a Cloister within the Town, and many other houses adioyning to the Castle, to make it more defensible: whereby it appeared how little opinion themselues had of holding it against vs, had not God (who would not haue vs suddenly made proud) laied that misfortune vpon vs.

The next day the Generall hearing by a prisoner that was brought in, that the Conde de Andrada had assembled an Armie of eight thousand at Puente de Burgos, sixe miles from thence in the way to Petance, which was but the beginning of an Armie: in that there was a greater leauy ready to come thither vnder the Conde de Altomira, either in purpose to relieue the Groine, or to encampe themselues neere the place of our embarking, there to hinder the same; for to that purpose had the Marquesse of Seralba, written to them both the first night of our landing, as the Commissary taken then confessed, or at the least to stop our further entrance into the Country, (for during this time, there were many incursions made of three or foure hundred at a time, who burnt, spoiled, and brought in victualls plentifully) the Generall, I say, hearing of this Armie, had in purpose the next day following to visite them, against whom hee carried but nine Regiments: in the Vantguard were the Regiment of Sir Roger Williams, Sir Edward Norris, and Colonell Sidney: in the Battaile, that of the Generall of Colonell Lane, and Colonell Medkerk: and in the Reareward, Sir Henry Norris, Colonell Huntley, and Colonell Brets Regiments; leauing the other fiue Regiments with Generall Drake, for the guard of the Cloister and Artillery. About ten of the clocke the next day, being the first of May, halfe a mile from the Campe, Conde de Andrada his Armie.

wee discouering the enemy, Sir Edward Norris, who commanded the Vantguard in chiefe, appointed his Lieutenant Colonell Captaine Anthony Wingfield to command the shot of the same, who diuided them into three troupes; the one he appointed to Captain Middleton to beconducted in away on the left hand: another to Captain Erington to take the way on the right hand, and the bodie of them (which were Musquetiers) Captaine Wingfield tooke himselfe, keeping the direct way of the march. But the way taken by Captaine Middleton met a little before with the way held by Captaine Wingfield, so as he giuing the first charge vpon the enemy, was in the instant seconded by Captaine Wingfield, who beat them from place to place (they hauing very good places of defence, and crosse Walles which they might haue held long) till they betooke them to their Bridge, which is ouer a creeke comming out of the Sea, builded of Stone vpon Arches. On the foot of the further side whereof, lay the Campe of the enemy very strongly entrenched, who with our shot beaten to the further end of the Bridge, Sir Edward Norris marching in the point of the Pikes, without stay passed to the Bridge, accompanied with Colonell Sidney, Captaine Hinder, Captaine Enlford, and diuers others, who found the way cleere ouer the same, but through an incredible volley of shot; for that the shot of their Army flanked vpon both sides of the Bridge, the further end whereof was barricaded with Barrells: but they who should haue guarded the same, seeing the proud approach wee made, forsooke the defence of the barricade, where Sir Edward entred, and charging the first defendant with his Pike, with very earnestnesse in ouerthrusting, fell, and was grieuously hurt at the sword in the head, but was most honourably relcued by the Generall his brother, accompanied with Colonell Sadley, and some other Gentlemen: Captaine Hinder also hauing his Caske shot off, had fiue wounds in the head and face at the sword; and Captaine Enlford was shot in the left arme at the same encounter: yet were they so thorowly seconded by the Generall, who thrust himselfe so neere to giue encouragement to the attempt (which was of wonderfull difficultie) as their braueſt men that defended that place being ouerthrowne, their whole Army fell presently into rout, of whom our men had the chase three miles in foure sundry waies, which they betooke themselues vnto. There was taken the Standard with the Kings Armes, and borne before the Generall. How many two thousand men (for of so many consisted our Vantguard) might kill in pursuit of foure sundry parties, so many you may imagine fell before vs that day. And to make the number more great, our men hauing giuen ouer the execution, and returning to their Bands, found many hidden in the Vineyards and Hedges, which they dispatched. Also Colonell Monkton was sent with his Regiment three miles further to a Cloister, which he burnt and spoiled, wherein he found two hundred more, and put them to the sword. There were slaine in this fight on our side onely Captain Cooper, and one priuate Souldier; Captaine Barton was also hurt vpon the Bridge in the eye. But had you seene the strong barricades they had made on either side of the Bridge, and how strongly they lay encamped thereabours, you would haue thought it a rare resolution of ours to giue so braue a charge vpon an Armie so strongly lodged. After the fury of the execution, the Generall sent the Vantguard one way, and the battell another, to burne and spoile; so as you might haue seene the Countrey more then three miles compasse on fire. There was found very good store of Munition and victualls in the Campe, some plate and rich apparell, which the better sort left behind, they were so hotly pursued. Our Sailers also landed in an Iland next adioyning to our ships, where they burnt and spoiled all they found. Thus we returned to the Groine, bringing small comfort to the enemy within the same, who shot many times at vs as we marched out; but not once in our comming backe againe.

The notable ouerthrow giuen to the Spaniards at Puente de Burgos.

The next day was spent in shipping our Artillery landed for the battery, and of the rest taken at the Groine, which had it beene such as might haue giuen vs any assurance of a better battery, or had there beene no other purpose of our iourney but that, I thinke the Generall would haue spent some more time in the siege of the place.

The two last nights, there were that vndertooke to fire the higher Towne in one place, where the houses were builded vpon the wall by the water side; but they within suspecting as much, made so good defence against vs, as they preuented the same. In our departure there was fire put into euerie house of the low Towne, insomuch as I may iustly say, there was not one house left standing in the base Towne, or the Cloister.

The next day, being the eight of May, wee embarked our Armie without losse of a man, which (had wee not beaten the enemie at Puente de Burgos) had beene impossible to haue done.

Earle of Essex comes to them.

After we had put from thence, we had the wind so contrarie, as we could not vnder nine daies recouer the Burlings; in which passage on the thirteenth day the Earle of Essex, and with him M. Walter Deuereux his brother (a Gentleman of wonderfull great hope) Sir Roger Williams, Colonell Generall of the Footmen, Sir Philip Butler, who hath alwaies beene most inward with him, and Sir Edward Wingfield, came into the Fleet. The Earle put off in the same wind from Falmouth, that wee left Plimouth in, where he lay, because he would auoid the importunitie of Messengers that were daily sent for his returne, and some other causes more secret to himselfe, not knowing (as it seemed) what place the Generals purposed to land in, had bin as far as Cadiz in Andaluzia, and lay vp and downe about the South Cape, where hee tooke some Ships laden with with Corne, and brought them vnto the Fleet. Also in his returne from thence to meet with our Fleet, he fell with the Ilands of Bayon; and on that side of the Riuer which Cannas standeth vpon, he, with Sir Roger Williams, and those Gentlemen that were with him went on shoare, with some men out of the Ship he was in, whom the enemy that held guard vpon that Coast, would not abide, but fled vp into the Countrey.

The sixteenth day we landed at Peniche in Portugal, vnder the shot of the Castle, and aboue the waste in the water, more then a mile from the town, wherin many were in peril of drowning, by reason the wind was great, and the Sea went high, which ouerthrew one Boat, wherein fiue and twentie of Captaine Dolphins men perished. The enemy being fiue Companies of Spaniards, vnder the commandement of Conde de Fuentes, sallied out of the town against vs, and in our landing made their approach close by the water side. But the Earle of Essex, with Sir Roger Williams, and his brother, hauing landed sufficient number to make two troupes, left one to hold the way by the water side, and led the other ouer the Sand-hills; which the enemy seeing, drew theirs likewise further into the Land; not, as we coniectured, to encounter vs, but indeed to make their speedie passage away: notwithstanding they did it in such sort, as being charged by ours which were sent out by the Colonell generall vnder Captaine Iackson, they stood the same euen to the push of the Pike: in which charge and at the push, Captaine Robert Piew was slaine. The enemy being fled further then we had reason to follow them, all our Companies were drawne to the Town; which being vnfortified in any place, wee found vndefended by any man against vs. And therefore the Generall caused the Castle to bee summoned that night; which being abandoned by him that commanded it, a Portugall named Antonio de Auriel, being possessed thereof, desired but to be assured that Don Antonio was landed, whereupon he would deliuer the same; which he honestly performed. There was taken out of the Castle some hundred Shot and Pikes, which Don Emanuel furnished his Portugalls withall, and twentie Barrells of Powder: so as possessing both the Town and the Castle, we rested there one day; wherin some Friars and other poore men came vnto their new King, promising in the name of their Countrey next adioyning, that within two dayes hee should haue a good supply of Horse and Foot for his assistance. That day wee remained there, the Generals company of horses were vnshipped.

They land at Peniche.

Peniche taken.

The Generalls there fully resolued, that the Armie should march ouer Land to Lisbon, vnder the conduct of Generall Norris; and that Generall Drake should meet him in the Riuer thereof with the Fleet; that there should bee one Company of Foot left in guard of the Castle, and six in the Ships; also that the sicke and hurt should remaine there with prouisions for their cures.

They march towards Lisbon.

In this march Captaine Crisse the Prouost Marshall caused one who (contrary to the Proclamation published at our arriuall in Portugall) had broken vp an house for pillage, to bee hanged, with the cause of his death vpon his breast, in the place where the act was committed: which good example prouidently giuen in the beginning of our march, caused the commandement to be more respectiuely regarded all the iourney after, by them whom feare of punishment doth only hold within compasse. The Campe lodged that night at Lorinha: the next day we had intelligence all the way, that the enemy had made head of Horse and Foot against vs at Torres Vedras, which wee thought they would haue held: but comming thither the second day of our march, not two houres before our Vantgard came in, they left the Towne and Castle to the possession of Don Antonio.

Good discipline.

There began the greatest want we had of victuals, especially of bread, vpon a commandement giuen from the Generall, that no man should spoile the Country, or take any thing from any Portugall: which was more respectiuely obserued, then I thinke would haue bin in our owne Countrey, amongst our owne friends and kindred: but the Countrey (contrary to promise) wholly neglected the prouision of victuals for vs, wherby we were driuen for that time into a great scarsity. Which moued the Colonell Generall to call all the Colonells together, and with them to aduise of some better course for our people: who thought it best, first to aduertise the King what necessitie we were in, before we should of our selues alter the first institution of abstinence. The Colonell generall, hauing acquainted the Generall herewith, with his very good allowance thereof, went to the King; who after some expostulations vsed, tooke the more carefull order for our men, and after that our Armie was more plentifully relieued.

Want of bread

The third day we lodged our Armie in three sundry Villages, the one Battalion lying in Exaraina de los Canalleros, another in Exaraina de Obispo, and the third in San Sebastian. Captain Yorke, who commanded the Generalls Horse Company, in this march made triall of the valour of the Horsemen of the enemy; who by one of his Corporals charged with eight Horses thorow fortie of them, and himselfe thorow more then two hundred, with some fortie Horses: who would abide him no longer then they could make way from him.

The next day we marched to Lores, and had diuers Intelligences that the enemy would tarry vs there: for the Cardinall had made publike promise to them of Lisbon, that he would fight with vs in that place, which he might haue done aduantageously; for we had a Bridge to passe ouer in the same place: but before our comming he dislodged, notwithstanding it appeared vnto vs that hee had in purpose to incampe there; for wee found the ground staked out where their trenches should haue bin made: and their Horsemen with some few Shot shewed themselues vpon an Hill at our comming into that Village; whom Sir Henry Norris (whose Regiment had the point of the Vantgard) thought to draw vnto some fight, and therefore marched without sound of Drum, and somewhat faster then ordinary, thereby to get neere them before he were discouered, for hee was shadowed from them by an Hill that was betweene him and them: but before he could draw his Companies any thing neere, they retired.

Generall Drakes Regiment that night, for the commoditie of good lodging, drew themselues into a Village, more then one English mile from thence, and neere the enemy: who not daring to doe any thing against vs in foure dayes before, tooke that occasion, and in the next morning fell downe vpon that Regiment, crying, Viua el Rey Don Antonio, which was a generall salutation thorow all the Countrey as they came: whom our young Souldiers (though it were vpon their guard, and before the watch were discharged) began to entertaine kindly, but hauing got within their guard, they fell to cut their throats: but the alarme being taken inwards, the Officers of the two next Companies, whose Captaines (Captain Sydnam and Captain Young) were lately dead at the Groine, brought downe their Colours and Pikes vpon them in so resolute manner, as they presently draue them to retire with losse: they killed of ours at the first entrance fourteene, and hurt six or seuen.

Some died with drinking water.

The next day we lodged at Aluelana within three miles of Lisbon, where many of our Souldiers drinking in two places of standing waters by the way were poysoned, and thereon presently dyed. Some doe thinke it came rather by eating of Hony, which they found in the houses plentifully. But whether it were by Water or by Hony, the poore men were poisoned. That night the Earle of Essex and Sir Roger Williams went out about eleuen of the clocke with 1000. men to lie in ambuscade neere the Town, and hauing laied the same very neere, sent some to giue the alarme vnto the enemy: which was well performed by them that had the charge thereof, but the enemy refused to issue after them, so that the Earle returned as soone as it was light without doing any thing, though he had in purpose, and was ready to haue giuen an honourable charge on them.

Earle of Essex his attempt.

They come to the suburbs of Lisbon.

The 25. of May in the euening we came to the Suburbs of Lisbon: at the very entrance whereof Sir Roger Williams calling Captaine Anthony Wingfield with him, tooke thirtie Shot or thereabouts, and first scowred all the Streets till they came very neere the Towne; where they found none but old folkes and beggars, crying, Viua el Rey Don Antonio, and the houses shut vp: for they had carried much of their wealth into the Towne, and had fired some houses by the waterside, full of Corne and other prouisions of victuals, least wee should be benefited thereby, but yet left behind them great riches in many houses. The foure Regiments that had the vantguard that day, which were Colonell Diuereux, Sir Edward Norris, Colonell Sidneys, and Generall Drakes (whom I name as they marched): the Colonell generall caused to hold guard in the neerest Streets of the Suburbs: the Battel and the Arrereward stood in Armes all the night in Field neere to Alcantara. Before morning Captaine Wingfield, by direction from the Colonell generall Sir Roger Williams, held guard with Sir Edward Norris his Regiment in three places very neere the Towne wall, and so held the same till the other Regiments came in the morning. About midnight they within the Towne burnt all their houses that stood vpon their wall either within or without, least we possessing them, might thereby greatly haue annoyed the Towne.

Houses burnt by the Portugalls.

The next morning Sir Roger Williams attempted (but not without perill) to take a Church called S. Antonio, which ioyned to the wall of the Towne, and would haue been a very euill neighbor to the Towne: but the enemy hauing more easie entry into it then wee, gained it before vs. The rest of that morning was spent in quartering the Battell and Arrereward in the Suburbs called Bona Vista, and in placing Musquetiers in houses, to front their Shot vpon the wall, who from the same scowred the great Streets very dangerously.

By this time our men being thorowly weary with our sixe dayes march, and the last nights watch, were desirous of rest; whereof the enemy being aduertised, about one or two of the clocke sallied out of the Town, and made their approach in three seuerall Streets vpon vs, but chiefly in Colonell Brets quarter: who (as most of the Armie was) being at rest, with as much speed as he could, drew his men into Armes, and made head against them so thorowly, as himselfe was slain in the place, Captaine Carsey shot thorow the thigh, of which hurt hee died within foure dayes after, Captaine Caire slaine presently, and Captaine Case hurt (but not mortally) who were all of his Regiment. This resistance made as well here, as in other quarters where Colonell Lane and Colonell Medkerk commanded, put them to a sudden foule retreat; insomuch, as the Earle of Essex had the chase of them euen to the gates of the high Town, wherin they left behind them many of their best Commanders: their troupe of Horsemen also came out, but being charged by Captain Yorke, withdrew themselues againe. Many of them also left the streets, and betooke them to houses which they found open: for the Sergeant Maior Captain Wilson slew in one house with his owne hands three or foure, and caused them that were with him to kill many others. Their losse I can assure you did triple ours, as well in qualitie as in quantitie.

Colonell Brets slaine.

Their retrait, and chase by E. Essex.

Gen. Drakes comming.

During our march to this place, Generall Drake with the Whole Fleet was come into Cascais, and possessed the Town without any resistance: many of the Inhabitants at their discouery of our Nauie, Nauie, fled with their baggage into the Mountaines, and left the Towne for any man that would possesse it, till Generall Drake sent vnto them by a Portugall Pilot which he had on boord, to offer them all peaceable kindnesse, so farre forth as they would accept of their King, and ministers necessaries to the Armie he had brought; which offer they ioyfully imbraced, and presently sent two chiefe men of their Town, to signifie their loyaltie to Don Antonio, & their honest affections to our people. Whereupon the Generall landed his Companies not farre from the Cloister called San Domingo, but not without perill of the shot of the Castle, which being guarded with sixtie fiue Spaniards, held still against him. Castell forsaken.

As our Fleet were casting anker when they came first into that Road, there was a small ship of Brasil that came from thence, which bare with them, and seemed by striking her sailes, as though she would also haue ancred: but taking her fittest occasion horsed againe, and would haue passed vp the Riuer, but the Generall presently discerning her purpose, sent out a Pinnace or two after her, which forced her in such sort, as she ran her selfe vpon the Rocks: all the men escaped out of her, and the lading (being many chests of Sugar) was made nothing worth, by the Salt water. In his going thither also, he tooke Ships of the Port of Portugall, which were sent from thence, with fifteene other from Pedro Vermendes Xiraes Sergeant-Maior of the same place, laden with meale and victualls to Lisbon: the rest that escaped put into Setuual. Ships taken.

The next day it pleased Generall Norris to call all the Colonels together, and to aduise with them, whether it were more expedient to carry there to attend the forces of the Portugall Horse and Foot, whereof the King had made promise, and to march some conuenient number to Cascais to fetch our Artillery and Munition which was all at our ships, sauing that which for the necessity of the seruice was brought along with vs: whereunto, some carried away with the vaine hope of Don Antonio, that the most part of the Town stood for vs, held it best to make our abode there, and to send some three thousand of our Artillery: promising to themselues, that the Enemy being well beaten the day before, would make no more sallies: some others (whose vnbeliefe was very strong of any hope from the Portugalls) perswaded rather to march wholly away, then to be any longer carried away with the opinion of things, whereof there was so little appearance. The Generall, not willing to leaue any occasion of blot to be laid vpon him for his speedie going from thence, nor to lose any more time by attending the hope of Don Antonio, told them, that though the expedition of Portugall were not the onely purpose of their iourney, but an aduenture therein (which if it succeeded prosperously might make them sufficiently rich, and wonderfull honourable) and that they had done so much already in triall thereof, as what end soeuer happened could nothing impaire their credits: yet in regard of the Kings last promise, that he should haue that night three thousand armed men of his owne Country, he would not for the taking lodge. The King of Portugall (whether carried away with imagination by the aduertisements he receiued from the Portugalls, or willing by any promise to bring such an Armie into his Country, thereby to put his fortune once more in triall) assured the Generall, that vpon his first landing there would be a reuolt of his subiects. Consultation.

After two nights laying at Lisbon, the King, as you haue heard promised a supply of three thousand Foot, and some Horse: but all his appointments being expired, euen to the hire of a night, all his Horse could not make a Cornet of forte, nor his Foot furnish two Ensignes fully, although they carried three or foure colours: and these were altogether such as thought to inrich themselues by the ruine of their neighbours: for they committed more disorders in euery place where we came by spoile, then any of our owne. Don Antonio promises frustrate.

The Generall, as you see, hauing done more then before his comming out of England was required by the King, and giuen credite to his many promises, euen to the breach of the last, he desisted not to perswade him to stay yet nine daies longer: in which time hee might haue engaged himselfe further, then with any honor he could come out off againe, by attempting a Towne fortified, wherein were more men armed against vs, then we had to oppugne them withall, our Artillery and Munition being fifteene miles from vs, and our most men declining: for there was the first shew of any great sicknesse among st them. Whereby is seemeth, that one or two Prelates did much abuse him in perswading him to hopes, whereof after two or three daies not any semblance: one like a silly louer, who promiseth himselfe fauour by importuning a cruell mistresse, thought by our long being before his Towne, that in the end taking pitie on him they would let him in. What end the Friers had by following him with such deuotion I know not, but sure I am, the Laitie did respite their homage till they might see which way the victorie might sway; fearing to shew themselues apparantly vnto him, least the Spaniard should after our departure (if we preuailed not) call them to account: yet sent they vnderhand messages to him of obedience, thereby to saue their owne, if he became King; but indeed very well contented to see the Spaniards and vs trie by blowes who should carry away the Crowne. For they be of so base a mould, as they can very well subiect themselues to any gouernment, where they may liue free from blowes, and haue liberty to become rich, being lothe to indure hazard either of life or goods. For durst they haue put on any minds thoroughly to resolue, they had three wonderfull great occasions offered them during our being there, &c.

They march from Lisbon.

The next morning, seeing no performance of promise kept, the Generall gaue order for our marching away; himselfe, the Earle of Essex, and Sir Roger Williams remaining with the stand that was made in the high street, till the whole Armie was drawne into the Field, and so marched out of the Towne, appointing Captaine Richard Wingfield, and Captaine Anthony Winfield in the Arrere ward of them with the shot; thinking that the enemy (as it was most likely) would haue issued out vpon our rising; but they were otherwise aduised. When we were come into the Field, euerie Battalion fell into that order which by course appertained vnto them, and so marched that night vnto Cascais.

The riches that they might haue gotten at Lisbon.

Had wee marched thorow his Countrey as enemies, our Souldiers had beene well supplied in all their wants: but had wee made enemies of the Suburbs of Lisbon, wee had beene the richest Armie that euer went out of England: for besides the particular wealth of euery house, there were many Ware-houses by the water side full of all sorts of rich Merchandizes.

In our march that day the Gallies which had somewhat, but not much annoyed vs at Lisbon, (for that our way lay along the Riuer) attended vs till we were past S. Iulians, bestowing many shot amongst vs, but did no harme at all, saue that they strooke off a Gentlemans leg, and killed the Sergeant Maiors Moile vnder him. The Horsemen also followed vs afarre off, and cut off as many sicke men as were not able to hold in march, or we had carriage for.

After we had beene two daies at Cascais, wee had intelligence by a Friar, that the enemy was marching strongly towards vs, and then came as farre as S. Iulian: which newes was so welcome to the Earle of Essex and the Generalls, as they offered euery one of them to giue the Messenger an hundred Crownes if they found them in the place; for the Generall desiring nothing more then to fight with them in field roome, dispatched that night a Messenger with a Trumpet, by whom hee writ a Cartell to the Generall of their Armie, wherein he gaue them the lie, in that it was by them reported that wee dislodged from Lisbon in disorder and feare of them (which indeed was most false) for that it was fiue of the clocke in the morning before wee fell into Armes, and then went in such sort, as they had no courage to follow out vpon vs. Also he challenged him therein, to meet him the next morning with his whole Armie, if hee durst attend his comming, and there to try out the iustnesse of their quarrell by battell; by whom also the Earle of Essex (who preferring the honour of the cause, which was his Countries, before his owne safetie) sent a particular Cartell, offering himselfe against any of theirs, if they had any of his qualitie; or if they would not admit of that, six, eight, or ten, or as many as they would appoint, should meet so many of theirs in the head of our battell to trie their fortunes with them, and that they should haue assurance of their returne and honourable intreatie.

Desire of the English to fight

Feare of the enemies.

The Generall accordingly made all his Armie readie, by three of the clocke in the morning, and marched euen to the place where they had encamped, but they were dislodged in the night in great disorder, being taken with a sudden feare that we had been come vpon them, as the Generall was the next day certainely informed: so as the Trumpet followed them to Lisbon, but could not get other answere to either of his Letters, but threatning to bee hanged, for daring to bring such a message. Howbeit the Generall had caused to be written vpon the backside of their Passport, that if they did offer any violence vnto the Messengers, he would hang the best prisoners he had of theirs: which made them to aduise better of the matter, and to returne them home; but without answere.

Castle of Cascais yeelded.

After our Armie came to Cascais, and the Castle summoned, the Castellan thereof granted, that vpon fiue or six shot of the Canon he would deliuer the same, but not without sight thereof. The Generall thinking that his distresse within had been such for want of men or victuals, as he could not hold it many dayes, because hee saw it otherwise defensible enough, determined rather to make him yeeld to that necessitie, then to bring the Canon, and therefore onely set a guard vpon the same, least any supply of those things which hee wanted should bee brought vnto them. But hee still standing vpon those conditions, the Generall about two dayes before hee determined to goe to Sea, brought three or foure Peeces of battery against it: vpon the first fire whereof he surrendered, and compounded to goe away with his baggage and Armes; hee had one Canon, two Culuerings, one Basiliske, and three or foure other Field Peeces, threescore and fiue Souldiers, very good store of Munition, and victuals enough in the Castle; insomuch as hee might haue held the same longer then the Generall had in purpose to tarry there. One company of Footmen was put into the guard thereof, till the Artillery was taken out, and our Armie imbarked; which without hauing that fort, we could not without great perill haue done. When we were readie to set sale (one halfe of the Fort being by order from the Generall blowne vp by mine) the company was drawne away.

Sixtie Hulkes brought.

During the time we lay in the Road, our Fleet began the second of Iune, and so continued six dayes after to fetch in some Hulks to the number of threescore, of Dansik, Stetin, Rostock, Lubeck and Hamburgh, laden with Spanish goods, and as it seemed for the Kings prouision, and going for Lisbon: their principall lading was Corne, Masts, Cables, Copper, and Waxe: amongst which were some of great burthen wonderfull well builded for sailing, which had no great lading in them, and therefore it was thought they were brought for the Kings prouision, to reinforce his

his decaied Naue: whereof there was the greater likelihood, in that the owner of the greatest of them which carried two misnes, was knowne to be very inward with the Cardinall, who rather then he would be taken with his ships, committed himselfe vnto his small Boate, wherein he recouered Saint Sebastians: into the which our men, that before were in flie-boates, were shipped, and the Flie-boates sent home with an offer of Corne, to the value of their hire. But the winde being good for them for Rochel, they chose rather to loose their Corne then the winde, and so departed. The Generall also sent his Horses with them, and from thence shipped them into England.

Cardinall Albert after married to the Infanta and Ruler of the Spanish Port of the Low Countries.

The third of Iune, Colonell Deuereux, and Colonell Sidney, being both very sicke, departed for England, who in the whole iourney had shewed themselues very forward to all seruices, and in their departure very vnwilling to leaue vs: that day we embarked all our Army, but lay in the road vntill the eight thereof.

The sixt day, the Earle of Essex, vpon receit of Letters from her Maiesty, by them that brought in the victuals, presently departed towards England, with whom Sir Roger Williams was very desirous to goe, but found the Generals very vnwilling he should do so, in that he bare the next place vnto them, and if they should miscarry, was to command the Army. And the same day there came vnto vs two small Barkes, that brought tidings of some other ships come out of England with victuals, which were passed vpwards to the Cape; for meeting with whom, the second day after we set saile for that place, in purpose after our meeting with them to goe with the Iles of Azores: the second day, which was the ninth, we met with them comming backe againe towards vs, whose prouision little answered our expectation. Notwithstanding we resolued to continue our course for the Ilands.

About this time went he Merchant Royall, with three or foure other ships, sent to Penicha, to fetch away the companies that were left there; but Captain Barlow hauing receiued Letters from the Generals that were fet vpon land, was departed before, not being able by reason of the enemies speedy marching thither, either to bring away the artillery, or all his men, according to the direction those letters gaue him; for he was no sooner gone, then the enemy possessed the Towne and Castle, and shot at our ships as they came into the road.

At this time also was the Ambassadour from the Emperor of Marocco, called Reys Hamet Benessamp, returned, and with him M. Gaston, a Gentleman of good place and desert, who sent from Don Antonio, and Captaine Ogle from the Generals to the Emperour.

Morocco Embassadour.

The next morning the nine Gallies which were left not fiue daies before out of Andalusia for the strengthening of the Riuer of Lisbon which being ioyned with the other twelue that were there before, though we lay hard by them at Saint Iulians, durst neuer make any attempt against vs) vpon our departure from thence were returning home, and in the morning being a very dead calme, in the drawing themselues, fell in the winde of our fleet, in the vttermost part whereof they assailed one straggling Barke of Plymouth, of the which Captaine Caterley being Captaine of the land company, with his Lieutenant, the Master, and some of the Mariners, abandoned the ship, and betooke themselues to the ship-boat; wherein one, in which the Master and the Captaine were, was ouerset with the Gallies, and they drowned. There were also two Hulkes straggled far from the fleete of the other ships, which were so calmed, as neither they could get to vs, nor we to them, though all the great ships towed with their Boats to haue relieued them, but could not be recouered; in one of which was Captaine Minshaw with his company, who fought with them to the last, yea after his ship was on fire, which whether it was fired by himselfe or by them we could not well discerne, but might easily iudge by his long and good fight, that the enemy could not but sustain much losse; who setting also vpon one other Hulke wherein was but a Lieutenant, and he very sicke, were by the valour of the Lieutenant put off, although they had first beaten her with their artillery, and attempted to board her. And seeing also one other Hulke a league off, a seruice of vs, they make towards her: but finding that she made ready to fight with them, they durst not further attempt her: whereby it seemed, their losse being great in the other fights, they were loath to procure any further.

From this day till the ninetenth of Iune, our direction from the Generall was, that if the winde were Northerly, we should plie for the Azores; but if Southerly, for the Iles of Bayon. We lay with contrary windes about that place and the Rocke, till the Southerly winde preuailing carried vs to Bayon: among whom was Sir Henry Norris in the Ayde; who had a purpose (if the Admirals had not come in) with some 500. men out of them all to haue landed, and attempted the taking of Vigo. The rest of the fleet held with generall Drake, who though he were two dayes before put vpon those Ilands, cast off againe to Sea for the Azores: but remembring how vnprouided he was for that iourney, and seeing that he had lost company of his great ships, returned for Bayon, and came in there that night in the euening, where hee passed vp the Riuer more then a mile aboue Vigo.

Bayon.

The next morning wee landed as many as were able to fight, which were not in the whole aboue two thousand men (for in the seuenteene dayes we continued on boord wee had cast many many of our men ouer-boord) with which number the Colonell generall marched to the Towne of Vigo, neere the which when hee approached, he sent Captaine Anthony Wingfield with a troupe of shot to enter one side of the same, who found vpon euery streetes end a strong barricade, but altogether abandoned; for hauing entred the Towne, he found but one man therein, but might see them making way before him to Bayon. On the other side the Towne entred Generall Drake with Captaine Richard Wingfield, whose approach on that side (I thinke) made them leaue the places they had so artificially made for defence: there were also certaine ships sent with the Vice-admirall to lye close before the Towne, to beate vpon the same with their artillery.

Vigo taken.

In the afternoone were sent three hundred vnder the conduct of Captaine Petuin and Captaine Henry Powre, to burne another Village betwixt that and Bayon, called Borsis, and as much of the Countrie as the day would giue them leaue to doe; which was a very pleasant rich Valley: but they burnt it all, houses and corne, as did others on the other side of the Town, both that and the next day, so as the Countrey was spoiled seuen or eight miles in length. There was found great store of Wine in the Town, but not any thing else: for the other daies warning of the ships that came first in, gaue them a respit to carry all away.

Borsis burned.

The next morning by breake of the day the Colonell generall (who in the absence of the Generals that were on boord their ships, commanded that night on shoare) caused all our Companies to be drawne out of the Towne, and sent in two troupes to put fire in euery house of the same: which done, we imbarked againe. This day there were certaine Mariners which (without any direction) put themselues on shoare, on the contrary side of the Riuer from vs for pillage.

Vigo burned.

The same day the Generals seeing what weake estate our Army was drawne into by sicknes, determined to man and victuall twenty of the best ships for the Ilands of Azores, with Generall Drake, to see if he could meete with the Indian Fleet, and Generall Norris to returne home with the rest: And for the shifting of men and victuals accordingly, purposed the next morning to fall downe to the Ilands of Bayon againe, and to remaine there that day. But Generall Drake, according to their appointment, being vnder sale neuer stroke at the Ilands, but put straight to Sea: whom all the Fleet followed saue three and thirty, which being in the Riuer further then he, and at the entrance of the same, finding the winde and tide too hard against them, were inforced to cast ancre there for that night; amongst whom, by good fortune, was the Foresight, and in her Sir Edward Norris. And the night following, Generall Norris being driuen from the rest of the Fleet by a great storme (for all that day was the greatest storme we had all the time we were out) came againe into the Ilands, but not without great perill, he being forced to turne to a Spanish Fisher-man (who was taken two dayes before at Sea) to bring him in.

The next morning he called a counsell of as many as he found there, holding the purpose hee had concluded with Sir Francis Drake the day before, and directed all their courses for England, tarrying there all that day to water and helpe such with victuall, as were left in wonderfull distresse by hauing the victuals that came last, carried away the day before to Sea.

Their returne to Plimmouth.

The next day he set saile, and the tenth day after, (which was the second of July) came into Plimmouth, where he found Sir Francis Drake and all the Queenes ships, with many of the others but not all; for the Fleete was dispersed into other harbours, some led by a desire of returning from whence they came, and some being possessed of the hulkes, fought other Ports from their Generals eye, where they might make their priuate commoditie of them, as they haue done to their great aduantage. Presently vpon their arriuall there, the Generals dissolued all the armie saue eight companies, which are yet held together, giuing euery Souldier fiue shillings in money, and the armes he bare to make money of, which was more then could by any meanes be due vnto them; for they were not in seruice three moneths, in which time they had their victuals, which no man will value at lesse then halfe their pay, for such is the allowance in her Maiesties ships to her Mariners, so as there remained but ten shillings a moneth to be paid, for which there was not any priuate man but had apparell and furniture to his owne vse, so as euery common Souldier discharged, receiued more in money, victuals, apparell, and furniture, then his pay did amount vnto.

CHAP. XIII.

A briefe and true report of the Honorable Voyage vnto Cadiz, 1596. of the ouerthrow of the Kings Fleete, and of the winning of the Citie, with other accidents, gathered out of METERANVS, Master HACKLVYT * and others.

*M. Hackluit had published the large report of this Voyage written byone emploied therin: out of which I haue taken that which serued our purpose.

AFter that Callis had beene taken by Cardinall Albert, Archduke of Austria, which afterwards by Papall dispensation married the Lady Isabella Eugenia Clara Infanta, who yet gouerneth the Belgians which acknowledge the Spaniard, Queene Elizabeth thought it fitter to inuade the Spaniard at home, then to expect his forces here. The said Cardinall (and Archduke of Austria) had planted his vnexpected sedge before Callis, and begun his vnwelcome battery on Wednesday the 17. of April 1596. and the Towne desired truce for foure and twenty houres, which was reiected, whereupon they yeelded themselues presently vpon condition of life and goods saued, and sixe dayes truce to be giuen them, with liberty either to stay in the Citie, or to goe to the Castle; and if the King of Nauarre (Henry the fourth, the French King) did not in that space relieue them, they were to yeelde the Castle. Most of them betooke themselues to the Castle, and left their empty houses to the Conquerours.

The night before the truce expired, they began to shoot at the Spaniards, who had now made so fatall preparations, that the next day, Aprill 24. before noone they had beaten downe the wals and entered, the Gouernour of the Towne and diuers others being slaine. Queene Elizabeth meane while had prepared aide, and the Souldiers and Ships at Leigh in Essex, were detained by the windes, which then were Easterly, and instead of carrying the English thither, brought hither the terrible thunders of the Spanish Ordnance; insomuch, that I haue heard that they shooke the looser glasse out of the windowes in Dower and filled the shoares of Essex & Kent with the hideous reports of Calis her vnmoldable ruine. And thus in so short time the Cardinall won that ancient Port, by Strabo called Itium, by Ptolomey Gesforiacum (as Meteranus collecteth) which had cost the English eleuen moneths siedge, before they, vnder Edward the third, tooke it, An. 1346. They held it 200. yeers; at which time Francis Duke of Guise, in the vnhappy daies of Queen Mary, and by reason of her vnluckie ioyning with the Spaniards in their warres against the French, recouered it in a few dayes vnlooked for battery to the French, and therewith tooke * not that Towne alone, but the ioy of life also from that vnfortunate Queene; both which seeming disasters were the price of Englands faire purchases, both gaine and liberty in the dispersing of that Spanish cloud which from the time of the match had houered ouer vs, and of the concomitant Antichristian Papall Mists, which was a smoake from the bottomlesse pit to them which receiued it, and a fire to them which refused it of what degree soeuer: and in that as throwes of a grieuous trauell they brought forth a Virgin, both Truth to the Church, and Queene to the State; the one a fruitfull Mother to the soules, the other to the wealth, honour, domesticke peace, forraine victories, and Nauall glorie of the English Nation. This renowned Queene, eight and thirty yeeres after, vnable to alter that decree of the windes which now seemed themselues, and forced Calis, to become Spanish; would try their windy fidelity in another expedition, and prepared a strong Fleet to inuade the Spanish coast: The charge whereof she committed to the Lord Robert Earle of Essex, and the Lord Charles Howard Lord high Admirall of England, who came vnto Plymmouth (about the beginning of May 1596.) being there accompanied with diuers other noble Peeres, as the Earle of Sussex, the Lord Thomas Howard, the Lord Herbert, the Lord Warden Sir Walter Raleigh: the Lord Marshall Sir Francis Vere: the Lord Burk, Don Christopher yong Prince of Portugall, yong Count Lodowick of Nassau, and the Admirall of the Hollanders, Sir Iohn Vanderford: besides many other most worthy Knights and Gentlemen of great worth attending vpon this most honorable Action: It pleased them, there to make their abode for the time of that moneth, aswell for the new furnishing and reuictualing of her Maiesties Royall Nauie: as also for the expecting of some other ships, which were to come from diuers places of the Realme, and were as yet wanting.

*Q. Mary said before her death, that if they opened her, they should finde Calis in her heart.

Before their departure from Plymmouth, it pleased their Lordships to publish in Print, and make knowne to all the world, especially to such as it concerned, and that both in the Latine, French, Dutch, English, and Spanish tongue, what were the true, iust, and vrgent causes, that at this time prouoked her Maiestie to vndertake the preparing and setting forth of this so great a Nauie, namely the King of Spaines preparations against her, who had before whiles hee treated of peace, Anno 1588. prepared to inuade her coast, and now also to that purpose daily encreased his Nauie. If therefore any should furnish the Spaniard with munition and prouisions, they should expect what force could doe: for all others of whatsoeuer Nation they aduised them to forsake the Spanish and Portugall Ports, or to ioyne with the English for their owne security, they hauing no quarrell in this designe but against the Spaniard.

Thus

Thus then, all things being in a very good order and well appointed, the most holy name of our Omnipotent God being most religiously and deuoutly called vpon, and his blessed and sacred Communion being diuers times most reuerently and publikely celebrated: being furnished with one hundred and fiftie good saile of ships, or thereabout: In the name of the most high and euerliuing God: the first day of Iune they embarked themselues, weighed Ancre, and hoysed vp saile, and put to Sea onward their iourney from the Sownds of Plymmouth, to shew her Maiesties religious intendments in this exploit. I haue thought good to adde here a Prayer made by her selfe (as was reported) and vsed, as it was fitted, for that designe.

MOst Omnipotent maker and guide of all our worlds masse, that onely searchest and fadomest the bottome of all our hearts conceits, and in them seest the true originals of all our actions intended: thou that by thy foresight doest truely discerne, how no malice of reuenge, nor quittance of iniurie, nor desire of bloudshed, nor greedinesse of lucre hath bred the resolution of our now set out Army, but a heedefull care, and wary watch, that no neglect of foes, nor ouer-suretie of harme might breede either danger to vs, or glory to them: these being the grounds wherewith thou doest ensure the minde, we humbly beseech thee with bended knees, prosper the worke, and with best forewindes guide the iourney, speede the victory, and make the returne the aduancement of thy glory, the triumph of their fame, and surety to the Realme, with the least losse of the English blood. To these deuout petitions Lord giue thou thy blessed grant.

The ninth of the same moneth comming something neere to the North Cape, in a manner in the same altitude, or not much differing, which was about 43. degrees, and something more, yet bearing so, as it was impossible to be descried from the land. There it pleased the Lords to call a select Councell, which was alwaies done by hanging out of a Flagge of the Armes of England, and shooting off a great warning peece. Of this select or priuie Counsell, were no moe then these: The two Lords Generall, the Lord Thomas Howard, the Lord Warden Sir Walter Raleigh, the Lord Marshall Sir Francis Vere, Sir George Cary Master of the Ordnance, Sir Coniers Clifford, and Sir Anthony Ashley, Clarke of the said Counsell. And when it pleased the Lords Generall to call a common Counsell (as oftentimes they did vpon weighty matters best knowne to their honours) then they would cause another kinde of Flag to be hanged out, which was the red Crosse of S. George, and was very easie to be discerned from the other that appertained onely to the select Counsell, and so often as this Flag of S. George was hanged out, then came all the Masters and Captaines of all the ships, whose opinions were to be demanded, in such matters as appertained vnto the said select Counsell. It was presently concluded, that our course in sailing should forthwith be altered, and that we should beare more into the West, for some purposes to them best knowne.

At that instant many Letters of instructions were addressed and sent to euery particular Master and Captaine of the Ships: What the contents of those Letters of instructions were, it was not as yet knowne vnto any, neither was it held meete to be enquired or knowne of any of vs. But vnder the titles and superscriptions of euery mans particuler Letter their words were endorsed. Open not these Letters on paine of your liues, vnlesse we chance to be scattered by tempest, and in that case open them, and execute the contents thereof: but if by mishap you fall into your enemies hand, then in any case cast them into the Sea, sealed as they are. It should seeme that these Letters did containe in them the principall place and meaning of this entended action, which was hitherto by their deepe foresights kept so secret, as no man to my knowledge either did or could so much as suspect it, more then themselues, who had the onely managing thereof.

All this while, our ships, God be thanked, kept in a most excellent good order, being deuided into fiue squadrons: that is to say, The Earle of Essex, the Lord Admirall, the Lord Thomas Howard, the Lord Warden Sir Walter Raleigh, and the Admirall of the Hollanders. All which squadrons, albeit they did euery day separate themselues of purpose, by the distance of certaine leagues, as well to looke out for such ships as were happily vnder saile, as also for the better procuring of Sea-roome: yet alwayes commonly either that day, or the next day, toward euening, they came all together, with friendly salutations and gratulations one to another, which they tearme by the name of Hayling: a ceremonie done solemnly, and in very good order, with sound of Trumpets and noise of cheerefull voyces: and in such sort performed as was no small encouragement one to the other, beside a true report of all such accidents as had happened in their squadrons.

Hitherto, as I said, our iourney was most prosperous, and all our ships in very good plight, more then that the Mary Rose, by some mischance, either sprang or spent her foreyard, and two dayes after Sir Robert Crosse had in a manner the like mischance.

French and Flemming take and dismissed.

Now being thus betweene the North Cape, and Cape S. Vincent, and yet keeping such a course a loofe, that by no meanes, those from the shoare might be able to descrie vs: The tenth of Iune, a French Barke, and a Flemming comming from the coast of Barbaria were brought in by some of our our company: but they were both of them very honorably and well vied by the Lords Generall, and so after a few dayes tarrying, were peaceably sent away, after that they had conferred with them about such matters, as was thought good in their honorable wisedomes. The twelfth of the same moneth, Sir Richard Lewison Knight, assisted with Sir Christopher Blunt, fought with three Hamburgers, and in that fight slew two of them, and hurt eleuen, and in the end brought them all three in. Hamburgers taken.

The next day after, Sir Richard Weston meeting with a Flemming, who refused to vaile his foretop, with the like good courage and resolution, attempted to bring him in. The fight continued very hot betweene them, for a good space: in the end, the Dutch, wherein the said Sir Richard was, had her forebeake strooken off: and hauing spent before in fight the one side of her tire of Ordnance, while she prepared to cast about, and to bestow on him the other side, in the meane time the Flemming taking his opportunitie, did get almost halfe a league from him: and so for that time made his escape. And yet the next day after, the said Flemming being in a manner got to the very mouth of the River vp to Lisbon, was taken, and brought in by Master Dorrell, being Captaine of the Iohn and Francis of London.

The 13. 14. and 15. dayes, certaine little straggling Carauels were taken by certaine of the Fleete, and in one of them a yong beggerly Fryer vtterly vnlearned, with a great packet of Letters for Lisbon. Leiters taken

The 18. day early in the morning we tooke an Irishman, and he came directly from Cadiz, hauing beene there but the day before at twelue of the clocke at high noone. This man being examined, told truely that there was now great store of shipping at Cadiz, and with them eighteene or nineteene Gallies in a readinesse, and that among those ships there were diuers of the Kings best: and namely, that the Philip of Spaine was amongst them, but what their intent was, wee could not tell. This man was commanded also to giue his attendance. The 20. of June, being Sunday, wee came before Cadiz, very early in the morning, and in all this time as yet, the whole Nauie had not lost either by sickneſſe or by any other manner of waies six men to my knowledge. Irishmans intelligence.

Thus then I say, being all in good plight and strong, the 20. of June we came to Cadiz, and there very early in the morning presented our selues before the Towne, riding about a league or something lesse, from it. The Sea at that instant went marueilous high, and the winde was exceeding large. Notwithstanding, a Counsell being called, our Lords Generall forthwith attempted with all expedition to land some certaine Companies of their men at the West side of the Towne, by certaine long Boats, light horsemen, Pinnaces, & Barges made for the purpose, but could not compasse it, and in the attempting thereof, they chanced to sinke one of their Barges, with some fourescore good souldiers well appointed in her, and yet by good hap and great care, the men were all saued excepting eight. And therefore they were constrained to put off their landing till another more conuenient time. They arriue at Cadiz. Some which professe martiall knowledg blame the not landing the first day, and say the weather serued; but the scruple of sunday and other pretences lost a million of wealth.

That morning very timely, there lighted a very faire Doue vpon the maine yard of the Lord Admirals ship, and there she sat very quietly for the space of three or foure houres. And as at our very first comming to Cadiz this chanced; so likewise on the very last day of our departing from the said Towne, another Doue presented her selfe in the selfe same order into the same ships, and presently grew wonderfull tame and familiar to vs all, and did so still keepe vs company, euen till our arriuall here in England. Doues lighting

We no sooner presented our selues, but presently a goodly sort of tall Spanish Ships came out of the mouth of the Bay of Cadiz, the Gallies accompanying them in fit & good order, and so placed as all of them might well succour each other; and therewithall keepe themselues very close to their Towne, the Castle, and the Forts, for their better guard and defence, abiding there still, and expecting our further determination. All that day passed, being very rough and boisterous, and little or nothing could be done, more then that about the euening there passed some friendly and kinde salutations sent one from the other in warlike manner, by discharging certaine great Peeces.

On monday morning being the 21. day, the winde and weather being become moderate and fauourable, betweene fiue and six of the clocke in the morning, our ships in the name of the Almighty God, and in defence of the honour of England, without any further delay, with all speed, courage and alacritie, did set vpon the Spanish ships, being then vnder saile, and making out of the mouth of the Bay of Cadiz, vpon vvard Puerto de Santa Maria or Gratiosa, being in number 59. tall ships, with 19. or 20. Gallies attending vpon them, for their good order, and reasonable distance as they might still annoy vs, and alwaies relieue themselues interchangeably: hauing likewise the Castle, Forts, and Towne, continually to assist them and theirs, and alwayes ready to play vpon vs and ours. The Spanish Fleete.

In most mens opinions it seemed that the enemy had a wonderfull aduantage of vs, all circumstances being well weighed, but especially the straightnesse of the place, and the naturall forme and situation of the Bay it selfe, being rightly considered. For albeit the very Bay it selfe is very large and exceeding beautifull, so that from Cadiz to Port S. Mary, is some six or seuen English miles miles ouer or there abouts, yet be there many rockes, shelues, sands, and shallowes in it, so that the very channell and place for sea roome, is not aboue two or three miles, yea, and in some places not so much, for the ships of any great burthen to make way in, but that they must either be set on ground, or else constrained to run foule one on another. All this notwithstanding, with great and inuincible courage, the Lords generall presently set vpon them, and sorting out some such conuenient ships, as to their honorable wisedomes seemed fittest for that times seruice, they were driuen to take some other course then before had beene by them entended. Wherefore vpon a graue consultation had by a select counsell, they concluded that the Vice-admirall, the Lord Thomas Howard, in the Non Pareille for that time, and the Reare Admirall Sir Walter Raleigh in the Warspight, associated with Sir Francis Vere the Lord Marshall in the Rainbow, Sir George Carey Master of the Ordnance, in the Mary Rose, Sir Robert Southwell in the Lyon; hauing with them some of the Ships of London, and some of the Dutch squadron of reasonable burthen, should lead the dance, and giue the onset, and that the two most noble Lords generall with some others of their companies, should in their conuenient time and order, second the maine battell. The fight being begun and growne very hot, the Lord generall the Earle of Essex, being on Port Saint Mary side, vpon a sudden and vnlooked for of others, thrust himselfe among the formost into the maine battell. The other most honorable Lord generall vnderstanding the most noble Earle to be in fight among them, and perceiuing by the Master of his ship, the Arke royall, that for lacke of water, it was not possible, that he might put any neerer, without further delay, called presently for his Pinnace, and in the same Pinnace put himselfe, and his honorable son Lord William Howard, aboord the Honor de la mer, & there remained in the fight till the battell was ended. The fight was very terrible on all sides, and so continued doubtfull till about one or two of the clocke in the afternoone: about which time the Philip, whom in very truth, they had all most fancie vnto, began to yeelde and giue ouer, her men that remained aliue shifting for themselues as they were able, and swimming and running ashoare with all the haste that they could possibly, and therewithall, at the very same instant themselues fired their ship, and so left her, and presently thereupon a great Argosie, with anorher mighty great ship, fired themselues in the like manner. Immediatly hereupon, the residue of the ships ran themselues on ground as far from vs as they could, thereby purchased their owne safetie, or rather breathing space for the time. Of them all, two faire ships onely were boorded and taken by our men with most part of their furniture in them, the one called S. Matthew, a ship by estimation of some twelue hundred tun, and the other S. Andrew, being a ship of not much lesser burthen. The Gallies, seeing this sodaine great victorious ouerthrow, made all the haste they could toward the Bridge called Puente de Suaço, and there shrowded themselues in such sort as our ships could not by any meanes possible come nigh them for lacke of water.

The fight betwixt the two Fleetes.

Spanish losse.

Two Apostles forced to preach English.

The Spanish ships in all were fifty nine; and as I said, all tall ships, and very richly furnished and well appointed, whereof some of them were bound for the Indies, and other fraighted and furnished for Lisbon, as themselues affirme: and had we not come that very time that we did, wee had certainly mist of them all.

Of what great wealth and riches these ships were, that I leaue to other mens iudgement and report, but sure I am, that themselues offered two millions and a halfe of ducats for the redemption of the goods and riches that were in them: which offer of theirs, albeit it was accepted of the Lords generall, and should haue beene receiued, yet we were defeated of it, as hereafter shall be more at large declared.

In all this cruell terrible fight, there were not either slaine or hurt by any manner of meanes many aboue the number of 100. of our men; notwithstanding diuers of our ships were many times shot thorow and thorow: yea and some of them no lesse then two and twenty times, as I was enformed by credible report of the Captaines and Masters themselues. I know not of any other hurt done, saue onely that Sir Robert Southwell, who alwayes shewed himselfe a most valiant resolute knight in all this action, making a little too much haste with his Pinnace to boord the Philip, had there his said Pinnace burnt with the Philip at the same instant, and yet by good care and diligence his men were saued. One other mischance hapned thus: One of the Flemmings Flie-boats, who had in all the conflict before, carried her selfe very well and valiantly, about ten of the clocke while the fight continued sharpest, chanced by great negligence and misfortune, to be fired and blown vp by his owne powder, who could not haue any fewer in him, then one hundred fighting men by all supposall, and so in the very twinkling of an eye, both ship and men were all cast away, excepting seuen or eight, which by very good fortune, and great care and diligence of some of the other ships were saued.

Flemmish mischance.

Immediately vpon this notable victory, without any further stay in all the world, the Lord generall the Earle of Essex put to shore, & landed about 3000. shot and pikemen: of the which number the one halfe was presently dispatched to the bridge Puente de Suaço, vnder the conduct of Sir Christopher Blunt, Sir Conyers Clifford, and Sir Thomas Gerard: with the other halfe, being about fifteene hundred, the most noble Earle of Essex himselfe, being accompanied with diuers other honorable Lords, namely the Earle of Sussex, the Lord Herbert, the Lord Burk, Count Lodowicke,

The English land.

Digitized by Google

uick of Nassaw, the Lord Marshall Sir Francis Vere, with all expedition possible marched on foote toward the towne of Cadiz, which was about three English miles march. That time of the day was very hot and faint, and the way was all of dry deepe sliding sand in a manner, and beside that, very vneuen, and by that meanes so tiresome and painfull as might be. Bad way. The enemie hauing reasonable companie both of horse and footemen, stood in a readinesse some good distance without the towne to welcome vs, and to encounter the Lord Generall. But the most famous Earle with his valiant Troopes, rather running indeede in good order, then marching, hastened on them with such vnspeakeable courage and celeritie, as within one houres space and lesse, the horsemen were all discomfited and put to flight, their leader being strooken downe at the very first encounter; whereat the footemen being wonderfully dismaied and astonished at the vnexpected manner of the Englishmens kinde of such fierce and resolute fight, retyred themselues with all the speede possible that they could, to recouer themselues into the Towne againe. Which being done by them, with farre swifter legges then manly courage, our men were enforced to scale the wals: which thing in very deede, although it was not without great danger and difficultie to be performed: yet such was the inuincible resolution, and the wonderfull dexteritie of the English, that in one halfe houre or thereabout, the enemy was repulsed, and the towne wall possessed, by the noble Earle himselfe, being in all this action, either the very first man, or else in a manner ioined with the first. The English enter the town

The Town wals being then possessed, and the English Ensigne being there displaied vpon them, with all speede possible they proceeded on to march through the Towne, making still their way with sword and shot so well as they could, being still fought withall at euerie turne. The noble Earle was seconded by the noble Lord Admirall in person, who was accompanied with the noble Lord Thomas Howard, the most worthy Gentleman his Sonne (after Lord Howard) Sir Robert Southwell, Sir Richard Lewison, and with diuers other Gentlemen, his Lordships followers of good account: his Colours being aduanced by that valiant resolute Gentleman, Sir Edward Hobby Knight. And thus he likewise marching with all possible speede on foote, notwithstanding his L. many yeeres *, the intolerable heate for the time, and the ouertiring tedious deepe sands, with other many impediments: Yet in good time, ioyned himselfe with the Earle and his companies, and giue them the strongest, and best assistance that he could. * I haue bin told by some of great worth then in this action, that they heard the Lord Admirall affirme that he was 68. yeers old, or between that and 70. who yet liueth 1624. crowned with siluer haires and golden raies of glorious acts.

Thus then the two Lords Generall with their companies being ioined together, and proceeding so farre as the market place, there they were hotly encountered, where and at what time, that worthy famous Knight Sir Iohn Winkfield, being sore wounded before on the thigh, at the very entring of the Towne, and yet for all that no whit respecting himselfe, being carried away with the care he had to encourage and direct his Company, was with the shot of a Musket in the head most vnfortunately slaine.

And thus before eight of the clocke that night were these two most noble Lords General, Masters of the market place, the forts, and the whole Towne and all, onely the Castle as yet holding out, and from time to time as they could, stil annoying them with seuen battering peeces. By this time night began to grow on, and a kinde of peace or intermission was obtained by them of the Castle: to whom the Lords Generall had signified, that vnlesse before the next day in the morning they would absolutely render themselues, they should looke for no mercie, but should euery one be put to the sword: vpon which message they tooke deliberation that night: but in the morning before breake of day they hanged out their flag of truce, and so without any further composition did yeelde themselues absolutely to their mercie, and deliuered vp the Castle. The Castle deliuered.

And yet notwithstanding all this, in the night time while they had this respite to pause and deliberate about the peacemaking, there were diuers great and sodaine alarms giuen: which did breede some great outrages and disorder in the Towne. At euery which alaram, the two Lords Generall shewed themselues marueilous ready and forward.

These things being done, and this surrender being made, present Proclamation was published, that the fury now being past, all men should surcease from all manner of bloud and cruell dealing, and that there should no kinde of violence or hard vsage be offered to any, either man, woman, or childe, vpon paine of death: permitting the spoyle of so much of the Towne as was by them thought meete, to the common souldiers for some certaine daies. This honorable and mercifull Edict I am sure was streightly and religiously obserued of the English: but how well it was kept by the Dutch, I will neither affirme, nor yet denie. For I perceiue betweene them and the Spaniards there is an implacable hartburning, and therefore as soone as the Dutch squadron was espied in the fight, immediately thereupon both they of Sluil and Saint Lucar, and also some of some other places did not onely arrest all such Dutch ships, as dealt with them friendly by the way of trafficke and merchandise, and so confiscated their goods, but also imprisoned the Merchants and owners of the same, and as the report goeth, did intreat many of them with extreame cruelty thereupon.

In the meane while, the very next day, being the two and twentie day of Iune, all the Spanish ships which were left on ground in the Bay of Cadiz, where the great ouerthrow had beene but the day before, were by the Spaniards themselues there set on fire, and so from that time Spaniards fire their ships.

Digitized by Google

forward they neuer left burning of them, till euery one of them, goods and all, as far as we know were burnt and conſumed: This their doing was much maruelled at of vs. Not long after the ſame time (three dayes as I remember) the gallies that were run on ground, did quit themſelues alſo out of that place, and by the Bridge of the Iland called Puente de Suaço, made their way round about the ſame Iland, and ſo by putting themſelues to the maine Sea, eſcaped to a towne called Rotta, not farre off, but ſomething vp towards the towne of Saint Lucars, and there purchaſed their ſafety by that meanes. Thus was this notable victory, as well by Sea as by Land, both begun and in effect performed, within the compaſſe, in a manner, of foureteene houres: a thing in truth ſo ſtrange and admirable, as in my iudgement will rather be wondred at then beleeued of poſteritie. And if euer any notable exploit in any age was comparable to Ceſars Veni, Vidi, Vici, certainly in my poore opinion it was this.

Cadiz deſcribed

The Towne of it ſelfe was a very beautifull towne, and a large, as being the chiefe See of the Biſhop there, and hauing a good Cathedrall Church in it, with a right goodly Abbey, a Nunnery, and an exceeding fine Colledge of the Ieſuites, and was by naturall ſituation, as alſo by very good fortification, very ſtrong, and tenable enough in all mens opinions of the better iudgement. Their building was all of a kinde of hard ſtone, euen from the very foundation to the top, and euery houſe was in a manner a kinde of a Fort or Caſtle, altogether flat-roofed in the top, after the Turkiſh manner, ſo that many men together, and that at eaſe, might walke thereon: hauing vpon the houſe top, great heapes of weighty ſtones piled vp in ſuch good order, as they were ready to be throwne downe by euery woman moſt eaſily vpon ſuch as paſſed by, and the ſtreetes for the moſt part ſo exceeding narrow (I think to auoide the intollerable great heat of the Sun) as but two men or three at the moſt together, can in any reaſonable ſort march thorow them, no ſtreete being broader commonly then I ſuppoſe Watling ſtreete in London to be. The towne is altogether without glaſſe, excepting the Churches, yet with faire comely windowes, and with faire grates of Iron to them, and haue very large folding leaues of wainſcot, or the like. It hath very few Chimnies in it, or almoſt none at all: it may be ſome one chimney in ſome one or other of the lower out-roomes of leaſt account, ſeruing for ſome neceſſary vſes, either to waſh in, or the like, or elſe, now and then perchance for the dreſſing of a diſh of meate, hauing, as it ſhould ſeeme vnto me, alwayes a greater care and reſpect how to keepe themſelues from all kinde of great heate, the how to prouide for any ſtore of great roſte. It had in it, by report of them that ſhould know beſt it, ſome foure thouſand and moe, of very good able fighting men, and ſixe hundred horſemen at the leaſt. No queſtion but that they were well furniſhed of all things appertaining thereunto eſpecially ſo many good ſhips lying there, and being ſo well ſtored with all manner of munition, ſhot, and powder, as they were.

My Sexton T. Rowly, yet liuing, hath often told me that he had the rifling of a Iewellers or Goldſmiths houſe, and in his returne gaue and ſold for toies many Stones (which by his deſcription ſeemed Rubies) of great bignes whereof he had his hatfull, which proued not worth an angel to his ignorant ſimplicity, neuer ordained to be rich.

Of what wealth this towne ſhould be, I am not able to reſolue the asker; but as it ſhould appeare by the great pillage by the common Souldiers, and ſome Marriners too, and by the goodly furnitures, that were defaced by the baſer people, and thereby vtterly loſt and ſpoiled, as not worth the carrying away; and by the ouer great plenty of Wine, Oyle, Almonds, Oliues, Raiſins, Spices, and other ſuch Grocery wares, that by the intemperate diſorder of ſome of the raſher ſort were knockt out, and lay trampled vnder feet, in euery common high way, it ſhould appeare that it was of ſome very mighty great wealth to the firſt owners, though perchance not of any ſuch great commodity to the laſt ſubduers, for that I iudge that the better part was moſt riotouſly and intemperately ſpent and conſumed.

The Wedneſday, Thurſday, and Friday following, the Lords Generall ſpent in counſell about the diſpoſing of all matters, as well touching the towne and priſoners, as alſo concerning all other matters, thought meete of them in their honourable wiſdomes, and in all that meane while did ſhew ſuch honourable bounty and mercy, as is not able to be expreſſed. For not onely the liues of euery one were ſpared, but alſo there was an eſpeciall care had, that all the Religious, as well men as women, ſhould be well and fauourably intreated, whom freely without any manner of ranſome or other moleſtation, they cauſed to be ſafely tranſported ouer to Port Saint Mary, a Towne in a manner as faire as Cadiz: but at that time, as the caſe did ſtand, certainely knowne to be of no wealth in the world, and it was ſome ſixe or ſeuen miles diſtant ouer againſt Cadiz, in a manner as Paules is againſt Southwarke, on the other ſide of the Bay, in a part of Andaluzia, ſubiect to the territorie of the Duke de Medina Sidonia. Moreouer, at the ſame inſtant they did appoint that worthy Knight Sir Amias Preſton, and ſome others in ſome conuenient Barkes, to tranſport ouer to the ſaid Towne ſafely and in good order, a hundred or moe of the better ſort of ancient gentlewomen, and merchants wiues, who were ſuffered to put vpon themſelues, ſome of them two, yea, ſome three ſuites Apparell, with ſome conuenient quantitie of many Iewels, Chaines, and other ornaments belonging to their eſtate and degree.

Sir Iohn Winkfield buried.

Vpon Saturday, being the ſix and twentieth, Sir Iohn Winkfield knight was buried, in honourable and warlike manner, ſo farre forth as the circumſtances of that time and place could permit. At whoſe funerals the Nauie diſcharged a great part of their Ordnance, in ſuch order, as was thought meete and conuenient by the Lords Generals command. The ſeuen and twenty day being Sunday, in the Abbey the diuine Seruice was had, and a learned Sermon was made there by one one Master Hopkins, the right honourable Earle of Essex his Preacher, a man of good learning and graue vtterance, and euen there the same day; something before the Sermon was made, these worthy Gentlemen following were Knighted by the Lord Generall. And here I am to signifie by the way, that two of these were Knighted three or foure daies before, and some three or foure more were Knighted after that time, vpon certaine occasions: but yet I hold it best (and I trust without offence) to recite their names in this place altogether.

Digitized by Google

June 21. 22

Sir Samuel Bagnal.
Sir Arthur Savages.
The Earle of Sussex.
The Lord Herbert.
The Lord Burke.
Count Ladowick.
Sir William Howard.
Sir George D'Euereux.
Sir Henry Nevel.
Sir Edmund Rich.
Sir Richard Lewes.
Sir Peter Egemont.
Sir Anthonie Ashley.
Sir Henry Leuland.
Sir Richard Lewson.
Sir Horatio Vere.
Sir Arthur Throckmorton.
Sir Miles Corbet.
Sir Edward Conway.
Sir Oliuer Lambert.
Sir Anthony Cooke.
Sir Iohn Townesend.
Sir Christopher Heydon.
Sir Francis Popham.
Sir Philip Woodhouse.
Sir Alexander Clifford.
Sir Maurice Barkley.
Sir Charles Blunt.
Sir George Gifford.
Sir Robert Crosse.
Sir Iames Escudemer.
Sir Vrian Leigh.
Sir Iohn Leigh, alias Lee.
Sir Richard Wilton.
Sir Richard Wainman.
Sir Iames Wootton.
Sir Richard Ruddal.
Sir Robert Mansfield.
Sir William Maunson.
Sir Iohn Bowler.
Sir Edward Baines.
Sir Humfrey Drewel.
Sir Amias Preston.
Sir Robert Remington.
Sir Iohn Buck.
Sir Iohn Morgan.
Sir Iohn Aldridge.
Sir Iohn Asshindon.
Sir Mathew Browne.
Sir Iohn Alton.
Sir Thomas Gates.
Sir Gilly Merricke.
Sir Thomas Smith.
Sir William Pooley.
Sir Thomas Palmer.
Sir Iohn Stafford.
Sir Robert Loued.
Sir Iohn Gylbert.
Sir William Harris.
Sir Iohn Gray.
Don Christ. Prince of Portugall.
Sir Iohn Vanderfoord, Admirall of the Hollanders.
Sir Robert Dudley. 8. August.

Being in Cadiz, attending vpon my most honorable good Lord, I talked with certaine of the Religious men, such as I found learned, whereof indeede there were some, though not very many; I talked also with the Bishop of Cusco there, a graue aged comely man, and being of late chosen to that Bishopricke, he was as then to haue gone to the Indies, had not we then taken him prisoner, and so staied his iourney for that time.

It pleased the Lords generall to deale exceeding fauourably with this said Bishop of Cusco, for it was their good pleasure to giue him his free passage without any ransome, and therewithall to let him to vnderstand, that they came not to deale with Church-men, or vnarmed men, or with men of peace, weaklings and children, neither was it any part of their meaning to make such a voyage for gold, siluer, or any other their wealth and riches, &c. But that their onely comming was to meet with their dishonorable practises, and manifold iniuries, and to deale with men of war and valour, for the defence of the true honour of England, and to let them to vnderstand, that whensoeuer they attempted any base-conceited and dishonorable practise to their soueraigne Queen, their Mistresse, that it should be reuenged to the vttermost, &c.

In this meane space, while the Lords generall continued at Cadiz, there came to them certaine poore wretched Turks, to the number of eight and thirty, that had bin a long time gally-slaues, and either at the very time of the fight by sea, or else immediately thereupon, taking the opportunity, did then make their escape, and did swim to land; yeelding themselues to the mercy of their most honorable Lordships. It pleased them with all speede to apparell them, and to furnish them with mony, and all other necessaries, and to bestow on them a Barke, and a Pilot, to see them freely and safely conueied into Barbary.

The eight and twenty day being Monday, the Lord Admirall came aboord the Ark againe, minding there to remaine for a space, as indeede he did, and vpon the aduice of his Phisitian, to deale something in phisicke, for that his Lordship found his body something out of frame. At that time it pleased his Lordship to write certaine letters to the Duke of Medina Sidonia, for the deliuerance of English Captiues, who were remaining in the Gallies. For by this time, it was reported, that the said Duke was come downe in person with some power, and that he was either at Port Saint Mary, or else at Rotta, or thereabout. His Lordship did indite the Letters himselfe, but his pleasure was, they should be turned into Latine by another: and so to be sent (as indeede they were) in the Latine tongue vnto the Duke.

The next day after, being the fourth of Iuly, the Lords generall caused the towne of Cadiz to be set on fire, and rased and defaced so much as they could; the faire Cathedrall Church, and the Religious houses onely being spared, and left vnblemished. And with the Towne all such prouision, for shipping, and other things, as were seruiceable for the Realmes vse, and yet were not Cadiz fired.

either ſo conuenient for vs to be carried away, as eſteuch as we ſtood no whit at all in neede of, were likewiſe at the ſame inſtant conſumed with fire. And preſently thereupon, their Lordſhips, with as conuenient ſpeede as they could, and the whole army in ſuch order and leiſure, as they thought beſt, came aboord.

Effect of the L. Admirall his letters.

The next day being the firſt of Iuly, the Lords generall with all the army being vnder ſaile, and now making for England, and but as yet paſſing the very mouth of the Bay of Cadiz, a Galley full of Engliſh priſoners, with a flag of truce, met vs from Rotta, ſent by the Duke of Medina Sidonia, and ſent as it ſhould ſeeme, one day later then his promiſe: but yet their flag being either not big enough, or not well placed in the Galley, or not well diſcerned of our men, or by what other miſchance I know not; but thus it was: by one of our ſmalleſt ſhips that ſailed formoſt, as ſoone as the ſaid Galley came within Gunſhot, there was a great Peece diſcharged vpon her, and at that inſtant there was one man ſlaine outright, and two other grieuouſly hurt. The error being eſpied and perceiued, our ſhip gaue ouer immediately from any further ſhooting. As ſoone as the Galley came neere vs, my Lord Admirall cauſed a gracious ſalutation to be ſounded with his trumpets, and willed the Captaines forthwith to come aboord his ſhip: which they did, and there he feaſted them with a Banket, as the time and place might ſerue. And then by vnderſtanding of that vnfortunate miſchance that had happened by the ſhot of the ſaid ſhip, he was very ſorry for the ſame, and yet ſuch was the mercifull prouidence of almighty God, that euen in this miſchance alſo, he did hold his holy hand ouer the Engliſh, and all the harme that was done did light only vpon the poore Turke, and the Spaniard himſelfe. When this Lord had well banqueted them, he preſently called for his Barge, and did accompany the ſaid Galley to the Lord Generall the Earle of Eſſex, who then did ride with his ſhip a good diſtance off: and there they being in like manner moſt honorably receiued, and intertained, the Spaniſh Gentlemen deliuered vp their priſoners the Engliſh captiues, of whom ſome had bin there ſix yeeres, ſome eight or ten yeres, and ſome two and twenty yeeres, and vpward, and ſome of them but lately taken in Sir Francis Drakes laſt voyage to the Indies. The number of the priſoners deliuered were but nine and thirty, and no more, and were brought in, and deliuered by Don Antonio de Cerolla and his brother, and by Don Pedro de Cordoa, and certaine others.

If any man preſume here ſo farre, as to inquire how it chanced, that the Lord Generall reſted ſo long at Cadiz, and went no further; and why Port Saint Mary, being ſo faire a Towne, and ſo neere to them, was forborne: and why Xhores alias Xeres? And why Rotta, and the like? And why this or that was done? And why that, or this left vndone? I will not anſwere him with our common Engliſh prouerbe, as I might, which is: That one foole may aske more queſtions in one houre, then ten diſcreete men can well anſwere in ſixe dayes. But that graue ancient writer, Cornelius Tacitus, hath a wiſe, briefe, pithy, ſaying, and it is this; Nemo tentauit inquirere in conſilia Herculis, ſanctiuſq; ac reuerentius habitum eſt de factis Deorum credere, quam ſcire.

Alſo vpon my knowledge, the chiefeſt cauſe why Port Saint Mary, and the reſt, were leſt vntouched, was this: For that it was moſt certainely known, that they were Townes not worth the ſacking of ſuch a royall company, in which there was no manner of wealth in the world left, more then bare houſes of ſtone, and ſtanding wals, and might well haue ſerued rather as a ſtale, perchance, to haue entrapped, then as a meanes to haue enriched.

And thus much for our iourney to Cadiz: for the accidents that hapned by the way, for the winning, ſpoiling, and burning of the ſaid Towne, for the ouerthrow of the Spaniſh Fleete there, and for all other by-matters that hapned, as appendances to the ſame, both in the time of our abode there, as alſo at the very laſt houre of our comming from thence. As for our returne home, and our entrance into a part of Portugall by the way, with the taking, ſpoiling, and burning of the Towne of Faraon there, and marching into the Spaniſh confines thereabouts, &c. I minde to leaue it to ſome other, whoſe chance was to be preſent at the action, as my ſelfe was not, and ſhall be of more ſufficient ability to performe it.

Faraon burnt.

Meteranus writeth, that the taking of Cadiz had ſo terrified the neighbour townes, that the inhabitants fled out of them; and Saint Lucar had beene alſo very eaſily taken, if a few ſhips had aſſaulted it; and that eighteene Spaniſh ſhips comming from the Indies ignorant of what had happened, were Engliſh at vnawares, being very wealthy.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIIII.

The Voyage to the Iles of Azores, vnder the conduct of the Right Honorable ROBERT Earle of Essex, 1597.

§. 1.

The Relation thereof by the said Earle, and other Commissioners.

THe Generall, hauing by her Maiesties gracious fauour the charge of her Fleete and Armie, set out of Plimmouth in Iune 1597. did both promise my selfe and giue hope to her Maiestie, that I should be able to defeate the King of Spaines Fleete, commanded by the Adelantado, if I met them at Sea, or destroy it in the harbour of Ferol, if I found them there; as also to master and take all Fleetes of treasure, or of the East or West Indies Fleete, that I should finde vpon the Sea in their way to Spaine: and lastly, that I should take in the Iland of Terçea, which I held an action of equall importance to the other.

With this confidence I went out, and to these ends: but none of these three being performed, it may be doubted, whether we haue not through weakenesse or negligence failed of successe. For which we make answere, that if our whole carriage be examined, from the first houre to the last, it shall appeare that we haue striuen to attaine to euery one of these with as much obstinate constancie, as any men in the world could doe, and that onely the powerfull hand of God, did binde our hands, and frustrate all our endeuours.

The first for the enterprise of Ferol, we went out of Plimmouth the third of Iune, and stiered directly for that port, and when most extreame stormes and contrary windes met with vs, we beate it vp till all our Fleete was scattered, and many of our ships in desperate case. And because I the Generall thought my too soone giuing ouer would not onely deprive the Fleete of our principall ship, but absolutly defeate the iourney; I forced my company first to abide the continuall increasing of a most dangerous leake, which I made light of; because I saw that with labour of men I could free the ship as fast as the leake did grow. Secondly, I made them endure the craking of both my maine and fore mast, the one in two places, the other in three; so as we still looked when they should be carried by the boord; which was not enough to make me beare vp, because I knew whensoeuer I should loose them both, I could with sure masts, by Gods fauour, carry the ship home. And I continued so long, that my ships Okam came all out, her seames opened, her deckes and vpper workes gaue way, her very timbers and maine beames with her labouring did teare like lathes; so as we looked hourely when the Orlope would fall, and the Ordnance sinke downe to the keele: then did those few, whom before I had wonne to stand with mee, all protest against me, that if I did not within a minute of an houre beare vp the helme, I did wilfully cast away the ship and whole company.

Crossed with winde and stormes.

Danger of the Admirall ship.

Then onely I suffred my selfe to be ouercome: and when I came to Plimmouth, halfe her Maiesties ships, and more then halfe the principall officers by sea and by land were put in before mee for the extremitie their ships were in. And when we were all of vs gathered together againe at Plimmouth, and had repaired all the ships but mine owne, which was sent home to Chatham to be new builded, then were we kept in by continuall storme and contrary windes, till our victuals (which were at first but for three moneths) were in a manner all spent, and the sickenesse in the Flie boates, that carried the land armie, growne so great, that I had order from her Maiestie to discharge the land forces, all but the thousand old Souldiers, which were drawne out of the Low Countries. By which meanes, though we were disabled to land at Ferol, to beate the land Armie there, and take in the forces, which was the certaine way to command the Adelantado's Fleete; yet I the Generall offered her Maiestie to send in certaine ships of fire; and to second them with the Saint Matthew and Saint Andrew, and some great Rye-boates, and Merchants ships, with which I would destroy the most of the enemies principall shipping, and seaze all the Queens own English built ships at the mouth of the harbour to assure our retreate. By this meanes I should hazard to loose but two great Cartes, which before I had won, and for the aduenturing of these defeate the enemies whole Naue. Which counsell being allowed, though with restraint of mine owne going in with those two ships, and an absolute barre to hazard any other, we went out the second time to put this project in execution.

They put in to Plimmouth.

Sickenesse.

Order to discharge land forces.

But againe ere we could recouer the Spanish coast, the Saint Matthew, by loosing her foremast, was put backe into England, and the Saint Andrew had lost company, till at one instant within sight of the shoare of the Groine, Sir Walter Ralegh the Vice-admirall brake his maine yard, which forced him to beare along to the Westward before the winde; and I in this second ship had such a desperate leake sprang, as when we pumped and boled with buckets as much as we could for our

Their setting forth the second time.

Digitized by Google

Leake remedies.

owne liues, it grew ſtill vpon vs: and when we ſought by ramming downe peeces of Beefe, and holding linnen cloath wrong together, to ſtop the comming in of the water, it came in notwithſtanding ſo ſtrongly, as it bare downe all, and beate away euery man that ſtood to ſtop it: Then was I faine to lye by the lee, and make my company worke vpon it all night, my maſter Carpenter, the onely skilfull man I had, dying at that very inſtant.

Cape Finiſterre

And when by the great mercy of God we had ſtopped it, the winde being eaſterly the Fleete was ſo farre ſhot a head, as I could not recouer the moſt of them till I came to the Cape Finiſterre, where holding a Counſell, and miſſing Sir Walter Raleigh (who being off at Sea, had no plying ſailes to get vp) miſſing him, I ſay, with thirty ſailes that in the night followed his light, and hearing that the Saint Matthew, which was our principall ſhip for the execution of our intended enterpriſe, was returned, and being barred to hazard any other in her place, it was by the whole Counſell of warre concluded, that the enterpriſe of Ferol was ouerthrowne, both becauſe, though the winde had ſerued, we wanted the ſhips appointed for that ſeruice, and if wee had had the ſhips, we wanted winde to get into the harbour of Ferol; for the winde blew ſtrongly at Eaſt, which would haue bin fully in our teeth as we had plied in. And now wee onely could thinke of the intercepting of the Indian Fleete, and defeating of the Adelantado: if he had put to Sea. For to take in Terçera, our land army being diſcharged, we had no meanes: whereupon wee bare for the height of the Rocke; hoping there (becauſe it was our ſecond Rende-uous after Ferol) to meete with Sir Walter Raleigh. Into which height when I came, a meſſage was deliuered mee from Sir Walter Raleigh, by one Captaine Skobbels, that the Adelantado was gone out of Ferol with his Fleete to Terçera, to waft home the Weſt Indian Fleete of treaſure, and that hee would attend mine anſwere off of the Burlingas; which meſſage of Sir Walters was grounded vpon the report of the Captaine of a ſhip of Hampton, which did confidently deliuer it.

Enterpriſe of Ferol ouerthrowne.

The Rocke.

I the Generall there calling a Counſell, tooke a reſolution, both becauſe wee hoped to meete the Adelantado there, and becauſe all our beſt experimented Seamen did aſſure vs that it was the likelieſt courſe to meete with the Indian Fleete, to goe for the Ilands of the Azores. And I ſent out Pinnaces both to the Burlinges, and toward the South Cape (which was our third Rende-uous, by our firſt appointment) to cauſe Sir Walter Raleigh and all others of our Fleete to follow. And being with the Iland of Terçera, I looked into the roade of Braſil, and ſaw there was no Fleete; whereupon we bare alongſt betwixt Saint George and Gratioſa for the Iſland of Flores, at which we might both water and take in victuals, which in Merchants ſhips her Maieſtie had ſent after vs: and where, if the Indian Fleete did come this yeere, they were likeſt to fall. But when we had ſpent at Flores ſome ten dayes, in which time Sir Walter Raleigh and his company came vnto vs, by a ſmall Pinnace come from the Indies, I the Generall was told, that it was doubtfull whether the Indian Fleete came from thence or not, and if they did, they would change their vſuall courſe, and come in ſome height more to the Southward, till they were paſt theſe Ilands, where vſually they are attended.

South Cape.

Tercera.

Victuals ſent after them.

False aduiſe of a ſmal Pinnace comming from the Indies.

Which newes made vs reſolue in Counſell to goe for Fayal, and ſo for Saint Michael, and to haue ſome nimble ſhips to lye off and on at Sea, both to the Southward and to the Northward. In our paſſage by ſaile, Gratioſa, and Pico, we tooke ſuch commodities and refreſhings as thoſe Ilands afforded: and in paſſing from them toward Saint Michael, wee were told that a great ſhip was diſcouered off of Gratioſa: whereupon I the Generall gaue order to diuide and to direct the Fleete into three places: the one to ſtirre away Eaſt North-eaſt, and to goe along the Northſide of Terçera; the other Eaſt South-eaſt, and to goe by the Southſide of the ſaid Iland, and both to meete in the roade of Braſil: ſo as if the Carackes, or Weſt Indian Fleete ſhould ſtriue to recouer Terçera, they ſhould be cut off: And the third part of the Fleete ſhould ply to the Weſtward, which way it was ſaid that the great ſhip ſtood, and ſo to cut it off, if it ſought for the roade of Fayal: which if ſhe were kept from, Terçera was her onely place ſhe could put into: and one of theſe three wayes ſhe muſt needes ſtand; for the winde being at North North-weſt, ſhee could not goe but one of theſe three courſes.

But as I had giuen this direction, there came to me a ſmall Barke of Lime, whoſe Captaine did confidently aſſure me, that he was the man that did follow the chaſe, and fetched it vp, finding it but a ſmall ſhip of our owne Fleete: which made vs reſolue to continue our former intended courſe for Saint Michael. But in this meane time, I the Generall hailing the Captaine of a Pinnace, and willing him to call to the ſhips of my ſquadron to follow my light, and thoſe of the Viceadmirals ſquadron to follow his light to the Weſtward (which direction I did preſently after counter-mand) hee miſheard, and willed ſome ſhips that were next, to ſtand about to the Weſtward: which direction, together with his not hearing of me that, which was ſpoken to countermand it, made foure of her Maieſties ſhips, the Garland, the Marie-roſe, the Dread-naught, and the Rainebow, to ſtand off to the Weſt all that night: of which, Sir William Mounſon in the Rainebowe fell in the night with the Weſt Indian Fleete; and it being calme, went off in his Boate to make and haile them: which hee did, and made himſelfe knowne vnto them: and ſtraight rowing to his ſhip, hee ſhot off his Ordnance all night, and carried a light in his maine top: whereupon the other three of her Maieſties ſhips ſtood off with him, but could not fetch False aduiſe of a ſmal Pinnace comming from the Indies.

Note, Miſtaking.

vp

vp the Spaniards till they were gotten into Tercera Road; before which, after they had striued in vaine to get into them, they plied till my comming, which was three dayes after: for I was hard aboord the Westermost part of Saint Michaell before I heard these newes.

The Indian Fleet recouer the Rode of Tercera.

And then standing about, I the Generall being on head of the Fleet, met in my way with a great Ship of the Gouernour of Hauana, and a Frigate of the Spanish King, manned with the said Kings Souldiers, and another Frigate of a particular man: which three I fetched out, tooke, and manned for the safe bringing home of the Ship and goods, and fell the next night being Saturday, the of with Tercera; where finding the wind strong at Northwest, we plyed with as much saile as euer we could bear to get vp to the road of Brasil all that night. Al Sunday, and Sunday night, and till Munday morning wee could not weather the point of Brasil: which when wee had done, while I the Generall gathered such of the Fleet as were neere, I sent in a Pinnace of my Lord of Cumberland, and foure or fiue of very sufficient Captaines and Masters, to see whether it were possible for vs to get vp where the Ships rode: and they brought me backe word, it was impossible. With which I being not satisfied plied in with mine owne Ships, keeping aboord with mee two or three of the principall Officers, that wee might iudge by the eye, and dispute vpon the place; and when wee were in, wee saw the bottome of the Bay (into which they were towed and warped) lay right in the eye of the wind: so as to lead it in with a sayle it was impossible, and to turne it vp would aske an whole day, if wee had scope, but both wee must vpon either boord come within a quoytes cast off their Forts, and yet our Ships would wend in so narrow a place, wee should haue beene on shoare. Which manifest discouerie; and not the idle Shot of all the Forts and Ships, though they were verie liberall, made mee stand off againe.

Three Spanish Ships taken.

And as it was impossible to doe any thing for the present, so when I the Generall called all the Captaines of her Maiesties Ships together, and enquired the estate of their charge, I found that some by the naughtinesse of their Caske and leakage of Beere, had not aboue two dayes, and some not one dayes drinke aboord; and that which most of vs all had did so stinke, as our men dyed and fell sicke continually, and all men protested, that if wee stayed to attend change of windes, and did not instantly seeke a watering place, both men and Ships were absolutely lost. Besides we saw the Galions had beene vnladen, by their shewing their white bellies so much aboue water, and that the Merchants Ships lay all dry on shoare; so as we had abidden the extreamest hazard of her Maiesties troupes and Ships, for the burning of a few dry vnladen Vessells.

Want of prouisions.

Thus were we driuen to beare the second time with Saint Michael (our chiefe end being to water, but withall to sacke the Iland if we could land neere the principall Towne) where wee came to an anchor before Punta Delgada the chiefe Towne; and forthwith went in a little nimble Boat to discouer the landing places, which we found to be exceeding dangerous. For as about all those Ilands of the Acores a Westerly wind bringeth in the hollow mother Sea, so the wind then being West Southerly blew trade, and made both a great Sea gate or wash vpon the shoare, and a dangerous rode. So as besides the apparant likelihood, that our men had been all lost by the ouerturning of our Boats vpon our heads: the losse of our Boates, which could not haue beene in that place auoided, had kept vs from watering, and so had beene the manifest destruction of the whole Fleet. Whereupon, I the Generall, leauing commandement of the great Ships with Sir Walter Raleigh (because the Lord Thomas Howard desired to land with mee) accompanied with his Lords Ship, and all the other principall Officers and persons of qualitie in the Army, I put my selfe in the smal Ships, and towed the boats at our Sterns to seeke another smal Bay on the other side of the Point to the Eastward, called Punta de Galera or Galy Point, where there was a Land Fange, and consequently a smoother landing.

Punta delgada in S. Michael.

Punta de la Galera.

But we putting off in this manner at eleuen of the clocke at night, I the Generall in a Pinnace of Sir Walter Raleigh, called the Guiana, wherein all the Officers of the Land Army did accompany me, & the Aduenturers of quality that came out of my Ship in another Pinnace with Captain Arthur Champernon came to an anchor in this Bay; but so dangerously as wee were put from our anchor, and had like to haue beene cast away: all the rest of the Fleet being put to leeward very farre. The next morning at the breake of the day, being driuen as low as Villa Franca, and there finding a good landing place, wee set our troups on shoare; where wee found (besides many other commodities with which we refreshed our troupes) a better watering place, and a safer rode then any other that was about that Iland. Which, together with the impossibilitie of getting our small Ships and Boats to ply backe againe fiue leagues against the wind, and to meet vs that should haue marched by land, and they seeing of many of the Queens principal ships driuen from their anchors about, and come to Villa Franca: These accidents, I say, made vs to resolue to draw all the Fleet to one place, and there to water with all possible diligence.

They land neer Villa Franca.

And wee being there saw it was so dangerous for our Ships to ride, the wind growing more Southerly, as on Sunday the fifteenth of October, wee re-imbarked all our men; the Masters of the Ships hauing before protested, that if they were put from their anchors, as hourely they looked to bee, that the Fleet and Land Forces were in danger to be seuered for this whole Winter: So as to haue hazarded her Maiesties honour, and so many gallant men, for that which was October the fifteenth.

neuer

Their returne.

neuer any of our ends, had beene as vnwiſe as it was vnſafe; and if the counſell of retyring were good, the manner of it was without taxation: for wee imbarked firſt of all our idle perſons, ſecondly our aduenterours, and the old Companies one after another; and when wee had but three hundred and fiftie men on ſhore, the enemy marching in ſight of our Guards, we went out to meet him, and ſtood two houres readie to fight with the whole Forces of the Iland, till at laſt they retired out of ſight. Thus left wee that Iland, the principall Commanders by Land and Sea ſtaying to bring off the laſt man. In this meane time, while the Land Forces were at Villa Franca, and the Fleet at Punta Delgada, there came into that Road a Carake and a ſmall Braſil man. The Carack preſently ran her ſelfe on the Rocks; and after her men had ſaued themſelues, the laſt ſet her on fire with all the goods in her, to auoid her being taken. Which Sir Walter Raleigh and thoſe with him could not poſſibly auoid. The Braſil man was taken, and the Ship being found leakie, the goods were taken out and put into Engliſh Ships.

A Carack ran her ſelfe on the Rocks.

A Ship of Braſil taken.

And now wee haue giuen account of all our whole carriage vntill we bare for England. If our comming home ſcattering be obiected, wee muſt plead the violence of ſtormes, againſt which no fore directions, nor preſent induſtry can preuaile. Wee muſt conclude with this, That as wee would haue acknowledged that wee had done but our duties, if we had defeated the Adelantado, interpreted the Feet of Treaſure, and conquered the Ilands of the Azores: So wee hauing failed of nothing that God gaue vs meanes to doe; wee hoped her Maieſtie will thinke our painfull dayes, carefull nights, euill diet, and many hazards deſerue not now to be meaſured by the euent. the like honourable and iuſt conſtruction wee promiſe our ſelues at the hands of all my Lords. As for others, that haue ſet warme at home and deſcant vpon vs, wee know they lacked ſtrength to performe more, and beleeue they lacke courage to aduenture ſo much.

Signed

ESSEX.

Thomas Howard. Ch: Mountioy.*
Walter Raleigh. Fran: Vere.
Antony Sherley. Chriſt: Blunt.

* Charles.

§. II.

A larger Relation of the ſaid Iland Voyage, written by Sir ARTHVR GORGES Knight, collected in the Queenes Ship called the Waſt Spite, wherein he was then Captaine; with Marine and Martiall Diſcourſes added according to the Occurrences.

THeſe Iles of the Aſores * are ſituate in the Atlantike or Weſterne Ocean, and doe ſtand betweene 37. and 40. degrees, and diſtant from England 400. leagues. They are in number nine, namely Saint Maries, Saint Michaels, The Tercera, Gratioſa, S. Georges, Pykes, Fayal, Flores, and Cuerno.

* Of theſe Ilands ſee before Linſchotens obſeruations: to which I haue added this Authors deſcription, as containing ſomwhat therein omitted. This booke was written A. 1607. and dedicated to that great hope of Great Britaine, Prince Henry; the Epiſtle to him and the Preface I haue omitted in regard of our long volume. I haue not added a word of mine, but the Title and Marginall Notes; nor defalked any of the Authors (after my wont in others, not to make their writings mine, but mine, the tediouſneſſe in ſo often repetitions by often relators, and the ſuperfluities being ſuch as would deterre the Reader:) The Diſcourſes I haue vſually put in another letter, to diſtinguiſh them from the Hiſtory; the one the Eyes obſeruations, the other the Minds, and both worthy both thine eyes and minds beſt obſeruation. Hee added alſo Notes touching the Naute Royall, which are worthy the noting, but perhaps not to be permitted to euery vulgar and noteleſſe eye. Sometimes veritas odium parit; Paines may cauſe paines, and buſie labour may reap the reward of a buſie body. I am loth to buy repentance.

This name of Aſores was giuen vnto theſe Ilands by the Portugues, of a kind of Hawkes called by them Aſores (which wee name Goſhawkes, and the Latines Accipitres) whereof there did breed great ſtore in thoſe Iles: But Ortellius ſets downe this name to bee ſo giuen of the French word Eſſorer, which ſignifieth, to dry or wither, but yeeldeth no reaſon withall for that Etimology. The Netherlanders doe call them the Flemiſh Ilands, challenging that they were firſt diſcouered by the Merchans of Bridges; who found them meerely vn-inhabited, abounding with Woods and Cedar Trees, whether they ſent Colonies to people and manure them. And afterwards in proceſſe of time they yeelded themſelues Subiects to the Portugues, who ſince did inhabite and gouerne there, ſo as now with them they are fallen vnder the power of the Spaniſh vſurpation.

Amongſt theſe Ilands the Tercera is the chiefe, but is ſo called by the Spaniards, becauſe it lieth the third Iland diſtant from the Coaſt of Spaine. It is plentifull of Fruit and Corne, and hath ſome Vines growing in it. The Inhabitants doe make great benefit and trade of Oade to dye Cloth, which growes there in great plentie: The chiefe Towne in that Iland is called Angra, and hath thereunto a very ſtrong Fortreſſe, called Brazill, and vnder it a Roade for ſhipping to ride, but an Hauen or ſafe Port for all weathers, there is not one amongſt theſe nine Ilands.

The Pike is ſo called of a ſharpe Mountaine, riſing ſteeple-wiſe ſome three miles in height and ſix or ſeuen miles in circuit at the foot; faſhioned it is vpward like an Hiue, and the top thereof moſt commonly to be diſcerned within and aboue the clouds. This Mountaine hath in it (by report)

Digitized by Google

report) many great hollow Caues and deepe Vaults, and it is credibly reported, that oftentimes it breathes out flames and sparkes of fire, as doth the Mountaine Etna. Also at the bottome of this Mountain, towards the East, there is a great Spring of Fresh water, which is seen many times to issue out flakes and stones of fire with great violence, and of the number and bignesse of the stones that are throwne out by the force and source of this Spring, and what huge workes they make of the multitudes of them, they confidently doe tell strange wonders, which I will neither affirme nor deny, but leaue indifferent to credit as men list.

Fayall is so called of Faya, which in the Portugues signifieth a Beech Tree, wherewith that Iland is said to abound. But yet I saw there more store of Iuniper and Cedar, then of any other Wood or Timber. For Aire and Soyle, it is as pleasant and fruitfull, as any of the other Ilands, and mai- are some fiue Townes with many pretie Villages: and in this Iland there are yet remaining certaine families of the Flemish race. Gratiosa is so called of the exceeding fruitfulnesse of the Soyle and pleasant temper of the Ayre. Flores, of the abundance of Flowers that grow in it. Curuo, of the multitude of Rauens and Crowes breeding therein. And that Iland doth also breed Horses. Saint Maries, Saint Georges, and Saint Michaels, were so called of those Saints names, vpon whose dayes they were first discouered; for such is the custome of many Nauigators, and especially of the Spaniards and Portingues, so to call those Landes that they first make by the Saints day and name wherein they are discouered. And these three Ilands for temper and fruitfulnesse are sutteable with the others: But Saint Michael is the greatest of them all, Tercera the strongest, and Saint Maries the neerest to the Coast of Spaine.

Fayall.

Gratiosa.
Flores.
Curuo.
S. Maries, &c.

But now as wee come neerer to our intended purpose; for the better vnderstanding thereof, I thinke it very necessary and pertinent some what to speake of the chiefe Commanders, as well by Sea as by Land, and also of the number of our Ships and Souldiers, together with the proiect and designe of that iourney then vndertaken for the seruice of her late Maiestie, and the Honour of our Nation.

It is therefore to be vnderstood, that Robert Deuereux, late Earle of Essex, Master of the Horse and Ordnance, and Knight of the Garter: First commanded in chiefe, as well Admirall of the Naule by Sea, as Generall of the Armie by Land. His Vice-Admirall was the Lord Thomas Howard Knight of the same Order, and second Sonne to the last Thomas Duke of Norfolke, a Noble man much honoured and beloued, and of great experience in Sea seruice. His Reare-Admirall was Sir Walter Raleigh Knight, Captaine of her Maiesties Guard, Lord Warden of the Stanneries, and Lieftenant of Cornwall. For the Land seruice, his Leiftenant Generall was Sir Charles Blunt, Lord Mountioy, Knight of the Garter, Gouernour of Portsmouth, and a man in high fauour with her late Maiestie. His Marshall of the Field was Sir Francis Vere Knight, a great Souldier, and Coronell Generall of the English Forces in the Low Countries. The Master of the Ordnance, Sir George Carew Knight, Leiftenant of the Ordnance of the Kingdome of England. His Sergeant Maior, Sir Ferdinando Gorges Knight, Gouernour of the Forts of Plimouth. The Coronell Generall of the Foot Sir Christopher Blunt Knight: The Treasurer of the Armie Sir Hugh Beeston Knight, one of her Maiesties Receiuers Generall in the Principalities of Wales; with all other Officers designed to places requisite that were needful by Land or Sea, now too long to rehearse. And yet of all the Noblemen I will as neere as I can record their names particularly; but craue pardon if I faile in the precedencie of their places.

Commanders names, and chiefe officers.

The Earles of Essex, Rutland, and Southampton, the Lord Howard, the Lord Audley, the Lord Gray, the Lord Mountioy, the Lord Rich, and the Lord Cromwell. But the particular names of all the Land Captains that had charge I could neuer come to the knowledge of, much lesse can I marshall them orderly in this discourse. And therefore I will passe to the number of the Ships in generall, and therein name some particulars of the chiefe and principall Vessells of the Royall Naule, with their Captaines.

Noblemen imployed in this seruice.

The whole Naule (which was diuided into three Squadrons, viz. The Admirall his Squadron; The Vice-Admirall his Squadron, and the Reare-Admirall his Squadron) consisted of 120. sayle, or thereabout; whereof fiftie were good men of Warre and gallant Ships, the rest Victuallers, and Ships of Transportation. Of her Maiesties owne Ships the number was eighteene or nineteene, and these were their names. The Merhonour Admirall, whereof Sir Robert Mansfield was Captaine: The Due Repulse Vice-Admirall, whereof Master Middleton was Captaine: The Wast Spite Reare-Admirall, whereof my selfe was Captaine: The Garland the Earle of Southampton commanded: The Defiance wherein the Lord Mountioy was shipped, had for Captaine Sir Amias Preston: The Saint Mathew to Sir George Carew, Master of the Ordnance: The Mary Rose to Sir Francis Vere Marshall, whose Captaine was M. Iohn Winter: The Dread-nought Sir William Brooke was Captaine of: The Nonparelle Sir Richard Lusson was Captaine of: The Bonauenture Sir William Harney was Captaine of: The Antelope Sir Thomas Vauisor was Captain of: The Rainbow Sir William Mounson was Captaine of: The Swiftsure Sir Gilly Merick was Captain of: The Golden Lion was sent after for a supply. The Hope, whereof was Captain The Foresight, whereof Sir Carew Reignall was Captaine: The Saint Andrew, whereof Master Marcellus Throckmorton was Captain: The Tramontana, whereof young Master Fenner was Captain: The

The Naule consisting of three Squadrons and 120. saile.
The Queenes ships and their Captaines.

The Moone, whereof Sir Edward Michelborne was Captaine. Besides that there were some other of her Maiesties small Pinnaces that attended the Fleet.

The rest of the Fleete

The residue of the Fleet aforenamed consisted of the best shipping of London, and other Port-Townes of the Kingdome, with sundry stout Vessells belonging to some Lords and Gentlemen that were Aduenturers in this Voyage. There were also added to this Nauie tenne sayle of goodly men of Warre, sent from the States of the Low-Countries to attend her Maiesties Fleet in this seruice, vnder the conduct of one Mounsier de Duueincerde, well manned and furnished.

Ten Hollanders

Land-Armie

The Land Army (besides Saylers that might be afforded and spared vpon occasion of landing) consisted of six thousand able men well appointed, with ten Peeces of Artillery for the Field and Battery, with all necessary Vtensils fit for them. The proportion of victuals was for fiue moneths at large allowance, & double apparell both for Souldiers and Mariners. In this Armie there went Knights, Captaines, and Gentlemen, voluntaries fiue hundred at the least, as gallant personages, and as bravely furnished, as euer the eye of men did behold. The list of whose names I did seriously inquire after, thereby to doe them right, but could by no meanes compasse it.

Fiue hundred Voluntaries gallantly furnished.

The end and purpose of this great Preparation was, to the taking in vse of most of those Ilands and especially of the winning of the Tercera it selfe, the which was reputed to haue beene attempted by vs, while the other Ilands and Holds of importance, and in some of them to haue placed strong Garrisons, if it had pleased God to haue prospered the iourney with happie successe. But in the very beginning with long contrarie winds, and extremitie of foule weather, the maine plot and ground of this enterprise was hindred and maimed, as hereafter more at large shall be related in his due place. But this intended iourney for the surprising and holding of the Tercera alone, if it had taken effect (without any further respect to the other Ilands, then onely to haue sacked them and raced those Fortresses they haue) had beene a seruice of great consequence for vs, and as preiudiciall to the King of Spaine, as any action that was euer vndertaken against him, since the reuolt of the Low-Countries. The which to set downe in particular, would require more ample discourse, then either my leasure, or my memory can suddenly afford. But what great vse and benefit both the Portugues did, and the Spaniards doe make of these Ilands is in daily experience. And as for that here allegation, how difficult and inconuenient it would bee for vs to hold a peece so farre off: men of iudgement in their owne iudgements would easily answere. For as well it might be demanded, how the Forts are held in the East Indies by the poore Portugues against mightie Nations, and yet so farre remote from Christendome: And how Rhodes and Cyprus were heretofore long kept in despite of the Turke in his very beesome. And how the Spaniards of late haue kept certaine places in Britaine, and Amyens, and Calleis in Picardie, maugre the force of France, and neuer quited them but by composition: And God knowes how long Don Iohn D'Laguita would haue kept Kinsale and Beare Castle, if those had bin places halfe so terrible, as those of the Tercera: or but the fourth part so remote from vs, as the Tercera is from Spaine. Vndoubtedly their industry and patience is far beyond ours, both in getting and holding maisters of more difficultie. But vaine it is to set a price of the Beares skin before hee be slaine: although I am verily perswaded, that the contrary winds only left vs both that, and all the King of Spaine his treasure that came that yeere to the Tercera. For the iourney was carried with as great secrecie, expedition, and Royall preparation, as euer was any those many yeeres, and they on the contrary as slenderly prouided, and little doubting any such attempt. When all things were thus ordered, and wee furnished of our necessaries after some few daies abode in Sandwich for the meeting, mustering, and imbarking of our Land Army, about the fiue and twentieth of Iune, in the yeere 1597. we set saile from the Downes, and within three dayes with skant winds recouered Portland Rhode, where we ancored and staied some six or seuen dayes, taking in men and victualls at Waymouth, and thence we made for Plimouth, where wee were to take in our fresh water, much of our prouisions, and most of our Mariners; besides that this place was appointed the very randeuous for the knitting vp and dispatch of this Voyage: whether in a day and a nights sayle wee came, but with very extreme foule weather. Insomuch that euen in the entrance of the very Harbour, many of our Ships falling foule one of another were sorely distressed. The Lord Mountioy his Ship the Defiance, had her Beake head stricken cleane off; and the Saint Mathew (being a Spanish Ship of great charge, very leeward and drawing much water) had like in the tempest to haue runne her selfe vpon the Rocks, had not her Captaine Sir George Carew Master of the Ordnance, beene very resolute and carefull in that extremitie, when a great part of his Souldiers and Saylers would haue abandoned her, and betaken themselues to their Ship-boats, to shun the iminent perill that threatned them: which he staied to the preseruation of the Ship and the company. Moreouer a Flee-boat of our Traine, who had in her fortie Last of Powder was likewise bulged, and all the store had beene vtterly lost, had not the Master of the Ordnance with like care and diligence bestirred himselfe to saue all that hee might, who with the aid of many Ship-boats, as the Flee-boat was sinking, saued the greatest part of her lading. Yet notwithstanding seuenteen Lasts of Powder was vtterly spoiled with the Salt-water, as I heard the Master of the Ordnance himselfe affirme.

Intent for Tercera.

Portland.

Plimouth.

Thus with great difficultie wee arriued at Plimouth, where within six or seuen daies our whole Army and Nauie met, and withall the shipping of the Low-Countries came to vs. And soone after hauing watered and taken in all our prouisions and Marines, and mustered our men, we imbarked our our Army, and set sayle about the ninth of Iuly, and for two dayes space were accompanied with a faire leading North-easterly wind. In which time we receiued a ship-board all our directions throughout the Nauie, with such orders and instructions as are vsually set downe by an Admirall, and a Counsell of Warre, together with the places of meeting from time to time vpon any occasions of separations by stormes, by fight, by giuing chase, or any other accidents. This order of deliuering directions when a Fleet is a Sea-board, and not before, is an vse grounded vpon many good reasons: as to auoid the reuealing of secret plots, and the preuention of sudden execution. As also to shun the discouraging of diuers that doe often expose themselues and their aduentures to Sea actions, either for loue to the Commanders, or out of hope of Purchase, or, for many other respects, which perhaps they would not doe if they knew indeed either the danger, or the true ends of some preparations. And this secret manner of proceeding hath bin often vsed by Philip the late king of Spain, in diuers great expeditions, who hath beene so precise and seuere therein, as that oftentimes the Admiralls of his Fleet themselues haue not knowne their instructions, nor beene suffered to open them, vntill they haue beene thirtie or fortie leagues on their way. Wee now being in this faire course, some sixtie leagues onwards our iourney with our whole Fleet together, there suddenly arose a fierce and tempestuous storme full in our teeths, continuing for foure dayes with so great violence, as that now euery one was inforced rather to looke to his owne safetie, and with a low saile to serue the Seas, then to beat it vp against the stormy winds to keepe together, or to follow the directions for the places of meeting. And here some began to taste the inconuenience and perill of high Cargued Ships drawing little water, and ouercharged with mightie Ordnance in a furious high wrought Sea: And now also others found and felt the mischiefe of weake built Vessells, and of rotten Tackle. For this extreamitie of weather was so great, as that wee were all one after another forced backe againe, some into Plimouth, and diuers into other Harbours on that Coast, so extreamely shaken and beaten, as that the Admirall was in danger to haue foundred in the Sea, hauing many leaks broken out vpon him, and his mid-ship beame shiuered in sunder. And yet (as wee vnderstood after) some three or foure of the formost of our Fleet (whereof the Earle of Southampton in the Garland was said to be one) did recouer sight of the North-Cape, but yet forced to returne againe to Plimouth. And many of our Gentlemen and Knights, with this boysterous and bitter entertainment on the Seas, returned extreame weake and lay dangerously sicke long after: Insomuch that some of them dyed thereof at Plimouth, and were there honourably buried by the Generall. Some also were so much weakened and distempered, as that they were not able to recouer strength to put to the Seas againe, as Sir Ferdinando Gorges our Sergeant Maior, in whose place our Generall did appoint Sir Anthony Sherly; and Sir Carew Reignalls Captaine of the Foresight, so seuerely weakned with Seas sickneſſe, as that his charge was deliuered ouer to Sir Alexander Ratcliffe, a very forward and gallant young Gentleman, who (not long after) was slaine in the Warres of Ireland, with Sir Conniers Clifford Gouernour of Connaugh. And amongst others in the beginning of this bitter storme, our Treasurer Sir Hugh Biston was also so extreamely afflicted with Sea sickneſſe, and in so great hazard of life, as that out of the Waſt ſpite (wherein he was shipped) he was imbarked into a Caruell of our traine to returne for England, seeing his weake body vnable to vndergoe the resolution of his mind. And I thinke this losing of our Treasurer in the beginning, was an ominous presage of the losse of the infinite Treasures, which afterward so vnluckily past by and escaped vs.

Set saile.

Instructions for the voyage and instructions touching instructions.

Storme.

Perill of high cargued & of weake ships.

Returne to Plimouth.

Great sickneſſe

Sir A. Sherly placed in roome of Sir F. Gorges.

Sir Alexander Ratcliffe.

The Treasurer his ominous departure.

Wee being thus with contrary winds, and extreamitie of weather beaten backe into seuerall Hauens, and yet at last meeting at Plimouth (except some few Ships of transportation, that were driuen vpon the Coasts of France, Wales, and Ireland, with some of our Bands of Souldiers) we fell to repairing of our Ships, and to amend those inperfections which the Seas and stormes had discouered. But withall were inforced to abate a great part of the first proportion of our Armie, as well through the defects of the Admirall his Ships, and others, as also for the waste and expence which wee had made of our drinke and victuals by the leaking of the Caske, and by the abundance of Salt-water, which was taken in during the storme, to the wetting and spoyling of many of our prouisions. Besides that, much of our beare aboard those Victuallers that followed our Fleet with diuers other prouisions, was very vile and vnsauoury of it selfe, by the great abuse of the Victuallers and London Brewers, as well for the careleſſe brewing, as for the vnseasonable stinking Caske which they deliuer, a fault much vsed among them, and too much tolerated, considering the infinite rate and gaines they make of selling Thames water, beyond all good order and proportion. But as God would, at that instant when wee had discharged our Ships of that vnseruiceable poisonous drinke, there came very happily into Plimouth for a supply, a tall prize laden with Spaniſh Canary Wines, which was distributed amongst the Fleet to make Beuerage. And in this sort vsing all industry and diligence for the setting aflote of our storme-beaten Nauie, wee so fitted our selues againe within eight or ten dayes, as that wee were readie for a new fortune. But yet this violent and dangerous tempest had so cooled and battered the courages of a great many of our young Gentlemen (who seeing that the boysterous winds and merciſſe Seas, had neither affinitie with London delicacie, nor Court brauery) as that discharging their high Plumes, and imbroydered Cassocks, they secretly retired themselues home, forgetting either to bid their friends farewell, or to take leaue of their Generall. And here by the way, a little to digreſſe.

Brewers faults

A Prize.

Stormy Winds and Seas agree not with delicacy & brauery

I thinke

Digitized by Google

Aduice for Gallants.

I thinke it not amisse iustly to reprehend and taxe our Nation, for their vnproper and vaine manner of going to the Warres, and especially those that had neuer seene seruice. For bee hee poore or rich when hee first prepares to goe to serue, hee will take more care, and be at more cost to prouide himselfe of a roysting Feather, and a clynckant Coat, then to bee furnished either of fit Armes, or of necessary clothing to keepe out wet and cold: whereby they come both to the Sea and Field seruice, rather like Maskers then Souldiers, as men apter to bring spoyles for the Enemy, then to conquer or win honour from him. And yet at the last, the wanting of their needfull habiliments in times of extreamitie, doth make them truly to finde their owne errour and superfluous vanitie in those idle and fruitlesse toyes: whereof I could wish a reformation, as well for the bettering of our seruice, as also for abating such needlesse expences. Such were the garish troupes and gilded Armies of Darius, abounding in pompe and delicacy: whose millions of effeminate Persians were euer dispersed and defeated by handfulls of the poore and hardie Macedonians. So were the steele edged Souldiers of that renowned Hannibal, metamorphosed into Cowardise and Sloth, after they had once relished the pride and delicacies of Capua, for their conquests euer after declined. So was also that famous M. Anthonius ouerthrowne and vanquished, when he left the strict Martiall discipline of his owne victorious Country, and fashioned his Forces according to the brauery and luxury of Egypt, to obserue the humour of Cleopatra, who had vtterly corrupted and weakned the courage both of him and his legions, with vanities, excesse and idlenesse. And such in our dayes were the glorious glistring French troupes led by the Duke of Ioyeuse, being for the most part compounded of the gallant Courtiers and dancing Minions of Henry the Third French King of that name, but beaten and ouerthrowne at the Battell of Couttras, by the valiant King of Navarr, and an handfull of his poore Hugonotes (as they then termed them.) Farre otherwise was the vsage and manner of those worthy Romans, that by their wisdome and valour made themselues famous, and Lords ouer the World, whose glorious examples wee doe more willingly read then follow. They going a warfare departed Rome in obedience and strictnesse of Martiall discipline, in sobrietie of diet and attire, fitted with Armes, like men that knew that Iron and Steele were maistring mettalls ouer Gold and Siluer, and hauing atchieued and performed their enterprises, returned then home in triumph, in glory, and in pride, shining in the spoyles and riches of their vanquished Enemies, and adorned with as much sumptuousnesse as they could get, brauing therein their conquered Foes, and setting to the shew of the world the fruits of their Valour and Trauailes. Whereas wee for the most part contrariwise going out brauely, and returning home againe beggarly, leaue no other testimony nor records of our Enterprises and Victories, either to the liuing or to posteritie, then the Merchants bookes wherein we are deep plunged, euen to the morgage or sale of our Inheritance, to conuert the true honor of Souldery into effeminate pompe and delicacy. But now to the matter: We hauing in this Fort repaired and supplied the defects of our weather beaten Nauie, onely attended the fauour of the winds; wherein it seemed the heauens were vtter enemies to our designes. For during the space of an whole moneth together (after wee were againe readie) the weather stood flat opposite to our course, insomuch that wee were not able to worke our selues out of the Harbour. And in this consumption of Time we lost the best season of the yeere for our purpose, and also greatly decayed our victualls and prouisions; besides the number of our Souldiers and Mariners that daily diminished. And about this time the Lord Rich finding himselfe (as many others did) altogether vnable to indure the inconueniences of the Seas in a long and toilesome voyage, tooke his leaue of our Generall, and gaue ouer the iourney. In this extreamitie of contrary windes and crosse fortunes (against which the policie and power of man could not preuaile) our Generall, with the aduice of his counsell resolued vpon some other course, and to fashion his enterprises according to opportunitie, and the proportion of the meanes that remained. And thereupon casting the greatest part of his Land Armie, hee onely retained one thousand of the best Souldiers (as was thought) most of them being Companies brought out of the Low-Countries: And also at that time hee discharged diuers of the smaller Ships, and many of the Victuallers, taking out of them such prouisions and store as remained to supply that which was spent, and to lengthen out the time for those lesser numbers that were to be imployed. And whilest these things were thus altering and ordering, and committed to the care and charge of discreet Officers: Our Admirall himselfe, with his Reare-Admirall resolued to ride post to the Court, to receiue further directions or approbation in that he intended for her Maiestie, and the Lords of the Councell. Leauing the charge both of the Nauie and Souldiers in his absence, with the Lord Thomas Howard his Vice-Admirall, and the Lord Mountioy his Leiftenant Generall by Land whom hee authorised, together with the Counsell of Warre, to marshall those affaires as occasion required. Here by it may be easily coniectured what it is for men to vndertake Sea-actions, that haue not great meanes to follow the same, with prouisions and allowance of superfluitie to meet with lets and misaduentures, and not to depend on the bare ordinary prouisions of a set proportion. For by this great crosse of ours, wee may well take knowledge how vncertaine and difficult it is to set out and prepare a Sea Army, except it bee on the purse and defraies of a Prince, able and willing to supply the expences and hinderances of such waste and accidents, as doe many times happen by want of windes when all things else are in readinesse, wherein oftentimes the ouerslipping, and not taking of six houres aduantage of winde when it hath serued, hath ouerthrowne a Voyage. And it hath to my knowledge so fallen out, that some Ships that haue taken a present gale of a day, by the benefit thereof haue performed their Voyage, and returning againe into the Harbour, finding others of their

Note.

Still crossed.

Lord Rich departeth.

Land Army cashed.

Sea-actions require a Princes purse.

Small time great losse.

their consorts bound for the same place, and ready at the same time, still sticking fast at ancor; by leesing the same opportunitie.

In this absence of our Generall at the Court, there fell out such extreame stormy weather, as that it greatly troubled and puzled our Ships, both in Plimouth Road, and in the Cat Water, insomuch that many of their ancors came home, and a Ship of the Reare-Admiralls, of three hundred Tunnes, called the Roe-buck, draue a ground and bulged her selfe, and so became vnserviceable for that iourney; although much paines and care was taken of all hands, and specially by our Vice-Admirall himselfe in his owne person; to haue preserued her. During all this time of our abode in Plimouth, (which was some six or seuen weekes) we neither found eyther want or dearth of any manner of victualls, either in the Towne, where our Mariners were daily resident, or in the Country, where the Land Army was quartered; not yet that extreame manner of inhansing the prices of all things vsed in London, and in other places of the Realme, vpon the extraordinary assembling of any such great troupes. And withall it is strange to see, how happily that poore corner of England, doth often receiue and sustaine so many Armies and Fleets, as doe there many times meet, without any of those inconueniences or alterations, that vpon the like occasion are found, in many other more rich and fruitfull parts of the Kingdome.

Harmes by stormes.

Good order for prouisions at Plimouth.

Our Generall (as is aforesaid) hauing spent now sixe or seuen dayes in that iourney to the Court, returned with a resolution to continue the voyage to the Seas, and there (as intelligence fell out) to follow the best courses in spending the rest of the Summer, and the remainder of his victualls; all sorts being very sorry, that so great preparations should haue vtterly quailed without effecting, or attempting something of worth. Wee therefore now propoled to our selues, that by tarrying out till the last of October, (for the which time we were victualled after the Land Army was discharged) wee might range the Coast of Spaine, and so doe seruice in some of the Kings shipping, or else lying in the height betweene the Rocke and the South Cape, wee might intercept some Indian Fleet or Carrackes, either outwards or homewards bound; or at the least wee might meete and fight with the Adelantado, who was then saide to bee preparing of a Fleet, and ready to put to the Seas. Besides there was a brute giuen out, that our Generall meant to attempt the Groyne or Ferrall, and there to distresse some of the Kings shipping that lay in the Harbour. But whatsoeuer pretences and speeches were giuen out for that matter; both our Generall, and the wisest of his Counsell of Warre, did well enough knowe, that the Groyne or Ferrall were then no morsells fit for our mouthes, our Forces being so abated, and those places so well warned and prouided for, by our long delayes and impediments, besides there was no likelihood, that wee would euer ingage so many of her Maiesties best Ships, within the circuit and mercy of those Harboure, vpon so great disaduantage and hazard, as they must haue aduentured in doing any good on any of them, as they were then furnished. But wee daily see that it is the manner and fashion of great Estates and Commanders in the Warre, to giue out and pretend many things, that indeed they intend not, as well to make their names the more famous and terrible, as also many times to amaze the world with false Alarums, thereby either to hold their true purposes the more secret, or at least to giue them the better speed and passage, by diuerting the Enemyes. A custome neither new nor vsuall: and therefore not repeated as any extraordinary obseruation.

Pretences.

In this sorte all things being ordered and repaired, and our Generall returned with full Commission and resolution to proceed: his Lordship in stead of the Merehonour (which was so weakened and disabled, as that shee could not goe forth againe this iourney) shipped himselfe in the Dewrepulse, which was Vice-Admirall, and our Vice-Admirall tooke vnto himselfe the Lyon, in liew of the other. And on Wednesday, being the seuenteenth of August, 1597. a little before sunne setting, wee wayed our Ancors, and set sayle, but with much labour got out of Plimouth Road, being forced to vse our Tow-boates, to set vs cleere of the Harbour, the winde being somewhat slacke and scant. Notwithstanding, afterwards a sea-boord, wee finding the weather more fauourable, held our course for the North Cape, and the three and twentieth of August, wee fell athwart the Bay of Alchasher, and at last bare full in with it. The which course, the Master of our Ship (called Broadebent) much disliked, thinking it very inconuenient and perillous for so great a Fleet, so wilfully to be imbayed vpon an Enemies Coast, but yet followed the Generalls course.

Bay of Alchasher.

The foure and twentieth of the same moneth, being Bartholmew day, wee met a foule storme in that Bay, most extreamly violent for the time, but lasted not aboue fiue or sixe houres. In which storme the S. Matthew, whereof Sir George Carew, Master of the Ordnance, was Captaine two houres before day falling into an head Sea, hauing her Spright-sayle out, brake ouer-boord her Bolt-spright, and Fore-mast close to the Partners, which for the Ships safetie was cut from her side; In the Fore-top foure Mariners were drowned, keeping their watch there, and the fall of the Masts broke two Ancors, and carried the third into the Sea, vpon which disaster (according to the manner of the Sea) some Ordnance was discharged, and many Lanternes hanged vpon the shrowdes, to giue notice of her distresse in the night. But after day light, the Garland (whereof the Earle of Southampton was Captaine) drew neere to her succour, who beholding with griefe, the miserable estate that this Ship was in, and likely to bee worse, for that her Mayne Mast, with the Ships rowling had loosened it selfe in the Partners, and in danger to breake in the step (which if it had done, it would presently haue sunke her.) The Earle, though hee was not able to take all the men out of her, into his owne Ship, being in number aboue seuen hundred persons, yet hee was desirous and carefull to preserue as many as hee might. And to that end sent his Pinnace to Sir George Carew, praying him, and as many as hee would select of his Company to come vnto him: which noble offer of his Lordship, the Master of the Ordnance (as hee had reason) thankfully receiued: but hauing a more tender care of the losse of his Honour, then of the hazard of his life, would not forsake the Ship, but made election rather, to run the fortune of the rest of his company, then to prouide for the particular safetie of himselfe, and some other Captaines, and Gentleman of good qualitie, whereof hee had store. This answere, being returned, the Earle was yet vnsatisfied, and being desirous to saue as many as his Ship could well receiue, and especially those of the better sort, sent his Pinnace to the Saint Matthew againe, perswading them not wilfully to lose themselues. But the Captaine perseuered in his former resolution: and when some gallant men of his company would gladly haue taken the Earles offer, and haue left their consorts to their fortune, Sir George Carew would in no wise suffer a man to depart, because it should bee no discomfort to the rest, but openly protested, that both hee, they, and the Ship, would altogether runne on fortune. Whereupon the Earle, seeing that his staying longer with the Saint Matthew, could in no sort giue her men reliefe, and fearing by staying too long, to be farre ingaged in the Bay of Alchasber, and to loose his Admirall, followed the Fleet.

S. Matthew distressed.

Sir George Carews resolution.

These brane resolutions haue beene also vsed heretofore oftentimes, by such as haue commanded in the Royall Ships, and sometimes by the Admiralls themselues. And it is well knowne to many Sea-men liuing at this day, that Edward, Earle of Lincolne, High Admirall of England, a valiant man, and worthy Gentleman, in the time of Queene Elizabeth, being in seruice on the Narrow Seas, with her Royall Navie, chanced in a tempest to fall with his Ship athwart a sand, whereby shee was in great danger to bee bulged and lost; whereupon the Captaine and Master of the Ship, perswaded him in that extreamitie and danger, to take the benefit of his Pinnace, and saue himselfe aboard the next of the Fleet. But the Earle, according to his honourable mind, openly vowed and protested, that no danger should cause him to leaue his company in distresse, that for his loue had followed him to the Seas: Besides, said hee, I honour the Queene my Mistresse so much, to bring her word that I haue saued my selfe, and lost her Ship: and therefore let vs do our best to saue altogether; for at this banquet wee will all drinke of one cup. Wherein, as hee gaue himselfe great glory and reputation, so it seemed, that fortune fauoured his vertue and courage; for in the end, with diligence and labour beyond all hope, the Ship came safe off. These extreamities and hazards on the Sea, bring to my minde an accident worthy the relating, and a piece of seruice not vnprofitable for Sea-men in like cases to bee obserued; and this it is. In the Queenes raigne, about the time that the Pope and the King of Spaine, sent forces into Ireland to ayd the Earle of Desmond, who then rebelled in Munster, there was sent to the Seas a Fleet of her Maiesties Ships, whereof Sir Iohn Parrot was Admirall, in the Reuenge, and Sir William Gorges, my Father, in the Dread-naught Vice-Admirall; who when they had performed their seruice on the Coast of Ireland, and other places, in their returne homewards, the Vice-Admirall chanced to take an English Pirate, whose name was Deriuall, a very valiant and skilfull Mariner. This Deriuall, the Admirall tooke aboord his owne Ship, and kept him prisoner in the Bilbowes. But so it fortuned, that a great storme arising in the Narrow Seas, the Fleet was scattered, and Sir Iohn Parrats Shippe runne vpon a Sand, where, a good time shee did dangerously beate, hauing stricken all his Sayles, and with euery Billow was like to bee bulged. And in this desperate extremitie they saw no other way left, but how they might with Boates, and Rafts saue the men, and forsake the Shippe; some being of one opinion, and some of another, as hope or despaire led them. This Deriuall being then prisoner in the Bilbowes, sent word to the Admirall, that hee knew well the lying of that Land, and would direct them a way how to saue the Ship and all the company, if hee would promise him on his Faith, and Honour, to get his Pardon when hee came home in recompence thereof. The Admirall willingly accepted the proffer, and ingaged his Faith for the performance of his demand, and taking him out of the Bilbowes, bad him bestir himselfe. Whereunto Deriuall answered, In hope you will saue my life, according to your Word and Faith giuen, I will (by Gods helpe) saue all yours: but if I thought otherwise, I had rather here drowne with so good company, then bee hanged at home alone. The Admirall bidde him not doubt it, but follow his businesse. Whereupon Deriuall presently commanded the Master and Mariners, to hoyse vp all their Sayles they could make, to the very Batt-end, which was cleane contrary to that they had done before, (for fearing the mighty winds, they had stroke all their sayles, and so lay thumping on the Sands) but now the strong gale hauing filled all their sayles, still as the billow rose, it drane the Ship forwards, and so in foure or fiue shoues, being driuen with the violence of the windes and the waues, with his stirrages he cut cleane through and athwart the Sand, and floated into the Sea. This was a desperate remedie for a desperate danger; for if hee had not vsed the benefit of her sayles, and carried her

Ed. E. of Lincolne High Admirall.

Audaces fortuna iuuat.

Sir Iohn Parrot. Sir W. Gorges.

Deriuall a Pirat, better Mariner then man.

Dire nodo dira remedia.

her athwart (the Ship being a strong built vessell) shee would still haue layen tumbling on the Sand, and at last broken her selfe. Notwithstanding this good seruice done by Deriuall, when hee came home, his reward was an halter, his offence being remembred, and his desert forgotten: and yet the Admirall did his best to saue him according to his promise. But surely (in my poore opinion) in such cases a State should doe well, for examples sake, and for incouragement of others, to take notice of such extraordinary seruices, and to remember that vertue deserues no lesse to bee cherished, then vice to be chastised, and that to whom a State committeth the trust or confidence of a Generalls or Admiralls place, it should also allow him the honor, to make good his word for any thing, that concernes the aduancement of the seruice, wherewith hee is put in trust.

Deriuall hanged against promise.

Aduice.

But I will returne againe to Sir George Carew, whom we left tottering in his wrekt Ship, and in a great storme, for I haue occasion here to stand somewhat vpon the Relation of his hard aduentures after his disaster, because I haue heard it by many that were with him in the Ship, often, and at large discoursed of; and himselfe being a principall Officer in the Action, shipt in a vessell of great charge, it cannot bee reputed as a digression, or impertinent from the matter, for small is the reward of those that so resolutely engage, and expose their liues for the seruice of their Prince and Countrey, if they should not bee allowed the comfort of honourable memory. After the departure of the Earle of Southampton from the S. Mathew, as aforesaid, many Counsells in this distressed Ship were held for the cutting of her Mayne Mast ouer-board, which with rowling was growne at last to be so loose, as that it was continually feared that it would breake in the Stop, and when the Carpenters were ready to begin that worke, the storme ceased, and the Seas began to calme, wherein finding comfort, they made of a spare top Mast a Iury Fore-mast, and the Pinnace sayle serued for a Fore-sayle. In this pittifull estate the Ship still running before the winde, which shee could not otherwise doe by reason of her small Fore-sayle, within foure dayes after by the goodnesse of God, came safely to an anchor at the Ile of Saint Martreines in France, where Sir George Carew made all the meanes hee might to get a new Mast, whereby hee might follow the Fleet. But vpon all that Coast hee could not prouide himselfe of any to fit so great a Gallyon. And therefore of necessitie hauing setled his Mayne-mast, he returned for England, and within few dayes arriued in the Hauen of Portsmouth.

Story of the S. Mathew.

S. Mathew brought home

Hee thus hauing brought the Saint Mathew (beyond all hope) safe within a good Harbour, not any thing disamayd with past perills, presently dispatched Captain Francis Slingsby in post to the Court, to aduertise the Lords of her Maiesties Councell, of the misfortunes which had befalne him, and therewithall humbly desired that he might be permitted to take her Maiesties ship called the Aduenture, which was then in that Harbour, and in her to follow the Fleet, which being granted he shipped himselfe in her, and according to the instructions (which were deliuered to euery Captaine of the Fleet) hee sought for the Admirall at the Greyne, which was the first Randeuous set downe in the instructions aforesaid, from thence hee made to the Rocke, and not finding the Fleet at either of these places, he sailed to the Cape Saint Foucent, where it was resolued by the Lord Admirall and Councell of the Warre to stand off and on, and to attend the coming home of the West Indies Fleet. There hee had intelligence by a small man of Warre of Plimouth, that the Generall with the whole Fleet was at the Ilands of the Asores, whereunto he directeth his course. And when hee was (as hee esteemed) within one hundred leagues of the Tercera, he had intelligence by another small man of Warre, in the which a man of Sir William Brookes was Captaine, that followed the Fleet for purchase, that the Lord Generall in his opinion was at that time vpon the Coast of England, for hee had left the Ilands fourteene daies before the Aduenture, and he did meet; vpon which intelligence he changed his course for England. And not farre from Vshent in the night, hee fell into the middest of a great Spanish Fleet, which had bin with the Adelantado vpon the Coast of England, & then homeward bound, but the night being stormy, he escaped that perill, and yet not without great danger. For one of the Spanish Gallions which was supposed to bee the Admirall (for shee carried a mightie Lanthorne in her Poope) passed so neere to the Aduenture, that their Mayne-yards in the end were foule one of the other, so as they hardly auoyded their stemming of their Ships, which in all likelihood must haue sunke one, or both. With this storme the Aduenture was forced into Ireland, into Corke Hauen in Munster, where hee repaired his Ship of certaine leakes shee had, and also mended her Mayne Mast, which was strangely shiuered with a whirlewind. And then putting to Sea againe for England, a little before day, in a storme the Ship was driuen vpon the lee shoare within Beachy in Sussex; and not being able to double that head-land, in the endeauouring whereof all the Sayles, being by violence of weather rent from the yards, to auoid running vpon the Rockes, they came to an anchor, euery Billow ouerwashing the Ships head, that neither by pumping, nor lading out of the water, they were able to free her: and the men in her so tired with labour, as no hope of safetie was left. The last remedy was to cut all the Masts and Tackle ouer-boord, which lightened the Ship, and by that meanes shee was preserued. After thirtie houres of this extreame perill, the storme ceased, and so by Gods fauour with a Iury Mast, which was made of the Boat Mast, and the Boat Sayle, hauing no Mast nor anchor left but one, he arriued,

C. Fr. Slingsby.

Sir George Carews aduentures in the Aduenture.

Spanish Fleet.

Corke Hauen.

Danger by storme.

ued vpon Allhallonday in the Downes, beyond all expectation of the Maſters and Mariners, who made no other reckoning then to be loſt.

S. Andrew. And theſe were the accidents that ſeparated Sir George Carew from the Fleet, in the huge ſtormes on Bartholmew day, in the Bay of Alchaſher, as aforeſaid. In which ſtorme the Saint Andrew at that time ſpent her mayne top Maſt, and loſt vs for three or foure dayes, but all the reſt of the Fleet, (except our Ships, which carried the Low-Country Souldiers) kept together in the Bay. And ſo many as came to vs after at the Rocke, were beaten alſo from the Admirall in that Bay, and ſo were many other Ships, which found vs after at the Rocke, to the number of thirty and odde ſayle. Whereupon a rumour was afterward raiſed, that the Reare-Admirall was gone away with thirty ſayle from the Fleet, to the ouerthrow of the intended ſeruice. Our Admirall ſtill bare in with the Land, & the moſt part of the Fleet followed the ſame courſe. The next day we made the high Land of Portugall, and within ſome three houres after, Cape Prior, where our Admirall with diuers other of the Fleet, did beare in ſo cloſe aboord the ſhore, as that all the Country ouer began to kindle fires: The which manner of diſcouering our ſelues (as I do remember) was much noted by diuers good Souldiers, as well by Sea, as Land: for indeed it was reputed no great policie, nor diſcretion in vs, to run in ſo cloſe aboard the ſhoare, if we had any ſecret or ſudden exploit to performe on that Coaſt, as it was pretended. For that Brauado of ours, did but giue them more warning to prouide for themſelues, and to preuent vs. And I haue obſerued that thoſe brauing humours, haue of late yeeres been the hindrance, and loſſe of many good fortunes, as well in Sir Francis Drake his two laſt Voyages to the Indies, and Sir Iohn Norris in his to Lisbon, by ſtaying at the Groyne, as alſo in others, &c.

Courſe of the Fleet.

Brauados often vnſeaſonable.

Towards the euening, we put roome againe from the Coaſt, and beat vp and downe in the Bay to free vs from thence, expecting a wind wherewith to double the North Cape, which, within two or three dayes wee had, and ſo paſſed along within ten leagues of the Coaſt by Ferrall, the Groyne, and Cape Bealim, and ſo we cathered the North Cape. And as the Fleet together was paſſing along towards the South, almoſt as farre as the Iles of Bayon, our Ship (the Waſtſpite) being then a middeſt them all, on the ſeuen and twentieth of Auguſt, broke her mayne Yard in ſunder in the very middeſt by the Parrell. Whereupon we preſently diſcharged a Peece of Ordnance, and made our misfortune knowne to our Admirall, who himſelfe ſpake with vs, and alſo at that time had a great leake broken out vpon his owne Ship. And there by his order and permiſſion we were willed to repaire our mayne Yard the beſt wee could, and vntill it were finiſhed in that birth to goe on with our Fore-ſayle towardes the Rocke before the winde, whiles hee with the Fleet would [illegible] in towardes the Coaſt, and ſo, wee there to ply vp and downe about the height of the Rocke; vntill his Lordſhip came vnto vs, or during the dayes limited in the generall inſtructions, and thence to paſſe onwards to the South Cape, and there to remaine according to the ſaid directions. And yet wee did not for two dayes after depart, though to our great diſeaſe; for wee wallowed in the trough of the Sea, and rowled ſo extreamely, as that wee had like to haue loſt our mayne Maſt alſo. After this order giuen, wee preſently tooke aduice the beſt wee could, and ſet our hands together for the repayring and finiſhing of our mayne Yard, being broken in the Parrell, a very euill place to amend: wherein that night wee could doe little good, more then to free the Sayles and Tackle from it. Notwithſtanding the very next morning the Admirall ſent a commandement to vs, that wee ſhould preſently attend him with all ſpeed, for that hee meant to put in with the Land: The which wee were altogether vnable to performe, our mayne Yard being in ſunder, and impoſſible it was ſo ſuddenly in one night to repayre it, and without it, wee were not able to worke vpon a wind, (as all Mariners know) hauing but our Fore-ſayle and Mizen, and the winde almoſt of the Land, ſo as it had beene but an idle labour, for the more we ſtriued, the faſter wee fell off. Beſides, if wee could haue layd the Land with that ſayle, it had beene a madneſſe to put our ſelues vpon the Enemies Coaſt in that eſtate, for if the wind had then changed to the Weſt, we wanting all our mayne Sayles, muſt haue yeelded or periſhed. So as in regard of this neceſſitie, we did for two daies, as aforeſaid ply vp and down, vntill wee had repaired our Yard, and fitted our ſayles vnto it, being now fiue foot ſhorter then it was before.

Waſtſpite diſtreſſed.

S. W. Brooke. Whileſt wee were thus diſtreſſed on our Enemies Coaſt, Sir William Brooke, Captaine of the Dread-nought came vnto vs and tarried with vs, out of his owne charitie and friendly diſpoſition, for there were no directions (that wee heard of) giuen to any to accompany vs in that diſtreſſe. Onely the Vice-Admirall (of his owne noble care) very kindly and honourably hayled vs, and offered what comfort and helpe hee could giue vs; ſome others afterwards did the like. But we hauing yeelded due thankes to the Vice-Admirall for ſuch his noble care and curteſie deſired no more company, but wiſhed all others of our Squadron to repaire vnto the Admirall, contenting our ſelues with Sir William Brooke in the Dread-naught, and two or three other ſmall men of our owne Squadron, which of their owne accord followed vs. Neither did we in all this time intreat the company of any one Ship more to ſtay with vs, albeit the contrary was very falſly ſuggeſted and reported in a ſtrange manner of phraſe, which was, that the Reare-Admirall vpon the breaking of his Mayne-yard, willed all his Squadron and thoſe that loued him to keepe him company, Vice-Admirals care.

Rumors.

company, and not to follow the Admirall. But as this was a monstrous vntruth, raised out of malice to the Reare-Admirall, thereby to incegle the Admirall against him; so the authors were afterwards ashamed of their impudent slander, when the truth was made manifest at our meeting againe with the Admirall and the Fleet at the Ilands of Asores.

As soone as wee had mended our Maine-yard, wee bare in with the Coast, making all the inquiry that we could for our Admirall and the Fleet, but could not haue any intelligence of them. Whereupon casting many coniectures, wee sent a small Man into the Iles of Bayon; but could learne no newes of him there. Then wee thought verily that hee would hold on his course for the South-Cape, according to the generall instructions, we well knowing that hee could not then put in for Ferrall or the Groine (as was afterward colourably suggested) the wind being flat against him, and our whole Fleet hauing ouer-shot it neere twentie leagues before that our Yard was broken; and therefore it was rather a pretence to seeme desirous to vndertake it, then that there was any possibilitie to performe it. For besides that wee had ouershot it, and the wind contrary, so as we could not recouer it again, both those Ships were wanting which were chiefly designed to bee aduentured in that seruice, namely the Saint Andrew and the Saint Mathew, two huge Gallions of the King of Spaines, that were but the yeere before taken at the sacke of Cales, and onely saued of fortie or fiftie saile that were then beaten and burnt to ashes. Vpon these reasons wee shaped our course for the Rocke, plying vp and downe in that height for a few dayes. In which time wee gaue chase to diuers Spanish ships which wee beate into Cast-keyes, and caused some of them to runne on ground, wee being so neere Cast-keyes as that we could number diuers tall ships that road there vnder the Fort. Here wee hourely expected our Admirall, being the very appointed place for a Randeuous to all the Fleet, and would gladly haue met with him being of our selues but a weake force to lye on that Coast, if the Spanish Armado had beene abroad, as wee were to suspect it was, or in a readinesse at the least. And therefore it was fouly falsified or mistaken of those that gaue it out, and carryed the newes into England, that wee had of purpose left and lost our Admirall to range the Coast alone at our pleasures. For being no stronger then wee were, and lying as wee did in the height that was appointed by the generall instructions to the whole Fleet, it was not to be imagined in any sense or reason, that wee desired to leaue or lose the Fleet vpon the breaking of our Maine-yard so neere the Coast of Spaine, and the Adelantadoes Forces then bruted to bee abroad. But indeed our Reare-Admirall commanded all our Squadron to follow the Generall, because he pretended to aduenture vpon the Groine. Yet we hoped, and so hee promised, that either hee would come off to vs againe where wee lay, or find vs without faile at the Rocke, but did neither: for there were three places of our Randeuous appointed, if any separation happened. The first at the North Cape, and failing there, then at the Rocke, and failing there, then at the South Cape. Now when all such ships as were sundred by tempest in the Bay of Alcasher, failed of their Admiral at the North Cape, they then sought him at the Rock, where they found the Reare-admiral, who held them altogether, and brought them to the Generall at the Ilands; else had they all returned home, after they had missed of some Admirall to command them at the third and last place of meeting: for none of our Fleet went so farre to the Southward.

S. Mathew and S. Andrew taken at Cadiz.

Whilest wee thus stayed about the Rocke, the Caruells of Lisbone, and of the parts thereabouts, would daily come swarming about vs like Butter-flyes, so neere, as that we might cast a stone into some of them, and yet could wee neuer catch any one of them, so yare and nimble they are. But if wee would haue bestowed any musket or great shot on such bables, wee might peraduenture haue killed some of their men, or sunke some of them; which wee forbare in hope to draw them to vs oftner, and then if any calme had happened, we might haue taken them with our Boats, and by them gotten some Intelligence. At the same time also there came to the Rocke neere thirtie saile of ships of our owne Victuallers and Transporters, amongst whom was Captain Sidney, Captaine White, Captain Berry, and others, some of whom wee tooke into vs out of their owne weake ships; who hauing lost the Generall in the Bay of Alcasher, in the storme aforesaid, sought him first at the North Cape; and missing him there, came to the Rocke, according to the generall instructions, and they by chance finding the Reare-Admirall at the Rocke, were held together till wee either found or heard from the Generall. After we had thus plied vp and downe about the height of the Rocke, and yet determined at last to haue passed on for the South Cape, there came athwart vs a small Barke of England, with whom wee communed, inquiring what newes in the South parts where they had beene. They told vs, that they had lately met a Man of Warre bound for England, that had taken an Indian man, naming the Captaine, who (as they said) informed them for certaine that the Atlantado was gone for the Ilands, to weft home the Indian Fleet. This report seemed to carry with it good likelihood of truth, for we heard before that the Atlantado was preparing to the Seas, and also were certain, that both the King of Spaine his Treasure, and other Indian Fleets were to come home that yeere. Besides, we did not suspect that one of our owne Country would be so lewd, or durst presume to informe her Maiesties Naues, with a meere false coyned suggestion, as indeed this was found to be afterward. For such a dishonest treacherous part may sometimes turne to a great inconuenience, in diuerting a whole Fleet by a false intelligence, and is a point better fitting a False intelligence by an *English*man.

Traitor then a true man, and well deserueth seuere and publike punishment for an example to all other. For although sea-faring men will now and then (as doe Poets and Painters) take liberty to fable, yet it is no good iesting nor dalying with Princes affaires in that sort, and therefore if I could call to mind the Captaine or Masters name, surely I would doe them the curtesie now to remember them.

Hereupon our Reare-Admirall thinking it very requisite, and his dutie to informe our Admirall of this aduertisement as soone as might bee, ernestly required the same Man to ply vp towards the North-Cape, all alongst the Coast as well as he could, (because it lay in his way homewards bound) to find out our Fleet, & to informe our Admiral of this Intelligence. But he answered in the hearing of all the company, that the Captaine that had taken this Indian Prize, had already sent the Admirall a Letter to the same effect. Yet the Reare-Admirall for the more suretie (doubting that a Letter might miscarry, or that no such Letter might bee sent, being but an excuse of this Man to put off the trouble of seeking out our Fleet, being a matter of great importance) commanded one of his small Men (that at that time followed vs) to deliuer the same aduertisement to our Admirall, as hee had receiued it by word of mouth; and to vse all diligence to seeke him, and the Fleet, and to deliuer the report truly in manner as it was related, and withall to signifie vnto his Lordship, that wee there attended him in that height according to the directions, and so would obserue all places and times appointed, and that in such sort his Lordship should be sure to heare of vs, vpon any occasion to wait on him. This message, and Messenger could sufficiently witnesse, that we had no intent nor desire to abandon the Fleet, or to sequester our selues, being at the place set downe in the generall instructions. This small Man that had this message in charge to deliuer to his Lordship, the next day (by good hap) found out the Fleet, and vpon deliuery of this newes, within two dayes after, our Reare-Admirall receiued two seuerall Letters to one effect from the Admirall one after another. First somewhat taxing him for not writing, then for his absence, and withal requiring him presently to follow him to the Ilands, whether he said he would (by Gods helpe) hasten to find the Adelantado, not doubting but to giue his Mistresse a better account of that seruice, then the Adelantado should yeeld his Master: so, or much to that effect the Letters went, for I my selfe read them (with the Reare-Admirall his permission) and therefore can truly report their contents.

Letters from the Admirall.

Vpon this suddaine and strict message, we presently altered our determination from going to the South-Cape, to hast to the Ilands, and therfore we presently gaue notice to Sir William Brooke and the rest of our consorts, of our Admirall his Letters, and what way he meant to take, and so instantly without any further delay, we shaped our course for the Ilands. But in this passage of ours towards the Ilands, as wee had a franke wind, so met wee with other lets. For our Maine-yard began againe to cracke, insomuch that wee were inforced to strengthen it with more fishing. And as commonly misfortunes neuer come alone, so in the necke of this trouble, our Mayn-mast began to shrinke also, springing great flawes in diuers places, in so much that at last we greatly doubted with euery high blast of wind, that it would haue beene blowne ouer-boord. This sudden disaster much troubled vs, and the more, to thinke what vnequall constructions would bee made thereof. Wee acquainted all the rest of our consorts with this late befallne mischiefe, and desired Sir William Brooke in the Dread-naught to carry the light for all the company, seeing that our ship was so defectiue that we must needs stay to see if we could make the Mast seruiceable, but would vse all our best means to come speedily after, desiring him, and all the rest to hast to our Admiral, and to signifie our misfortunes, and withal to make the more speed, for that if the Adelantado were at the Ilands, our Admirals Forces would be wel helped by their companies, & so for a few hours, we and our consorts parted, only we retained two little small Men with vs for our better comfort. Yet notwithstanding this order and direction giuen, so great were our desires to go on, & our labor such, as that the same night wee had new fished our crased Maine-mast with a spare Maine top Mast that lay by vs, and then so plied our sayles as that the next day towards the euening, wee ouertooke Sir William Brooke againe, and the rest of our consorts hasting towards the Ilands as was directed. And on the eight of September, in the yeere 1597. being Thursday, wee made the Ile called the Tercera, and weathered it to the North-west; where we met with an English Merchant that came from Saint Michaels, and had layen trading about those Ilands some six weekes together, but could not tell vs any newes of our Admirall and the Fleet, albeit they were passed by but two dayes before. Which shewes how easie a matter it is for shipping to passe by amongst those Ilands vnseene, and how difficult it is to find out such Ships among those Ilands, as would shelter themselues from men of Warre, and cannot not to bee met withall, seeing that so great a Fleet could passe by vnseene or vnheard of, by one that came iust from the Ilands, at the same time that our Generall came thither. And therefore it is a necessary obseruation for all such men of Warre, as would meet or intercept any shipping, that doth touch at those Ilands, or do come from thence, to keep in the maine sea, and so to attend their comming forth, and not to puzzle themselues with running in amongst those Ilands to seeke for purchase, except they haue others of their consorts lying in the Sea at the receite, if they chance to slip by, which is easily done. This Merchant informed vs of certaine West Indian men, and two Carracks, that a month before had touched there, bound for Spaine. And by this Merchant wee wrote into England how affaires went. In passing thus onwards we discouered Saint Georges Ilands, and there we

They shape their course for the Ilands.

New distresses.

Sep. 8. They make Tercera.

Note for the Ilands.

dispatched

diſpatched two of our ſmall men, with charge to ſearch about the Iſlands for our Fleete, and to enforme our Admirall, that we were going for Flores, and Cuernos, in hope to meete him there, withall willing thoſe ſmall men to come thither vnto vs. And yet I remember many in our Ship were doubtfull, and laid great wagers, that our Fleet was not yet come to the Iſlands, for that this Merchant could make no report thereof.

Whileſt we were before Saint Georges, we were very much becalmed for a day or two, and the weather extreamely hot, inſomuch as the winde could not beare the ſailes from the maſtes, but were faine to hull in the Sea, to our great diſcontentment, that before had vſed ſuch great diligence and haſte to meete with our Admirall, and the reſt of the Fleete. Notwithſtanding the winde began againe to be fauourable, and ſo ſetting forwards, the next of the Ilands that we made, were Gratioſa, Pyke, and Fayall. And as we ranged by Gratioſa, on the tenth of September, about twelue a clocke at night, we ſaw a large and perfect Rainbow by the Moone light, in the bigneſſe and forme of all other Rainbowes, but in colour much differing, for it was more whitiſh, but chiefly inclining to the colour of the flame of fire. This made vs expect ſome extraordinary tempeſtuous weather, but indeede it fell out afterward to be very calme and hot. This Rainbow by the Moone-light I doe the rather take occaſion to note; for that I remember that Plinie in his naturall Hiſtory of the world, ſpeaking of Meteors, denieth any Rainbow to be ſeene, but oppoſite to the Sunne, and neuer in the night ſeaſon: and yet (ſaith he) Ariſtotle reporteth for a rarity, that in his time there was a Rainbow ſeene by night, but withall affirmeth, that it could not be but at the full of the Moone. But in theſe parts they are very ordinary, as well when the Moone is not at the full, as otherwiſe, which maketh me to thinke, that theſe Iland were neuer knowne to the Greekes, nor to the Romans, nor that theſe former ages did truely conceiue or know many things, that in theſe latter times haue bin diſcouered. For although Salomon ſaith that nothing is new vnder the Sunne (which no doubt is moſt true, for all things haue had their being ſince the firſt Creation) yet all things haue not bin knowne in all places, and to all men alike. But as the long liues of men in the firſt ages (no doubt made their knowledge the greater by the benefit of long obſeruation: ſo againe, we in theſe latter dayes, by the tradition of their knowledge, left vnto vs, and alſo by the diſcouery of theſe things, which time hath reuealed, haue found out many ſecrets to them vnknowne. But to returne.

Rainbowe by Moonlight differing in color from thoſe of the Sunne.

The ſame night by the light of the Moone (which was then almoſt fallen with the Horiſon) we might eſpie certaine ſailes paſſing towards the Eaſtwards of Gratioſa; whereupon we gaue order that a couple of our ſmall men ſhould follow, and giue them chaſe, as we in the Waſtſpight likewiſe did, and hung out two lights to cauſe Sir William Brooke in the Dread-naught, and the reſt of our conſorts, to hold the ſame courſe with vs, but wee were followed by none of them, which when we perceiued, and the Moone-light being now by the earth ſo ſhaddowed from vs, as that we could hold no longer ſight of theſe ſailes (which had thruſt themſelues in amongſt the Iſlands) we caſt about, and held on our former courſe. But by this chaſing, for this little time (euen as we ſuſpected) we loſt the Dread-naught, and moſt of our conſorts, and neuer ſaw them after, vntill we met them with our Admirall, and the reſt of our Fleete at Flores; whither with ſcant windes we came, on the foureteenth of September, and then diſcouered all our Fleete. But at the firſt making of them, we ſtood ſomewhat doubtfull, whether it was our owne, or the Spaniſh Armado, they being as farre from vs, as we were able to ken out of our maine top, and therefore we did ſtill ſtriue to keepe into the weather, in approaching neere vnto them, vntill at laſt, we perfectly made them to be Engliſh bottomes. As ſoone as we were come within two leagues of them, the Seas being very calme, our Reare-admirall, my ſelfe, and ſome other Gentlemen of our ſhip, went aboord our Generall in a Barge, and dined with him, who ſeemed to be the ioyfulleſt man liuing for our arriuall, proteſting, that he neuer beleeued that we would leaue him, although diuers perſwaded him the contrary; and acknowledged that hee was ſorry for a Letter which he had written by Maſter Robert Knolles into England againſt vs, promiſing preſently to make a diſpatch of purpoſe, contrary to the former: hauing alſo found ſoone after by examination, that not any one of theſe thirtie and odde ſailes of victuallers, and tranſporters, which came now with vs, were drawne from him by the Reare-admirall, but that they all came to the Rocke, to ſeeke the Generall, and there by chance found vs, who drew them to the Iſlands, much againſt their deſires, being moſt of them in great diſtreſſe. Afterwards wee enquired aboord our Generall, what had paſſed with them ſince we departed, vpon the breaking of our maine yard, before the Iſles of Bayon; and we learned that in all this time, they had done nothing but ranged the Seas, to ſeeke the Adelantado, and were come to the Iſlands but three daies before vs, where the Gouernours of the Iſlands of Flores and Cuernos, came to our Generall.

They come to the Fleet.

Entertainment by the General

The Inhabitants of which two Iſlands ſeemed to be but a wretched needie kinde of people, and yet as crafty, as baſe, and bare. Theſe very ſubmiſſly humbled themſelues vnto our Generall, bringing with them Fruites, Hens, and other freſh victuall, imploring fauour, and mercie at his hands, and that he would vouchſafe to giue them his ſafeguard vnder his hand, to protect them from the ſpoile, and inuaſion of our men: alledging for themſelues that they were an harmeleſſe poore people, that gaue offence to none, but dwelt in Iſlands that yeelded comfort and releefe oftentimes, to all Sea-faring men in their long Voyages, betweene the Indies and Chriſtendome, and

Inhabitants of Flores & Cuernos

Digitized by Google

and were anciently subiects to the Portugals, friends to our Nation, and nothing guiltie of the Hostilitie betweene vs, and the Spaniards, who (as they said) did vsurpe, and tyrannize both ouer the Portugals and them. Our Generall heard, and entertained them, with great curtesie, and told them that he came not to afflict poore men, but was sent by the Queene his Mistris, to chastise the intollerable pride and insolencie of the Spanish, whose Indian Gold and riches, were imploied onely to the oppression, and disturbance of diuers Christian States and Princes; and these Ilands being the chiefe places of retrait and refreshing for his Fleetes, that passed betweene Europe and the Indies, were great meanes, and helpes, to further their boundlesse ambition, and tyrannie, with other discourse to that effect. And so inquiring of them very precisely, the times, and seasons that the Indian Fleetes, both inward, and outward bound, held in passing by those Ilands; in conclusion gaue them diuers gifts, and his Protection in wrighting vnder his hand and seale from the violence of our Forces, which was very respectiuely obserued, euen to the value of an Hen, which no man durst take without paying for. Such was the moderation and bountie of this noble Gentleman our Generall, indued with many good gifts, though at the last he failed in the vse of them.

Earle of Essex his answer and behauiour to the Ilanders.

After we had bin aboord our Generall, and dined with him, he acquainted our reare Admirall with the many coniectures, and surmises of our absence, and withall named vnto him some of those men that had taxed him secretly with strange reports, and yet pretended to loue him, which he protested (as aforesaid) he neuer beleeued, but thereby the better obserued some mens scandalous, and cankered dispositions. In this sort did our Generall receiue and welcome our reare Admirall, with the greatest kindenesse, and inward familiaritie that might be, and all the Gentlemen of his Companie with honorable curtesie, to the great dislike and hart-burning of some that much enuied that liking, which of his owne disposition, our Generall did beare vnto him: For albeit the Earle had many doubts and iealousies buzd into his eares against the other, yet I haue often obserued, that both in his greatest actions of seruice, and in his times of chiefest recreations, he would euer accept of his counsell and company, before many others that thought themselues more in his fauour. And as touching the Aduertisement that was sent into England, from the Isles of Bayon, by Master Robert Knolles, in a Pinnace called the Guiana, concerning vs, that were forsaken, and left alone vpon the breaking of our Maine yard: whereupon was pretended that many great exploits should haue bin performed vpon the coast of Spaine, if wee had not fallen from them (as was vntruely suggested and reported) his Lordship promised the reare Admirall then, to send another aduertisement, how we were all met againe, and had bin formerly seuered by misfortunes onely, and not by any wilfull default in the reare Admirall, as was doubted. And that Aduertisement sent formerly by Master Knolles, we well knew proceeded not out of any particular malice of the Generall to vs, but onely to take that as a fit excuse to free himselfe from the enterprises of Ferall, or the Groine, which he had promised her Maiestie to vndertake, but saw it impossible to performe, by reason of the former crosses, and our long stay in Plimmouth; and therefore was glad to take the opportunity of any colour to satisfie her Maiestie, and to discharge himselfe of that burthen, which we did all perceiue, and therefore did striue the lesse the publish our Apologies, or to contest with a man of his place and credit, which (though in a right) had bin but bootelesse, and meere folly; and therefore we left him to his best excuse, and our apparant innocencie. And for the more plaine manifesting of the Message, I haue thought it not amisse, here to insert the true copie of the Instructions verbatim, that our Generall sent by Master Robert Knolles into England, vpon these accidents before the Isles of Bayon.

Earle of Essex his respect to Sir W. Ralegh.

That we weighing Ancor and setting saile from the sound of Plimmouth, the seuenteenth of this moneth of August, hauing sometimes calmes, but for the most part, Westerly and Northeasterly windes, we fell on thursday, the fine and twenty of this moneth with the Land, which is to the Eastward of the Cape Ortingall, which land we made in the morning about ten of the clocke, and stood in with the shoare, till three in the afternoone. Then finding the winde scant to ply to the Southward, I stood all night into the Sea, and the next morning in againe to the Land. By which boords, by reason of the head-sea, and the bare winde, we got nothing. On Friday night I stood off againe to the Sea, and about midnight the winde comming all Northerly, we got a good slant, to lye all along the coast: on Saturday in the morning, I discouered the Saint Andrew, whom we had lost sight of two or three dayes before. I bare with her, and had no sooner got her vp, but Sir Walter Rawleigh shot off a peece, and gaue vs warning of his being in distresse. I presently bare with him, and found that he had broken his maine yard. Whereupon I willed him to keepe along the coast that birth that he was, till he got in the height of the North Cape, and my selfe hauing a desperate leake broke out as euer ship swam withall, which I was faine to lye by the lee, and seele, to stop it, which how it held vs, you can report: and (God be thanked) that night we ouercame it, and stopped it. The next morning we all came to Cape Finister, saue the Saint Matthew, who vpon breaking of her fore masse went home: and the Wastspight with whom the Dreadnaught went without stop to the South Cape. This is all that is hapned to me. If her Maiestie aske you, why there was no attempt vpon the Fleete at Teral, you may say, I neither had the Saint Matthew, which was the principall ship for that execution, nor the Saint Andrew, till mine owne ship was almost sunke, and I not able to make saile, till Sir Walter Rawleigh with his owne ship the Dreadnaught, and very neere twenty saile were gone gone. Wee are now gone to lye for the Indian Fleete, for by Spaniards wee haue taken, wee finde the Adelantado is not put to Sea this yeere. Of our successe, her Maiestie shall from time to time be aduertised: you shall acquaint Master Secretarie with this instruction; and beare to him, and all our friends you must excuse our haste.

We being thus met all at Flores, desired our Generall to giue vs, and our consorts leaue, to water there before we departed thence, as his Lordship and the rest had done before, which he yeelded vnto, and very nobly lent vs his owne long Boate, for our better speede, willing vs there to water, whilest he with the rest of the Fleete, did ply vp and downe to looke out for the Adelantado, or any Indian Fleete, that being the very fit place, and season for them. Hereupon whilest our men and Mariners were prouiding to water, our Reare-admirall, with Sir William Brooke, my selfe, and diuers other Gentlemen went ashoare, to stretch our legs in the Ile of Flores, and to refresh our selues with such victuals as we could there get for our monie. And at our first landing there, we met with the Lord Gray, Sir Gylly Merricke, and other Gentlemen, and wee altogether walked a mile or two into the Countrie, and there dined in a little Village, where the bare-legged Gouernour caused such things to be brought vnto vs, for our monie, as the Island afforded In other sort we tooke nothing, which was very faire wars.

This Island seemes to be somewhat mountainous, yet hauing very good store of Fruits, Wheat, and other Corne. Their Corne they doe all keepe in large hollow vaults within the earth, hauing no other way nor entrance into them, but by a round hole in the top of the vault, onely so big as a man may creepe into it, and when it is closed vp with a planke, and ouerstrewed with earth is very hard to be found out by strangers, for the which purpose they are so made, and much like the Caues in Gascoyne, and Languedocke, and such as are mentioned by Cæsar to be vsed in Affricke. This Island lies more subiect to the inuasion of Sea-faring men, then any of the rest; for there all traders of the Indies doe vsually water, and refresh themselues. But here I must not forget to relate, that before we had our leaue to water, or were departed from the Generall, a Counsell was called, and holden, for the taking in of some of the Islands, and an orderly course set downe for the same; which was in this sort concluded on: The Admirall, and Reare-admirall to vndertake Fayall; the Lord Thomas Howard Vice-admirall, and the Marshall Vere, to vndertake Gratiosa; The Lord Mountioye, Lieutenant Generall, and Sir Christopher Blunt Coronell Generall of the Foote to Saint Michaels: and the Netherland Squadron, was quartered to Pike, where the greatest store of Wines doe grow, and therefore would not be taken in ill part of them, as we presumed. The reason why we resolued to master and waste all these Islands was, because it was determined by the Generall to attempt the Tercera it selfe: which enterprise was put off, because the Reare-admirall, and with him twenty or thirty saile were wanting. But being now (contrary to all expectation, and to many mens hopes) arriued, this resolution receiued a second life; but it was first thought necessary to take from them, and to helpe our selues, with all the victuals and other commodities that those Islands could afoord: For the performance of which with the more speede, we diuided our selues into foure Companies, as before written: But surely the fortune of those poore wretches was lamentable, that fell into the Flemmings hands; for I thinke no people on the earth, can vse lesse mercy, or greater insolencies then they doe, in all the places that they master, which are subiect to the Spanish Gouernment: and yet I must say truely for them, that the Spaniards against whom vsed such tyrannie, and outrage in their iurisdictions ouer that industrious people, as hath well merited their irreconcileable malice, and wrball hath cost the Spanish King many millions of Ducates, besides the life of many a proud Castilian, since the Execution of the Counts Egmount and Horne. And it is very admirable to see what heart and courage those Netherlanders are now growne vnto, and how powerfully three or foure little Prouinces, doe resist the forces of that mightie King, that keepes Millaine, Naples, and Sicill in great bondage; in despight of all the Italians, who doe thinke themselues for valour, and for policie the Mirrours of the Earth, and yet bow their neckes to the Spanish yoake.

A Counsell for taking in the Ilands.

Hollanders and Spaniards enmitie implacable.

After this consultation for taking in of the Islands, as aforesaid, and leaue giuen vnto vs, and our consorts to water with all the speede we could, at Flores, we hauing prepared our Caske, and all things in a readinesse to bring our fresh water aboord, about midnight, being the sixteenth of September, there came vnto vs from our Generall, Captaine Arthur Champernowne, with this message; That my Lord Generall was borne vp for Fyall, and ment presently to take it in, and therefore willed vs with all speede to follow him instantly, and though wee could not ouertake him, yet at least to finde him there so soone as we could, and the same word was likewise deliuered to Sir William Brooke, and the rest, that lay there to water. And further, our Generall lent vs word, that we should supply all our wants of water, and fresh victuals at Fayall. And this night as we rode at ancor before Flores, we saw another Rainebow, by the Moone light, as before, and after the same manner, which (contrary to Plinies report of Aristotels opinion) was seene, though not at a full Moone, for the other was so seene some seuen dayes before, in the which space, there could not be two full Moones. Vpon this Message brought by Captaine Champernowne we forbare watering, and hasted all we could, to weigh our anchors, and to follow our Generall. And therefore gaue a warning peece or two, to our Consorts before wee departed, and afterwards pack'd on all Rainbow by the Moone.

the

the sailes we could make to follow our Generall, whom we could not ouertake, nor finde.

Fayall. The next morning we made Fayall, and entred the roade, and there missed of him also, contrary to our hopes, and to our great discontent. Whereat we could not but greatly maruell, because when he sent for vs, he was six leagues neerer it, then we were, and besides, set saile towards it sixe or eight houres before vs. Being arriued in the roade, wee beheld before our eyes a very fine Towne, pleasantly seated alongst the shoare side: from whence presently vpon the sight of our entrance into the roade, they began to packe away with bag, and baggage all they could, with carriages of Horses and Carts, Women, Children, Friers, and Nunnes, and so continued in transporting all vp into the Countrey for two dayes together. There was besides a strong Fort at one end of the Town, and another on the top of a very high Mountain, neere adioyning, by nature very vnaccessible, and steepe, and artificially fenced with Flanckers, Rampiers, and Ditch, and in it six Peeces of great Artillerie, mounted vpon carriages, and two hundred Spaniards in garrison, beside others of the Iland. These made certaine shot at our Ships as they anchored in the roade, but did not much harme, and set vp a great red Auncient for vs to gaze at: Besides, there were presently sent six Companies with their Colours, to intrench themselues vpon the shoare side, to impeach our landing: Hereupon our Reare Admirall in his Barge, accompanied with my selfe onely and Captaine Morgan, rowed close aboord the high Fort, and all alongst the shoare side, towards the Towne, to see what fit place there was to make a discent against our Generals comming. From whence we were saluted with diuers musket shot, that missed vs but narrowly by good fortune, for we vndiscreetly had with vs neither Targets, nor Armors, but wished for them when it was to late. And therefore as well by that experience, as also by others in the same iourney,

Vnarmed rashnesse. that I saw at our landing vpon a fortified trench, I saw it to be but an idle and vnseruiceable bravery, for men that are to doe seruice, to expose their vnarmed bodies and limbs, to the mercy of a Musket, or the push of a Pike: whereby they can neither with that abilitie, nor resolution, prosecute that they haue in hand, nor yet so well preserue themselues as they ought to doe, for the bettering of their attempts. Besides, out of a Christian regard, they should not desperately cast away themselues, or carelesly spill their owne blood, and the liues of many others, by such brauing, and foolish examples. This night as we roade in the Harbour, there swomme aboord vs from the Towne two Portugals, that discouered vnto vs many things, greatly encouraging vs to this exploit. And of this we may bouldly take knowledge, that the Portugals,

Spaniards hated by the Portugals. and Inhabitants of those Ilands, doe infinitely hate, and malice the Spaniards, and their Gouernment, and would (no doubt) free themselues thereof gladly, if they were sure to fall vnder any other Gouernment that were able to protect them from the Spaniards. And therefore if any powerfull Monarch, or State did attempt it, they should not be troubled as with a Conquest, for all the Inhabitants would soone be perswaded to reuolt, and take part with the inuaders, for the aduancing of that businesse.

While we thus expected our Generall in vaine (to our no little maruell) that thought he had bin there before vs, according to Captaine Champernownes report (the winde being as good then for him as for vs) our Reare Admirall called a counsell of many Captaines, and Officers (that were come thither by order) to consult of the taking of the Towne, if our Generall came not, thinking it a great shame and pittie to let slip so faire a pray, so neere at hand, without attempting it in time, before they had carried all away. Besides a great scorne and disgrace wee should doe our selues, to enterprise nothing vpon them that had begun the warres, shooting first at vs as we roade at ancor, and then after their bringing downe to the water side so many Auncients, did proudly as it were inuite vs to assaile them, if we durst, hauing withall, hung out a red Flagge of defiance, from the top of the high Fort. The hope of the wealth of this good Towne, and the ransoming of Houses and Prisoners, together with those brauadoes which they shewed, did so set on fire all our Mariners and Souldiers, as that they began to mutine, and raile on the Reare Admirall, and at all the Commanders there, taxing them for these delaies, as not daring to attempt the taking thereof: Besides, they were the more eagerly set vpon the spoile, and gaining of this Towne, and Fort, for that they saw no great likelihood of benefit by this Voyage, but what was gotten ashoare in the Islands. In conclusion, albeit we heard no newes of our Generall in two dayes more expectation, yet at the counsell of Captaines which our Reare Admirall had assembled, some of them varied much from the common desire, and would by no meanes assent to the landing, without my Lord Generall his knowledge. And of this opinion was Sir Guilly Mericke, Sir Nicholas Parker, and some other Captaines: Our Reare Admirall, with Sir William Brooke, my selfe, Sir William Harney, and other Gentlemen, and Commanders of our Reare Admirall his Squadron (called to this consultation) were of a contrary opinion, iudging that my Lord Generall would repute vs but Idlers, and Cowards, to lye so long, before so good a Towne, with so many Ships and men, and to doe nothing in his absence, seeing them hourely before our eyes, so fast to carry, and packe away their goods and wealth. And this was also the common opinion and bruite, as well of the multitude, as of the Low Countrie Captaines. But yet the violent and earnest perswasions of Sir Guille Morricke, did so preuaile with vs, vrging our obedience and duetie to our Generall, as that we staied from the Enterprise at that time, and expected our Generals comming one day longer, especially for that they perswaded vs, if his Lordship came not the next day, then themselues would also land with vs.

Which

Digitized by Google

Which when we had alſo expected in vain, and the winde changing ſomewhat vnfit for that Roade, our Reare Admirall, and diuers of his Squadron, and many other of the Ships following him, wered, and coaſted about the point, to the North-weſt ſide of the Iſland, ſome foure miles further from the Towne then we were before, and there let fall our ancors, being then a better Roade then the firſt, as the winde was changed. But Sir Guille Merricke with ſome fiue or ſixe Ships of his conſorts, ſtaied ſtill in the firſt Roade, and would not budge. When we had in this ſort changed our Roade, and being now the fourth day of our arriuall before Fayall (which was not aboue a daies ſailing from the place, from whence our Generall ſent for vs, wee might ſee before vs, a very fine and pleaſant Countrie, full of little Villages, and fruitfull fields: and therefore we much deſired to refreſh our ſelues aland there with victuals, and water, as our Generall had promiſed we ſhould doe, when we came to Fayall, and as diuers others had done before vs at Flores; and as we had then, but that we were called away to Fayall by Captaine Champernownes ſodaine meſſage from the Generall, as was aforeſaid. And in truth we were in great want of freſh water, which we had not renued ſince our ſetting out from Plimouth. All theſe occaſions conſidered, and we being now retired from the Towne and Forts, we all reſolued that wee might without offence, with a few of our owne men, goe aſhoare, and refreſh our ſelues, and ſeeke for water: whereupon we manned a Barge, a long Boate, and a Pinnace with threeſcore Muskets, and forty Pikes, rather to guard our ſelues in our landing, and watering with diſcretion, then expecting any encounter or reſiſtance, from the Towne or Forts, on the other ſide of the Iſland. But our men were no ſooner placed in our Boates, and all things ordered, and we ready to put off from the Ships ſide, but we might diſcouer ſixe Auncients of foote, and ſome doſen Horſemen comming on a ſpeedy march from the Towne and Forts, directly towards the place where wee were to make our diſcent; for from one ſide of the high Fort on the Mountaine, they might alſo ouerlooke vs, where our ſhips roade, and diſcouer all our preparation.

When we had a while aduiſed of this new Brauado, that they went about, and ſaw them ſtill to come on faſter, with ſo many ſtrong companies of men (or at the leaſt the bodies of men furniſhed with womens hearts) and had made ſuch haſte, as that they poſſeſſed themſelues of the Trenches and Flankers, where we were to land, and there had placed their Companies, and Collors, attending our approach, as they made ſhew, by waiuing their Swords, and diſplaying their Auncients in great brauery (for doubtleſſe they thought we feard to land in their faces, becauſe we lay ſo long before the Town, and neuer attempted any thing, and were ſo ſhrunke aſide off; after they had prouoked vs ſo with great ſhot, and many other affronts) we ſeeing that prrportion of an hundred men (prouided onely to guard our watering) to be too few to aſſault, and win a landing vpon ſo many, in a place of ſo great diſaduantage, and yet diſdaining to goe backe, or make any ſhew of feare; our Reare Admirall in his Barge rowed to Sir William Brookes Ship, and to Sir William Harueyes, and deſired them, and ſome other Sea Captaines, to accompany him in landing, with ſuch men as conueniently they could furniſh: For (ſaid he) ſeeing theſe Spaniards and Portugali are ſo gallant to ſeeke and follow vs, and to keepe vs from watering, wee will try our fortunes with them, and either win our landing, or gaine a beating.

Sir William Brooke, Sir William Harney, and ſome others, very willingly aſſented, and preſently there were made ready with ſhot, and Pike one hundred and ſixtie men more in Boates. And after this our Reare Admirall rowing by Captaine Bret, Sidney, White, Berry, and other Captaines of the Low Countrie Souldiers, that were there abrood in other Ships, they all cried out to take them and their companies with them, aſſuring him, that if he aduentured to land with Mariners, and with his owne attendants, without ſome Companies of Land Souldiers, hee would receiue a diſgrace. He anſwered, that he durſt not take any of my Lord Generall his company of the Low Countries, no knowing in what ſeruice he ment to vſe them; but he was reſolued with the Gentlemen, and company of his owne Squadron, firſt to make a diſcent, and then to call them, and ſend Boates for them, if he proceeded any further, and that neither my Lord Generall, nor any of his traine, ſhould haue cauſe to be aſhamed of vs, for vndertaking that in the face of our Enemies, which we durſt not follow, and performe. And therefore told thoſe Captaines, that hee would firſt attempt to win a landing, and then after if they could but ſecond him aſhoare with two hundred men more, hee would vndertake to lodge them that night in the Towne, and the next night after in the Forts. Theſe Captaines were all glad of the newes, and promiſed to come after vs, if we would ſend our Boates for them; for moſt of their Ships had loſt their Boates with foule weather.

This order and direction being giuen, we haſted as faſt as our Oares could ply without the company of any Low Countrie Souldiers (being as I ſaid two hundred and ſixty ſtrong, and the enemy more then the double as many) to the landing place which was firſt guarded with a mighty ledge of Rockes, ſome forty paces long into the Sea, and afterwards trenched, and flanked with earth and ſtone, and onely a narrow lane betweene two wals left for our Entrance. But withall, we cauſed ſome of our Pinnaces that carried Ordnance, to lye as cloſe to the ſhoare as they could, to flanke and beate vpon them in their trenches a little before, and iuſt as wee made our approach; which we found to good purpoſe, and as well performed, eſpecially by one Captaine taine Banker, in a fine Flee Boate of the Flemmish Squadron. But if there had bin but one hundred Low Countrie Spaniards at that defence, it had coſt many of our liues, & yet perhaps haue miſſed our purpoſe too: For a ſmall company with any reſolution, might haue made good that place, againſt a farre greater force then ours were at that time. But as we made onwards with our Boates, the ſhot plaied ſo thicke vpon vs, as that in truth the Mariners would ſcarce come forwards, hauing the leſſer liking to the buſineſſe, the neerer they came to it. And in like ſort did I ſee ſome there ſtagger, and ſtand blanke, that before made great ſhewes, and would gladly be taken for valiant Leaders: and ſome of theſe, our Reare Admirall did not ſpare to call vpon openly, and rebuke aloud with diſgracefull words, ſeeing their baſeneſſe.

Hard place to land in.

Helpe by Pinnaces.

Baſeneſſe of ſome.

And withall finding a generall amazement amongſt the Mariners, and as it were a flay amongſt all the Boates, well perceiuing that this manner of houering, was both more diſgracefull, and alſo more vnſafe, lying ſo open to the enemies ſhot (which through feare and amazement the Mariners, and Rowers, neither obſerued nor vnderſtood) with a loud voice commanded his Watermen to rowe in full vpon the Rockes, and bad as many as were not afraid, to follow him: Hereupon ſome Boates ran in with vs, and out of them there landed Maſter Garret a Pentioner, now Earle of Kildare, a Noble and valiant Gentleman; Sir William Brooke, Sir William Harney, Sir Iohn Scot, Maſter Duke Brooke, Captaine Henry Thinne, Captaine White, Maſter Thomas Ramsey, Maſter Walter Chute, Captaine Arthur Radford, Maſter Henry Allen, Captaine William Morgan, Maſter Charles Mackart, and diuers other Gentlemen, whoſe names I would not omit, if I could call them all to minde, And ſo clambring ouer the rockes, and wading through the water, we paſſed pell mell, with Swords, Shot, and Pikes vpon the narrow Entrance. Whereupon thoſe that were at the defence, after ſome little reſiſtance, began to ſhrinke, and then ſeeing vs to come faſter on vpon them, ſuddenly retiring, caſt away their weapons, turned their backes, and fled, and the like did the reſt in the higher Trenches, and quickly recouered the hils, and the woods, being a people very ſwift, and nimble of foote; for we could take none of them, but ſuch as after yeelded vnto vs. And as for their Auncients, we could not recouer one, for the Horſemen that they had, carried them cleane away. And in this ſort we gained both our landing, and our Enemies Trenches. In which attempt ſome few men were drowned, and ſlaine, diuers hurt, and two long Boates bulged, and loſt. And after that we ſaw all things cleare, we aſſembled our Troopes together, and refreſhed our ſelues, with ſuch comfort, as we had there, which done, we ſent backe our Boates for thoſe Low Countrie Captaines afterward; who vpon their arriuall congratulated our good ſucceſſe, in taking ſo ſtrong a peece of ground, fortified, and guarded with ſo many men. When theſe Captaines were come vnto vs, we then tooke our ſelues to be a prettie Armie, being then in ſtrength to the number of foure hundred and ſixtie well armed, and appointed: whereof there were of Captaines and Gentlemen of good ſort thirty, or forty which gaue great life to the buſineſſe.

Sir W. R. his reſolution.

They land.

Flight of the enemy.

More actiue feete then hands.

And hauing done ſo much already, we then thought it the beſt way to goe through with the matter, and to prepare the Towne in a readineſſe for our Generall, and to make our ſelues Burgeſſes thereof in the meane ſeaſon, and therefore our Reare Admirall appointed Captaine Bret to vſe the Office of Sergeant Maior, and gaue direction to the other Captaines to aduance their Colours, and to call their Companies together, in a readineſſe, and ſo putting our Troopes in order, we marched directly toward the Towne, where by the way, diuers of theſe ſame very Spaniards, and Portugals, that a little before ſo braued vs, came and rendred themſelues in great humility, with white Napkins on the end of ſtickes, all whom, wee receiued, and well intreated, vſing ſome for Guides, and ſome for our Carriages, and others to fetch vs in freſh Victuals, and Fruites. And it is worth the noting, to ſee the farre differing humors, vpon the change of Fortunes, in theſe Spaniards, and Portugals. For where they conquer or command, no people are ſo proud, and inſolent, and when they are once maſtered, and ſubdued, no Nation of the world ſo baſe, or fuller of ſeruile crouching, and obſeruance, as though on a ſodaine Nature had framed them in a new mould, ſo ſoone in an inſtant will they fall from ſouereaigntie to ſlauery. And ſurely (at home) they are in generall but a baggage people, timorous, and very vnwarlike. As we haue well experienced by ſeuerall inuaſions; whereof one Army was conducted by Sir Iohn Norris, and Sir Francis Drake to Lisbona, and the other by the Earle of Eſſex, and the Lord Admirall Howard to Cadis, without any reſiſtance, encounter in the field, or ſhow of aſſayling our forces by battaile, all the while we ſtaied there. But afterwards with a little hardening, and hartening in the Warres, wee ſee them prone very braue, and valiant Souldiers.

Spaniards and Portugals yeeld themſelues.

Spaniards and Portugall ſcholers of Fortun extreame in extremes.

And are not other Nations ſo? Vſus promptos facit.

This Towne was ſome foure miles from this landing place, and all the Country in which wee marched very champion, with pretty little riſing hils, and all the fields ouer full of Mellons, Potatoes, and other Fruites. Betweene vs, and the Towne, was this high Fort, whereof I ſpake before, and that other Fort at the end of the Towne: By theſe two we were reſolued to paſſe, the better thereby to diſcouer and obſerue their ſtrength, and ſituation: although there was another way that led to the Towne, ſome two miles further about, which we tooke not. But our reſolution was the next morning to goe in hand with theſe Forts, which now we could not performe, the day being too far ſpent, and our men already ouerwearied with the laſt worke, together ther with a long march, and extreame hot weather, besides want of victuals. And therefore for that night we ment onely, either by faire or foule meanes to possesse our selues of the Towne, and there to lodge, and so to content our selues, as hauing performed already, a sufficient daies worke. But in our march, as we approached neere the high Fort (by which of necessitie we were now to passe) they did very fiercely beate on vs both with great and small shot, hurting diuers, and killing some of our people. Amongst others I saw a very strange accident happen to Captaine William Morgan, by whom my selfe at that time stood, when from the Fort he receiued vpon a round buckle of his girdle, iust in the forepart, a Musket shot, that bruised all his belly blacke, in a round spot, and battered the Bullet flat at his feete, but did him no other hurt. Hee was in his doublet and hose without any Armour, or Target, for the which a little before I found fault with him, and his answere to me was, that his fleth was of the Musket proofe, as indeede it after proued, with the helpe of a buckle of a Spanish girdle, and good fortune besides, which in the common opinion fauoureth the valiant.

Strange accident of a shot.

In this approaching towards the Fort, our Reare Admiral accompanied with diuers other Gentlemen of the best sort, to the number of forty, in the head of all the Troopes, with his leading staffe, and no other Armour then his Collar (a brauery in a chiefe Commander not to be commended) led on the Company with soft march, full in the face of the Fort, descending downe a little hill, whilest with their great Ordnance, and Musketeir, we were very shrewdly pelted. But he, with this little Vaunteguard was no sooner past, and entred vnder the couert of their trenches, and barricadoes, that were at the foote of this steepe hill, but the maine body of our little Armie, that a while marched in good order, began presently to breake their rankes, and from marching fell to flat running in straggling manner, so soone as euer they began to finde themselues within the mercy of the Musket shot, and so continued in this disorderly, and timorous course, vntill they were vpon our heeles, vnder the wals, and trenches, almost as soone as we, that were in manner of a Vaunteguard come some twelue score before them in a steady slow march. Our Reare Admirall, and we all cried out on them for this shamefull disorder, and taxed Captaine Bret, and Captaine Berry, with other of the Captaines for it, and of them demanded, if these were the men, that should haue done vs such stead in our landing, to saue vs from dishonour, or if this be the manner of their old Low Country Troopes, to shew such base cowardise, at the first sight of the Enemie, and for Musket shot so farre off from a Fort. The fault was not surely in these Captaines, for they were well knowne, and shewed themselues to be honest and resolute men, and did their best to stay this disorder. But their answere was this, that these companies, that did so beastlike behaue themselues, were in deede men taken out of Flushing, and Brill, the Cautionary Towns, and raw Souldiers that euer liued in a safe Garrison, & seldome or neuer had seene enemie, or incountered with shot in the field. And therefore for these kinde of Low Countrie Souldiers, they said, we should neuer finde them, but as base and backward fellowes, as the other Regiments that had followed the Campes were ready and valiant. And as it seemed to vs then, and as since I haue heard diuers confirme, their answere was true, and grounded vpon reason and Experience. And therefore it is not amisse to take good notice of such as onely serue to take pay, to walke rounds, and guard ports in Garrison Townes, for in the field they will most commonly be missing, or at least (if present) doe little hurt for conscience sake.

Reare Admirall taxed.

Disorder.

Difference twixt Campe and Garrison Souldiers.

We being thus come vnto the foote of the high Fort, and vnder couert of the Trenches, and wals, which they had abandoned, retiring themselues into their fortifications, and strengths on the top of the Hill; our Reare Admirall commanded Captaine Bret to appoint a Sergeant or two, with some few shot, to goe proue and discouer the way towards the Towne, and take safe in hand with them one of our Portugall guides, for the more assurance, and for the better instructions for conducting the Troopes, because he was informed by the Guides, that the way in diuers places lay very open, and dangerous to the shot of the high Fort, as well as to the Fort at the Townes end. And the worse, by reason of low wals made of loose stones, on either side of the wayes, which the great Artillery, and Musketeir would beate vpon, and scatter amongst vs, and so indeede afterwards in the march we found it true. Captaine Bret answered, that although it had pleased our Reare Admirall to appoint him to another Office, yet, if he would expresly command him, he would also suruey this passage himselfe. But it was not thought fit at that time to want the Sergeant Maior amongst such raw, and disorderly troopes; and therefore he was againe willed to appoint a Lieutenant, and a Sergeant or two, to goe about that businesse, in manner as was aforesaid. But vpon this order so giuen, Captaine Bret made report, that hee found the Sergeants and Lieutenants very vnwilling to vndertake this discouery, making the passage very difficult, by reason that they saw them from the hill top, to beate so dangerously with their great Artillery vpon vs, and the loose wals, & also to ply vs so fast with their Musketeir, the which they might better doe on that way. And therefore the Troopes were very desirous, to haue passed by with some speede, and not in any orderly march, and strength, which indeede had bin a very foule, and also an hazardous course. For as we were credibly informed, the Island was able to make a thousand men furnished with weapons, and wee were perswaded (or at least to suspect) that they would gather the body of their most strength, for the defense of their best Towne, towards the which we were now marching.

Our Reare Admirall seeing all men to make such scrupulositie of this businesse, when Captaine Bret had related vnto him the backwardnesse of these Low Countrie Garrison Souldiers, thereunto answered, that he would not offer that to any, which he would himselfe refuse to vndertake, if neede required; although it were not the dutie and office of the chiefe Commander, to vndergoe so ordinary a seruice, but a thing duely appertaining to the inferior Officers, & Souldiers: Notwithstanding (said he) though I could inforce others to doe it, they shall well perceiue, that I my selfe will doe that which they dare not performe; whereof I am ashamed in their behalfe, and how our Generall, and we all are abused, in the opinion of these Low Countrie Souldiers. And therefore called for his Curates and Caske, and said, that he would both goe view the way for them, which they had made so nice of, and also the passages, and ascents vnto the hill top, and as well as hee could take view of the strength, and fortifications thereof, for our better directions against the next morning that we should attempt it. Captaine Berrie thereupon very willingly offered himselfe to hoe, and did earnestly desire me to diuert our Reare Admirall from vndertaking it. And I thereupon did openly disswade him that commanded in chiefe, from putting his owne person to those inferiour Offices of hazard, fitter for a Lieutenant or a Sergeant, then himselfe to performe, knowing, that all the direction, as well of those troopes, as also of a whole Squadron of the Naure, did at that time onely rest vpon him, in the absence of the Admirall, & Vice Admirall. Notwithstanding he was obstinate therein, as well in scorne to them that had refused, as also indeede out of a desire, to be the better informed of the strength, and fortification of the high Fort. Wherein when I saw him resolued, I told him that I would out of the loue of a kinsman, in particular, and also out of an honest regard, take such part as he did, from whom I had receiued many kinde fauours, and accompany him, but not out of any great desire I had to goe about a peece of worke, that consisted of much danger, and little honour in the performance. Hee thanked mee for mine offer, but yet wished me not to goe, if it were against my minde; notwithstanding I accompanied him, and so did some eight or ten more of our seruants and followers. But I say truely, and so afterwards it was much spoken of, that there was not any one more of quality, that did accompany him in that businesse.

Reare Admirals valour.

In this sort, and in this number did he himselfe goe to discouer the passage, and also was carefull and diligent to obserue and search out the strengths and ascents to the hill. In which doing, we were shrewdly troubled with the great Artillery, which did beat vpon the old wals, alongst the which we were to passe, and therewithall much indangered and harmed vs. For besides some that were hurt, two of our traine had their heads stricken cleane from their shoulders; my selfe was then shot through the left leg with a Musket bullet, but missed the bones being but a flesh-wound, but the bullet did burne both my silke stocking and buskin, as if it had bin singed with an hot Iron. I was then hard by the Reare Admirall, who also was shot through the breeches & doublet sleeues in two or three places. And still they plied vs so fast with small shot, as that (I well remember) he wished me to put of a large red scarfe, which I then wore, being (as hee said) a very faire marke for them. But I was not willing to do the Spaniards so much honor at that time, albeit I could haue wished it had not bin on me, & therefore told the Reare Admirall again, that his white scarfe was as eminent as my red, and therefore I now would follow his example. But yet in my poore opinion I see no great honor, nor discretion in these nice ceremonies, but when men go to seruice, they may with reputation, either put on, or put off all habiliments, for their most aduantage and securitie, and especially in going to discouer, which best may be performed, when themselues are least discouered. And this puts me in minde of a report which I heard many yeares since of Monsieur La: Noe, that famous French Captain, and one Bussey de Amboys, a gallant French Gentleman. These two being with Monsieur the French Kings brother, some 24. yeers since, at the siege of Bines in the Low Countries, were to informe themselues of a stanker, or some Ranelin that was to be beaten with Artillery. La Noue was the Marshall of Monsieurs Campe, and Bussye his great fauourite, & Lieutenant Generall (as I take it) Bussey would needes before Monsieur in a brauery, inuite La Noue to vndertake with him the discouery of that place, which La Noue out of his better iudgment, and experience in the Warres, thought not so fit a peece of seruice for their places, but rather to be preferred to some priuate Captaines of valour, and iudgement, that would very couertly goe about it. But such was Busseyes forward heate, and iollitie to the businesse, as that La Noue, who was inferiour to none in true valour, disdained to refuse that, which the other still vrged, and made so light of. And being stirred by Busseyes daring brauery, he fell to the businesse, and led Bussey such a dance in his hose and doubled vnarmed to the discouery, and so slily carried him on still with a sober discourse, further and further into the very mouth of the Cannon and Musket shot, with a soft steady pace, as that Bussey began to finde and dislike their entertainment, seeing the imminent danger that they still ranne into. And thereupon suddenly asked La Noue, what he meant so farre openly to ingage himselfe, and on so slow a pace: whereto La Noue answered, that hee did so, to make Bussey know, that La Noue had a heart as well to execute, as a tongue to giue counsell when neede required. But at last, they both falling into the true reckoning of their follies; the one, for vrging a valiant old Souldier, and the other for assenting to the vaine-glorious humour of youthly inconsiderate courage, came off very quietly both togather, hauing had their fits of discouering. And yet these Simullates (as the Latines name them) haue euer in all ages raigned. Cæsar in his Commentaries

Dangerous discouery.

Scarfe-brauery perillous.

Discouery best left discouered makes makes an especiall obseruation of two of his Captaines for the like: The one was called Titus Pulfio, and the other Lucius Varenus, and it happened in his Warres of France, in the wintering Campe of Quintus Cicero, one of his Lieutenants being furiously assaulted by the Gauls, but most resolutely defended. The manner hee describeth excellently, and large, in his Commentaries, to which I referre you.

And now to our purpose, by this time, we had reasonably to our satisfaction, made a sufficient discouery, both of the way for our Troopes to passe, and also of the ascents to the high Fort on the Mountaine. And then there came vnto vs Captaine Berry, and one Master Henry Allen, and others; who finding me hurt, very kindely bemoned my harme, and I in requitall of their curtesie, as much lamented the want of all their good companies at that banquet; vpon the comming of these vnto vs, we sent backe two of our men to Captain Bret (Sergeant Maior for that time) to be his Guides, and to will him presently to march on with his Troopes towards the Towne after vs, and that we would stay for them, because we then looked to be fought withall, or at the least, to haue some little sally, or bickering out of the Fort at the Towns end, which we must needes passe by, before we could come to the Town. This was a very fine fortification all of stone worke, with curtaine, flankers, and ditch, very artificially cast: but presently vpon our approach they abandoned it, and in our passing by we entred into it, and found that they had newly forsaken the place. The like did they afterwards from the Towne, and were all fled vp into the Countrie, and into the Mountaines, sauing those two hundred that were garrisoned in the high Fort. The Towne was emptied, and left very bare of all things, but of such wares as could not suddenly be remoued: which was Wine, Salt, and Corne, whereof they left a little store for our refreshing. The rest of our Troopes by this time were now come on very neere to the Towne, but there were some fiue and twentie of them shot, and some seuen or eight slaine in the passage.

Fortification forsaken. Towne abandoned.

And in this manner we did afterwards enter the Town very peaceably; which was a pleasant place, built all of Stone, and couered with Tile; and full of fine Gardens, Orchards, and Wels of delicate waters, with faire Streets, and one very faire Church, and also a Nunnery, and a Fryerie. It is in bignesse about the proportion of Plymouth, or Yarmouth, but seated much like Douer Town. This Island is of late yeeres become very watchfull, and the people more growne to the vse of fit armes, and haue for their defence erected this new fortification, on the high hill, with a Garrison of two hundred Spaniards in it. For not long before, it had bin very gallantly surprised, and (as I thinke) sacked, and ransomed, by the right Honorable George Clifford Earle of Comberland (a noble Gentleman) that had often exposed both his purse, and his person, to his great honour and experience in those Seafaring Aduentures. And presently vpon our entrance we made Barricadoes, placed good Guards in diuers parts, and a strong Corps de Guard in the Market place. For the town being vnwalled, we were to suspect, that if we lay there open, and carelesly refreshing our selues, and our souldiers scattered abroad in seeking for victuals, we might easily be surprised without good order, and directions giuen, before we fell to our repast, or rest. But this order being first performed, then were others at better liberty to search safely for bootie. Therefore Proclamation was made, that vpon paine of death none should straggle twenty score without the Towne, and that not without the knowledge and leaue of an Officer, and then to goe vpon their guard with fit weapon, and company. Hauing now refreshed and reposed our selues all night without any trouble, more then two false alarmes, that were giuen vpon the sight of diuers of the inhabitants that approached towards the Towne, to view the manner of our dealings with their buildings (which proued nothing, but mistrust of the worst) for which, all things were well prouided to withstand the enemy) the next morning being the 22. of September, euen with the day breake, we might see our Generall with his Fleete at hand, bearing in with all sailes towards the Roade of Fayall, who all this while had bin beating vp and down the Seas, looking about for the Adelantado, and other Aduentures. Vpon his arriuall, our intent for attempting the high Fort was frustrated, and all our proceedings in Fayall were by Sir Guillie Merricke at large related, vnto our Generall, and so aggrauated, and wrested into an euill sense, by him, Sir Christopher Blunt, Sir Anthony Sherly, and others, by putting my Lord in the head, that these parts were plaied by the Reare Admirall onely to steale honor, & reputation from him, and to set his owne forwardnesse to the view of the world; which intimation of theirs, was an exception that they know our Generall was very apt of his owne disposition to take hold of, being a man that did affect nothing in the world so much as Fame, and to be reputed matchlesse for magnanimitie, and vndertaking, and could hardly indure any that should obscure his glory in that kinde, though otherwise he fauoured them neuer so much. And that this is true, those that vnderstand his humour best, cannot iustly deny. The which (I protest) I doe not speake, either out of any neglect of one that is dead, or to picke a thanke of any that liues, but simply out of a resolution to write an vnpartiall truth, or else to be silent. For those spirits that base flattery, or seruile feare doth transport in fashioning their Histories, are of all others to be reputed the vnworthiest, and most pernicious in a well-pallicied Common wealth. For wee see that those Heathens, which haue written the stories of Cyrus Pyrrhus, Alexander, Haniball, Scipio, Cæsar, and of all other those great Kings, & renowned Heroes, do as well taxe them for their vices, as glorifie them for their vertues: For, who liues without fault? And so sincerly & boldly do they follow the truth in their writings, as that

They enter the Towne. Towne described.

Earle of Cumberland. See sup. l. 6. c. 1.

Their order for safety and booty.

The Generall comming.

Sir Guilly Mericks vnharitable officiousnesse.

Earle of Essex his ambition of honour.

they are therby freed from malice, or revenge, because they are free from all partialitie; or if any spleen arise, yet it is secret; for the prosecution of such sinceritie, is reputed meere impietie in all sorts, and flat Tyrannie in Princes. And to conclude, this impotent humor of indureing rivalsty, and other mens praises, is very incident to men in high places, especially if they be of great courage, or tickled with Ambition.

It was be ides aileadged, that the presumption and scorne, to land such Forces without his Lordships leaue, was not to be passed ouer without seuere punishment, and a Marshall Court fit to be called, to censure the offence and breach of order, and discipline, with many other as bitter arguments, and deuises, as their wits could compasse, to aggrauate the Generals wrath against all that were in this Action, and especially the Reare Admirall. Against whom, they spared not so farre to inueigh, as that they gaue it out, that he was well worthy to loose his head for his labour. And so had they inueighed the Generall against vs all, as that all the forenoone was spent in reprehending and displacing all the Land Captaines, and Officers that accompanied the Reare Admirall in that Action, who being sent for to answere before the Generall aboord his ship, was before the Messenger came for him, gone in his Barge to see the Generall, and to guide him to the Land, not so much as suspecting that any thing had bin ill taken for that matter, but rather looking for great thankes at the Generall his hands. But so soone as he entred the Generals ship, he found all mens countenances estranged, as he passed through them. And when he was entred into the Generals cabbin, after a faint welcome, the Generall began to challenge him of breach of order and Articles: To whom the Reare Admirall answered, that he knew not of any such breach: my Lord replied, that there was an article that none should land any of the Troopes without the Generals presence, or his order. The Reare Admirall desired the Generall to giue him leaue to defend himselfe by those Lawes, which himselfe as well as others had deuised, and his Lordship with the Counsell of warre had authorised, and that then his Lordship should finde, that he had not committed any Errour at all. For (saith he) there is an Article, that no Captaine of any ship, nor Captaine of any Company, if he be seuered from the Fleete, shall land any where without direction, from the Generall, or some other principall Commander, vpon paine of death, &c. But I take my selfe (said he) to be a principall Commander, vnder your Lordship, and therefore not subiect to that Article, nor vnder the power of the law Marshall, because a successiue commander of the whole Fleete in her Maiesties Letters Patents, your Lordship, and my Lord Thomas Howard failing. And besides your Lordship agreed that I should land at this Island, with your Lordship, whom I haue attended these foure dayes, and finding that your Lordship came not, being in your way thitherwards halfe a dozen leagues before, I waied anchor, I could not but thinke, that you thought me strong inough to take this Island, and that your Lordship was gone, with some of the rest to some of the other Islands. And staied so long from landing at Sir Guillie Merrickes intreatie, as I heard mine owne company, euen at my backe, murmur, and say, that I durst not aduenture it. And to tell your Lordship a plaine truth, my intent at first was onely to water, vntill I saw them follow me in that brauing manner, which with our reputations wee could not then shun, and gine ouer, being already in our Boates for that purpose. For if I had intended the taking of the Towne, I would neuer haue retired so farre off from our first Roade, that lay right before it.

This dispute held some halfe houre, and then the Generall went ashoare, and rested himselfe in the Reare Admirals lodging, being well enough satisfied at that time. In so much as the Reare Admirall desired my Lord to sup there, and that if his Lordship ment to call the matter further in question, he would claime no priuiledge nor fauour thereby, but answer it in the morning. To which Sir Christopher Blunt (taking my Lords answere from him) said, that he thought my Lord would not sup at all. But the Reare Admirall finding Sir Christopher Blunts disposition, told him, that when he inuited him he might disable his owne appetite, but if my Lord pleased to stay, he would be very glad of his presence. In this meane while my Lord Thomas Howard very nobly, and kindely taking care, that no wrong, nor disgrace might be offered to the Reare Admirall by any deuise, or practise of his Enemies, dealt with the Generall to finde how hee stood resolued, and the next morning assured the Reare Admiral, that my Lord sought nothing but a due acknowledgement of an offence, alleadging that the rest would thinke him a very weake and tame Commander, if he should receiue no manner of satisfaction. The Reare Admirall hoping that hee had done nothing vniustifiable, and well assured, that he was successiuely in the Commission, for the whole commandement of the Fleete (and therefore not subiect to any corporall danger) as also because he assured himselfe of the Vice Admirall his honorable loue, and sincere dealing, came againe in the morning to visite the Generall. Otherwise (remembring the little trust that men ought to repose in reconciled enemies, and the strong malice borne him by others in greatest fauour with my Lord) had ment to haue put himselfe into his owne Squadron, and so to haue defended himselfe, or left my Lord. But my Lord Thomas Howard, perswading him to goe, and satisfie the Generall (vpon whose word onely he made that aduenture, after he had giuen him his honour, with great kindnesse, and resolution, that he would make himselfe a party, if any wrong or violence were offered, contrary to the Generals promise vnto him; he did as the Vice Admirall aduised him. And so all things after a little dispute came to a quiet end and conclusion.

And within a day or two after, the Generall accompanied with the Vice Admirall, and other Lords, and Commanders dined aboord our ship, where he was exceedingly intertained, and contented.

Sir Walter Raleigh commeth aboord the Generall.

Accusation.

His answere.

Lord T. Howard (now Earle of Suffolke) his Christian and friendly mediation.

The Generall pacified.

Digitized by Google

tented. Onely this I omitted that when the Generall committed Captaine Bret, Berry, and Sydney, The Reare Admirall deſired that thoſe Gentlemen might receiue no hard meaſure in his cauſe, for whatſoeuer his Lordſhip doth conceiue to haue bin miſdone, hee muſt take it wholly on himſelfe to anſwere, being at that time the Chiefe and Commander. This I haue ſet downe in manner as I heard it, then from men of good ſort, not being preſent thereat my ſelfe, nor at that time able to waite on the Generall, by reaſon of the ſhot through my legge, which I had receiued but the day before, in this thankleſſe ſeruice.

Thus was the whole day ſpent in reprehending and diſciplining vs for our paines. And yet notwithſtanding, theſe aggrauators, and chiefe Inſtigators of our Generall, vouchſafed to take the benefit of our reproued Trauailes, in lodging, and refreſhing themſelues in this good Towne, both this night, and three or foure dayes after. But in the ſame day that our Generall arriued, about one of the clocke after midnight, all the Portugals, and Spaniards in the high Fort, with their bagge and baggage, abandoned the place, leauing behinde them ſix peeces of great Artillery mounted. For when they ſaw the whole Fleete together, and ſo many gallant Troopes land with our Generall, their hearts fainted, and ſo they fled into the Countrie, and woddy Mountaines adioining. Then in the morning when it was too late (although as yet wee knew not ſo much) direction was giuen to certaine troopes, and companies, to guard all the foot of the high Fort, to ſtop, and ſtay them from ſtealing from thence, that were already gone, for it was giuen out, that if they did not preſently ſurrender it, the place ſhould be aſſailed.

High Fort abandoned.

But when newes was brought that they had abandoned the Fort, and carried all away, then was there much deſcanting of the foule ouerſight, ſo to ſuffer the Birds to eſcape out of the Cage, that might haue bin ſo ſurely kept, if we had not beſtowed more labour in diſciplining and correcting our owne pretended faults for landing, then diſcretion or diligence in proſecuting the Enemy, whom we had at an aduantage. For preſently vpon their arriuall, they did nothing but examine and diſcipline our offence. Whereas if they had gone in hand with the Fort, and caſt a carefull eye thereunto, we had not loſt the ranſoming of ſo many Spaniſh priſoners, nor the benefit of the ſpoyle which they had carried out of the Towne, for ſafty to that place. And at this groſſe errour there was much muttering. But now diuers of the land officers (to colour and excuſe their owne default) laid this blame alſo on vs, alleadging that we ſhould haue left a good guard vpon the Fort, if we had done like men of warre, vpon our firſt landing, and then all had bin ſure. And although this excuſe paſſed at firſt for ſome paiment, for the common and more ignorant ſort, yet all men of iudgement could eaſily perceiue, how impoſſible a matter it was for vs out of foure hundred and ſixtie to ſpare ſo many, as ſhould ſufficiently guard two hundred ſouldiers, from ſallying out of ſuch a Fort, and yet proceede with the recouering of the other Fort, and Towne that was before vs. For the defence of both which, the Iſland was able and had in readineſſe (as our ſpies and guides aſſured vs) aboue one thouſand able men well furniſhed, vpon whom we were to haue a vigilant eye, and to keepe a conuenient ſtrength after we had once poſſeſſed the Towne. But after the Generall was come, this might eaſily haue bin performed, or if he had not come, they had not fled ſo ſuddainly, and the ſame morning, wee our ſelues had attempted the Fort, and made no doubt to carry it. But then with the preſence of our Generall, vpon his arriuall, all our determinations, and authorities were concluded.

Enuie ſpieth more in pretended, then in profeſſed enemies, and is alway worſt to it ſelfe, though bad to all.

Afterwards when our men entred this Fort, which the Spaniards had abandoned, there they found diuers peeces of Artillery, and an Engliſh Gentleman whoſe name was Hart, and a Flemming with both their throates cut. Then were there certaine companies ſent abroad the Country, to trace thoſe Spaniards and Portugals, and to make waſte of all that lay in their way. But of the Garriſon they could neuer recouer one man. Now after three or foure dayes the anger and diſlikes of our Generall towards vs, were well pacified, and vpon further conſideration and conference with the Reare Admirall of his doings, hee grew againe into very kinde tearmes with him, and at his ſuite releaſed and reſtored all the diſgraced Captaines that landed, and were in this ſeruice, and ſo hauing taken all the benefit, and refreſhing of this Towne, and Iſland that we could come by, our time being ſo ſhort, on the foureteenth of September we were all commanded to goe aboord. And ſo for a farewell, and for the funerals of our loſt men, and thoſe two that were ſo diſpitefully murthered in the high Fort, the Towne was brauely ſet on fire, and all the Ordnance of the Towne, and Forts brought away with vs. And I am perſwaded that if the warres had not bin by chance ſo begun before by vs, vpon that Iſland by their owne ſeeking, and fooliſh brauery, and afterwards aggrauated by their cruelty in murthering ſo deſpitefully two of our company in the high Fort, Fayall had eſcaped as ſcotfree as did Cuerno, Flores, Gratioſa, Saint Michaels, or any of the other. For ſurely they were all at our mercy, the Fort of Tercera onely excepted. But in all theſe Actions I obſerued, and well ſaw, that our Generall in his true diſpoſition, affected rather to be renowned for bounty, clemency, and valour, then for the glory of a dreadfull Conquerour. All this while the Flemmings were playing their parts in the Iſle of Pike, which was about a league from Fayall; where I leaue them ranſacking the Wines, and burning all that was within their power.

Hart and another left with throates cut.

Towne fired.

Reward of cruelty is cruelty.

The ſix and twentieth of September we made towards Gratioſa, where wee caſt ancor, and

Digitized by Google

Graciosa submitteth it selfe.

presently whilest we roade before it, there came aboord our Generall, the chiefe men of the Iland submitting themselues, and craving mercy of our Generall, alleadging (as they of Flores had done) that the inhabitants thereof were Portugals, and friends, and naturall Enemies to the Spaniards, though they wanted meanes and force to show it, being held vnder them by strong hand. To this Iland our Generall shewed his accustomed mercy, and required of them some prouisions of Wine, Fruites, and fresh victuals, for the relieuing of the Fleete; but of any other composition we heard not, although it was supposed they did, or might haue yeelded a better ransome: but this was very willingly sent by the inhabitants vnto vs. Here some of the Commanders went aboord the Generall, and besought him to goe aland, and somewhat better to survey this Iland, and for one day to let his Fleete ancor in that Roade, which his Lordship shewed great willingnesse vnto. But the Master of the Generals Ship, whose name was Grome (a dull and vnluckie fellow) was vtterly against that counsell, and alleadged that the yeere was farre spent, and the place of anchoring there not good for the ground tackle, protesting that it would be dangerous for the whole Fleete, and put it in hazard, and therefore very earnestly perswaded and vrged the leauing of that Roade; which aduise of his, our Generall then followed, to our great losse, and hinderance, as afterwards it fell out. But Grome the Master must pardon mee to say in mine opinion, that it was an vndiscreete aduise, so to diuert our Fleete in such haste from that Iland, considering the long aboade he made afterwards before Saint Michaels, and at Villa Franca, to lesse purpose in as ill Roades as this, and later in the yeere. Hereupon wee wayed, leauing Gratiosa vpon Saint Michaels Eue, and made for Saint Michaels Iland, and on Saint Michaels day, early in the morning, we made that land, and bare in with the shoare. And as wee came very neere vnto it, two of the Sterne-most Ships of our Fleete, shot off twice or thrice, and bare vp with all sailes they could packe on, towards the Admirals ship.

Grome taxed.

Saint Michael.

Newes of the Indian Fleet.

These brought newes of the Indian Fleete then by them discouered, comming directly from the Roade of Gratiosa, that the Generall had so vnwillingly left but the Euening before, by the vnluckie aduice of Grome the Master of his ship. Vpon the Intelligence giuen by these two ships, our Admirall shot off a peece, and presently cast about, and therewithall, wee in the other ships perceiued casting vp of Hats, and great shootes aboord the Admirall, for ioy of this newes. And the like afterwards was done in the Vice-Admirals ship, and so passed throughout all the Fleete.

Three Spanish ships taken.

Within some few houres after, we incountered, and tooke three Spanish ships, comming from the Hauana, the greatest of them being about foure hundred tunnes, and esteemed to be a very rich ship, as well for the lading, as for the passengers that were in her. To this Spaniard, our ship called the Wastspight being neerest, gaue Chase, and caused her to stricke, and yeelde: but yet my Lord Generall hasting after, would suffer none but his owne Boate to goe aboord her, being full of good prisoners, and pillage besides her lading, which was Cochynella, and other such rich Wares. This ship and the other two that were in her company, being very good prises also, made to the Generall a relation of forty sailes of Indian men, whereof some eight were fraughted with the Kings Treasure, that did disenbarge with them from the Hauana, bound for Spaine. And as we after heard, the Garland, the Rainebow, the Dreadnaught, the Marigold, and others, fell amongst sixteene saile of the richest of this Indian Fleete, whereof they foundred one, and whilest they were busie in seeking to take the spoile of her (as it was credibly reported) all the rest did escape, and recouer Tercera. But of this I speake as the generall voice went, and not vpon other assurance, for they were then separated from vs, and the rest of the Fleete; And therefore I must adde this conclusion, to desire that I may of the vnderstanding sort be pardoned, if in these relations I cannot truely, nor at large write the accidents, and courses of all their ships in particular, being no eye witnesse thereof, nor possibly could so be. For to doe that in a land army, or in a battaile is very hard, and much more in a Sea Voyage consisting of so many ships sometimes separated.

Vpon intelligence of this escaping, and passing by so vnluckily of these Indian Ships, we were all much perplexed. For by that chance, and by our vnfortunate hast from Gratiosa, but the very night before, wee saw that Euen, the wrath of destiny denied to make vs so happy, as to bee masters of so great a fortune, as then had fallen into our laps, if wee had not still followed all those counsells that fell out to the worst. Notwithstanding, with all the speed wee could make, we instantly followed after them to Tercera, where they were entred some sixe houres before vs, and had moored their Ships fast vnder the Towne and Fort, being one of the strongest pieres of all Europe. There wee might aloofe behold them safe within the Road; which was a great Inlet inuironed with a high Land, in manner of Peninsula; so as the Shippes lay vnder the command of two strong Fortifications, a place neither fit nor possible for our Ships to follow them, except we had meant, that they should haue there stuck fast for comming out againe. Now was there a generall counsell called aboord the Admirall, what course to take heerein, and many great aduentures proposed and offered to bee attempted, by some Coronels and Captaines, with Boates and Pinnaces for the landing of men, to force those places, but all in vaine, and altogether vnseasonable. For whereas they, with one thousand fiue hundred men, offered to take both the Iland and Forts, some others of the chiefest Sea-Commanders (in their iudgements, well knowing the great difficultie to Land men, and Munitions on so disaduantagious a place, and in so euill a season of the Indian Fleete pursued to Tercera.

The Peere described.

A Counsell.

yeere:

Digitized by Google

yeere; besides the great strength of the Fortifications, so well furnished at that time by this new arriuall) were vtterly against it, as a matter friuolous, and of more apparant danger to our selues, then to the Enemy, and for it yeelded sundry reasons. All which these Coronels seemed to account light of, and would needs in great brauery, still vrge the vndertaking of it, if they might haue but the proportion of one thousand fiue hundred men, before spoken of; which the General himselfe seemed greatly to allow, and insist vpon, and therefore of necessitie to be yeelded vnto by the inferiour Commanders.

But our Vice-Admirall, the Lord Thomas Howard, finding indeed the marke whereat some of our great Captaines shot, to wit, that it would haue serued their turnes to haue vaunted, that if the Vice-Admirall, and Reare-Admirall had beene willing to this enterprise, and not crossed it by counter counsells, the Spanish Fleet and Treasure (by mastering the Ilands of Tercera) might haue been recouered, his Lordship resolued either to tie them to their pretended resolutions, or to make them see, that they could not serue themselues of him, by any such fineneſse & pretence. And therefore told the general plainly, that if indeed he would so willingly haue it attempted, himselfe, and the Reare-Admirall for their parts would be forward and readie to aduenture as farre as any others. And moreouer, the better to inable the action, said, that they would vndertake to find him three thousand strong and able men, to spare out of the Fleet, and yet leaue the Nauie sufficiently manned. And therefore (said they) if your Lordship see no other reasons to let or hinder this offered attempt, there shal be no want of so many men as we speake of, which is double the number that was demanded. But vpon this constant offer, the matter was againe debated, and grew somewhat colder, being better digested. So as in conclusion it was deemed inconuenient, and impossible to be effected, as our Forces and helpes, and theirs at that time stood, and the time of the yeere so farre spent, and the winds and the Seas growne so tempestuous for landing in Boats. But if this offer had not bin made, then, the relinquishing of these glorious motions, and attempts, had bin laid vpon the backwardneſse and diſſwations of the Sea-men, which was well enough perceiued, and therefore accordingly answered.

Digression touching rash onsets and brauados. Sir R. Greenuile his story you haue before, which perhaps may somwhat better excuse him.

These vnseasonable offers, and Brauadoes, puts me in mind of the like inconsiderate vnfortunate action of Sir R. Greenfield in the Reuenge, who being Vice-Admirall to the same Lord Thomas Howard Admirall in a iourney to these Ilands in certaine of the Queenes Ships, they fortuned to meet with a great Fleet of the King of Spaines, neere to the Ile of Flores, consisting of so many huge and mighty Gallions, as was no way fit for them to vndertake, being in number and force three times as strong as ours was. And therefore fitter to be warily dealt withall, then rashly aduentured vpon. Wherefore the Admirall (out of the due consideration and indgement of the office, and place hee held, as also for that at his returne home, hee was to giue a strict account of the charge committed vnto him) thought it fit to keepe still aloofe, and in the weather of this powerfull Nauie, and so to fight with them at his best aduantage, off, and on, as occasion serued, or else to free himselfe from them if need required: For his Ships being more nimble, yare, and swift, then the Spaniards, it had bin a grosse errour to haue thrust himselfe wilfully in amongst them, and so to giue them the aduantage of boording, being high and mighty built Ships, throughly manned and full of shot, and the manner of fight, by boording most aduantageous for those huge Gallions. Besides being, as they were all men of Warre, and thrice as many as the English, and no other benefit to bee got by boording them, but blowes, and the hazard of battaile, which is vncertaine victory; it behooued him aduisedly to carry himselfe, and rather to follow the heedy steps of a Fabius Maximus, then the headie fury of a Terentius Varro. But his Vice-Admirall, being indeed a man very wilfull, and violent in his courses, could in no wise be perswaded to follow his Admirall, and his consorts. But thrusting himselfe rashly in amongst the Spaniards, those mighty Vessels being a Sea-boord, and some of them getting into the weather of him, so becalmed all his sayles, as that hee could not vse the benefit of working vpon a wind to his best aduantage, nor free himselfe of them when hee would, but was clapt aboord by two or three of them; where to redeeme his errour, seeing hee had brought himselfe so vndiscreetly into a desperate worke, he very resolutely fought, and made long resistance, to the great annoyance and losse of the Assaylants. But in the end, being shaken and beaten to sitters with their great Ordnance, and oppressed with the multitude of them, comming in fresh vpon him, was by mayne force mastered, and yet disdaining to yeeld, for that hee had receiued his deaths wound in the fight, sought by all meanes to haue blowne vp his Ship, by setting fire on his owne Powder roome, and therewithall to haue destroyed as many of the Spaniards as lay aboord him; but by the care of his Captaine (whose name was Laughorne) was withstood and preuented. A right antient Roman resolution, but somewhat too much varying from the true Christian Religion; to draw a violent and sudden death on so many soules, for the better grazing of his particular errour. And in this sort by his owne wilfulneſse, brought he one of the Royall Nauie, into the power and possession of the Spaniards, which during all the Warres, neuer before nor after they could obtaine. And a faire grace of God it was, that his fond example had not inticed more of them, at the same time to the like folly and ruine. Now the best that hee could hope for, was after the exchanging of some great shot with them, to haue come of againe if hee could. A brauery to small purpose, for to subdue them, was not in the power of all the English, if they had beene as many more in all likelihood and reason. Vpon which grounds wise Commanders ought to build their resolutions, before they put themselues to the hazard of battaile. Besides, in truth it was a very insolent and disorderly part, for a Vice-Admirall, being a man of his yeeres and Roman examples.

Reuenge, the only Ship of the Nauy Royall, possessed by the Spaniards and dearly bought.

Digitized by Google

and experience, so wilfully without cause, against all discretion to vary from his Admirals course, and from the opinion of all his Consorts, onely to bid himselfe voluntarily to so foolish and bitter a banquet, wherein hee could be but lost. And hard would it be for Generalls, and Chiefe Commanders to fulfill their Instructions, or satisfie that which is expected at their hands, if they should be drawne on, or ingage themselues, by the vaine example of euery one that is carryed with a headdy humour, to follow his owne wilfull conceit. For so was that noble Paulus Æmilius, and the Roman Armie with him lost, at the Battaile of Cannas, in being constrained to second the foolish bravery of Varro, his rash Colleague. And in the like Rich. D. of Yorke vnadvised desperate sort, did that valiant Duke of Yorke, Richard Plantagenet, Father to Edward the Fourth, wilfully cast away himselfe, when with fiue thousand men onely, contrary to the perswasions and counsell of all his friends, out of the pride of his bravery, hee would needs sally out of his Castle of Sandall, and give battaile to the Queenes Army, that was twenty thousand strong: whereby his weake forces were quickely defeated, at Wakefield, and himselfe slaine, with his young sonne the Earle of Rutland. It is said to bee the dutie of a great Captaine, to seeke victory with as little losse to himselfe, as may bee, and more military discipline shewed in making a faire and safe retrait, then in giuing a furious and desperate charge. Sir Io. Norris. The experience whereof was well seene, in that gallant Souldier Sir Iohn Norris, who wan as much Honour and Fame, by that brave, and well ordered retrait which hee made before Gaunt, as in any one piece of seruice that euer hee did. We had also fresh in our memories, a Sea experiment of the very like tragicall successe of Sir Richard Greenfield, in the like rash attempt of Peter de Stroſſe, Admiral of a French Fleet, against a mightie Spanish Nauy, commanded by the Marquesse of Sancta Cruce, at these Ilands. Where this Stroſſe out of a wilfull bravery, contrary to the better advice of all his Captaines, and Masters, having alreadie landed many brave troupes of Frenchmen, in the Ilands, as assistant to Don Anthonio, named King of Portugall, vpon the first view would needes lay the Marquesse and the Spanish Fleet aboord, being compassed of mightie huge Gallions, and the French but slender nimble Ships. By which vnequall match, and foolish daring, he was beaten downe right, all his Nauie destroyed (sauing the Count Brysack, and a few others of better iudgement, that would not follow his vaine course) and himselfe being taken prisoner, was aliue most despitefully torne, and drawne asunder with two Ships. Thus lost he himselfe, and his honour, brought many gallant Gentlemen and Souldiers to a butcherly execution, and vtterly thrust Don Anthonio from the possession of the Iles of Asores, and confounded all those braue French troupes, which a little before he had placed in them. But in another manner, and with better successe were our affaires gouerned, in the yeere 88. when that mightie Fleet of Spaine, which they termed Example of 88 inuincible, came to inuade vs. For then I remember, amongst other good discipline, and instructions for the Sea fight; it was straitly ordained, that none of our Ships should voluntarily (if they could by any meanes auoid it) lay any Spaniards aboord, but alwayes to fight with them vpon aduantage, and indeauour by all meanes to keepe into the weather of them, and so leaue or take as occasion serued, they comming to inuade, and our end only to keep them from landing. The which direction was so well obserued, as that this inuincible Fleet, for all their force and powerfull appearance, proued at last insuisible, left many of their Ancors and good Ships behind them, got not, nor sunke any one of ours: but being sore gauled and beaten, with this manner of fight, and greatly affrighted with fire, and such like stratagems, were at last glad to packe away, as fast as they could ont rt the backe doore. I meane by the North Seas, round about Scotland, and Ireland: wherein they found a miserable and tedious flight, neuer having gotten so much as a dish of our fresh water, nor euer landed one man (except prisoners) vpon our Coast. Now, if our Admirall, the Lord Charles Howard had beene a wilfull Commander, standing vpon those vaine glorious termes of boording and assaulting the enemy, and not haue proceeded by counsell and policie temperately, then had he done that which the Spaniards expected and desired, their Ships being fit for the purpose, and comming to boording and handy fight, might very well haue distressed vs, and so haue hazarded both the Nauie, and the Kingdome together. But this noble Lord, as hee was very fortunate and indicious in Sea seruice, so L. Admirall commended. hee truely and wisely considered, how great a weight and charge lay on his iudgement and trust, and therefore did accordingly, with great wisdome and temper marshall his affaires, to the ouerthrow of his Enemies, to the perpetuall honour of his name, and the victorious seruing of his Prince and Countrey. This therefore may may stand for a Maxime and Caueat, to all great and wise Commanders, that to whom a King or State commits the trust and direction of an Army: It bridles him in the free vse of his owne courage, or from expressing (vpon euery temptation) his particular valour. For that forward humour of daring, is to be vsed in younger yeeres, before they arriue to these places of dignitie or command; and then euer after, counsell should command their courage, alwayes wrapping their heads in the Furre of the Foxe, and their Armes seldome in the Lyons skin, setting aside all respects of braning or vaine glory, as did that Fabius Cunctator, of whom Ennius in praise saith; Non ponebat enim rumores ante salutem.

And these presidents I haue here taken occasion to record, thereby onely to shew what inconueniences and detriments doe follow such vnbridled heat, and headdy humours, and to the contrary, what benefit and aduantage is gained in the true vse of timely and temperate proceedings. For surely, if these desperate offers, made by the Land Souldiers, instigating our forward Generall to the taking of the Terceta, had beene then put in execution, the end had beene, that many a valiant man had there left his bones, and the rest returned home with the scorne of a disgraced attempt. Besides, if the Adelantado with the Spanish Nauie had then chanced to haue come on our backes, whilest our best men were ashoare ingaged about this desperate and vnfeasable enterprise, it might haue turned to the destruction of the whole Fleet, or at the least leaſt to the aſſured loſſe of as many as were landed about that buſineſſe. But (thankes be to God) good counſell preuailed, and preuented thoſe hazards.

After that this diſpute was ſo calmely concluded; our Generall himſelfe, and the Lord Mountioy in the Defiance, and two or three other tall Ships, bare in as cloſe along the ſhoare as they could, exchanging vpon pleaſure, ſome fifteene or twentie great ſhot with them, to very little purpoſe, and ſo left the Ile of Tercera, a place very ſtronge both by Nature and Art, and at that time well ſtored with Men, Munition, and Treaſure; by reaſon of the late arriuall of thoſe Indian Ships. From thence wee returned againe to the Ile of Saint Michaells, which before on Michaelmaſſe day wee made, and left then vpon this Intelligence. And now as ſoone as we were entred into the Road, that lies before Saint Michaells Towne, wee let fall our Ancors, and there; the Generall accompanied with diuers of our chiefe Officers, comming aboord our Reare-Admirall, hung out a Flag of Counſell, where it was conſulted about landing, and the taking of this good Town, which lay ſo glorioufly before our eies, promiſing many rich rewards to the Victors: In the which there was a ſlight Fort towards the Sea ſide, but the Towne vnwalled. The Generall appointed that all Companies ſhould bee made ready to land forthwith. But our Reare-Admirall deſired his Lordſhip; that hee would firſt permit him to view the place, and to find out where the Army might beſt make a deſcent, becauſe the Billowes about thoſe Ilands doe ſometimes ſo roule from the Sea, as might eaſily ouerturne the beſt Boates we had, as wee found by experience at Fayall, where wee had two long Boats ouerturned in landing, and Maſter Thomas Rugway alſo throwne with a Sea on the Rockes in his Boat. Our Generall at firſt, yeelded to the Reare-Admiralls requeſt, for viewing a fit place. But as hee was putting off, and ſcarce gone from the Ships ſide twentie paces, my Lord, ſtanding in the Gallery with Sir Chriſtopher Blont, called him backe againe in great haſt, and ſaid that he would goe himſelfe, and view it. Whereupon the Reare-Admirall returned againe, as my Lord commanded; and as his Lordſhip went out of the Ship into his Barge vnarmed altogether, but with his Coller and Sword, and without either Shot or Pike to waite on him, the Reare-Admirall called aloud vnto him, and deſired his Lordſhip to take his Caske, and Target proofe with him, if hee purpoſed to goe neere the ſhoare, ſeeing there lay ſo many Muskets on the reſt, there to receiue him. Whereunto my Lord anſwered, That hee would none, becauſe hee diſdained to take any aduantage of the Watermen that rowed him.

They arriue at S. Michaels the ſecond time.

Hollow Sea.

Boldneſſe by ſome eſteemed fortitude.

But (in my opinion) though that anſwere much ſhewed his valour, yet became it not the place that my Lord held, for in truth a Generall ought not to bee ſo aduenturous, and careleſſe of himſelfe vpon euery ſlight occaſion, nor to goe vnarmed to places of imminent perill. Homer deſcribes the valiant Heroes, and braueſt Leaders of the Greekes to be beſt armed: As Achilles, an excellent Armour framed by Vulcan, at the requeſt of Thetis his mother, and Aiax with his ſeuenfold ſhield. Inſomuch as their very armes are famous euen to theſe dayes, the vſe whereof now wee make ſcornefull. But they are no beaten Souldiers in the warres, that hold theſe opinions: for it is truly ſaid, that a great and wiſe Generall ſhould dye old. And I haue read that famous Epaminondas, was fined by his Countrymen the Thebanes, for being too forward, and ſeruing in a battaile ill armed, although he wan the victory. But to our matter: After that theſe landing places were viewed a farre off, and were not well liked, nor yet ſo neerely approached at that time, as within Culuerin Shot (for there lay all alongſt the ſhoare aboue foure hundred Shot vpon the reſt, intrenched to beate on our Boats;) in concluſion, after many offers and ſuruies made aloofe, the conueniences of that place, for landing was excepted againſt. Albeit in truth it was a faire and ſandy beach (as all the Fleet might well perceiue) and ſome foure or fiue miles from the Towne, and Fort, and much more eaſie then that of Fayall, where wee before wan our landing. And that this is moſt true, many that were preſent (now liuing) and ſaw both, can iuſtly affirme.

And although our Generall himſelfe, was very reſolute and apt to vndertake any good occaſion of ſeruice, yet hee was then ſo led and accompanied with ſuch politicke Land Captaines, as that of all the ſeruices which fell into conſultations and deliberations, thoſe moſt commonly, which were vnfeaſable, were offered to bee vndertaken, and things more likely and reaſonable neglected. Whereby our affaires ſpeed accordingly. And in this regard that this diſcent was not by my Lord Generall his viewers, allowed of, as fit for the Army to land at, ſo many Enſignes being placed and intrenched there to impeach vs, it was preſently by another conſultation agreed, that the Reare-Admirall ſhould with all the ſtrength of the Fleet, lye as neere before the Towne of Saint Michael, as conueniently they could, to hold them in expectation, whileſt my Lord Generall and the reſt, with two thouſand men imbarked into ſmall Barkes and Pinnaces, ſecretly in the night did conuey themſelues about the point, to land at a Towne called Villa Franca, ſome ſixe miles further then the firſt determinate landing. And for that purpoſe, they had moſt of all our Boates with them, and three Engliſh men for their guides, that perfectly knew all the Ilands and the Townes, by long trade and liuing amongſt them. Theſe three guides aſſured our Generall both of a quiet landing, and of a very faire and ſecret way, to march from thence to Saint Michaels Towne.

Villa Franca.

Our troupes being thus ſhipped, and our Generall alſo, they made haſt towardes Villa Franca, where where they arriued ſafe, & were al landed by the next morning, without any manner of reſiſtance. For moſt of all the Town vpon their arriuall abandoned the Town, and we that were left vnder the command of the Reare-Admirall, in the beſt Ships before the Towne of Saint Michaells, did all the night giue them perpetuall Alarums, with Shot, Drummes, and Trumpets, in ſuch Boats as were left, ſometimes in one place, ſometimes in another, alongſt the ſhoare, where the Spaniards kept their Corps de Guards, and fiers, who were often in great amazements, calling, and running to and fro, thinking verily that wee were landing in that place or about it. And thus wee did, to giue our Army the better, and more ſecret meanes to make their deſcent, and ſo to come vnlooked for on their backes, as their very way did lie, and might in truth very conueniently haue beene performed. They being thus landed, wee in the Ships did all the next day looke out apace, 10 hoping to ſee our troupes come marching ouer the Hills and Plaines, that were perfect in our view; for the moſt part of the way that they were to come, being all alongſt the Sea ſide, was in our ſight more brim from the Ships by farre, then if wee had beene aſhoare. But this good Towne of Villa Franca, had ſo welcomed and intertained our men, (being ſeated in a pleaſant Hanibals Capua. ſoyle, full of fruits, wines, and freſh victualls, and the Sellars ſtuffed ſo full of Oade and Wheat) as that our Army was content there to ingarriſon, without any further purſuit of Saint Michaels Towne, and there for ſixe dayes together they lay feaſting, and carrying aboard of Oade, Wheat, Salt, and other merchandiſe, into certaine priuate mens Ships that followed the Fleet, for ſuch purpoſes.

They land at Villa Franca.

Whileſt wee all in vaine ſtill gaped for their comming, which wee the rather thought would 20 haue bin at the laſt, for that in all this time, they neuer ſo much as ſent word, to make vs partakers of their determination to the contrary, whereby they would be ſure wee ſhould neither participate any of their Commodities, nor ſee the diſpoſure of them; although wee caſt many coniectures and aymed neere the marke, finding this lingring very ſtrange. But, to doe right to euery man, I aſſure my ſelfe, our Generall had no benefit of theſe wares and commodities, being of
The Earle excuſed. a diſpoſition too noble and bountifull to valiew ſuch trifles worth his regard. For it had beene eaſie for him to haue abounded with wealth and poſſeſſions, without following the fortune of the warres, or the hazard of the Seas, if hee had aymed at ſuch common markes. But in this meane while, as wee in the great Ships, ancored in Saint Michaels Road, there came in about the Point
A Braſil man. that lies weſtwards from the Towne, a ſmall Braſil man, and let fall his Ancor in the middeſt of 30 vs all. A little after him, wee might diſcerne aloofe off a mightie huge Carack, bearing in with A mightie Carack. all ſayles toward vs, whom ſhee tooke to bee the Spaniſh Armada. And the Braſil man confeſſed that hee thought the ſame alſo: for the King of Spaines men of Warre (when he makes Fleets) are compounded of the ſhipping of diuers Nations, and therefore the more hardly to bee diſtinguiſhed from ours, which was at that time compounded of Engliſh, and Holland Bottoms; beſides one great Spaniſh Gallion, called the Saint Andrew, and ſome other leſſer Spaniſh Veſſels that wee had taken before. Now there blew a ſtiffe gale from the Land, ouer Saint Michaels Towne, in ſuch ſort, that ſhee muſt either put roome into the Sea, or fall vpon vs. For as the wind then ſtood, ſhe could not run in with the Towne or Fort by no meanes, neither was it any part of their meaning. 40

As ſoone as wee had made her to bee a Carrack, wee tooke in all our Flags by a generall commandement from our Reare-Admiral: and withall directions were giuen, that no man ſhould once weigh an Ancor, or ſhoot off a Peece, or put off a Boat, but with leaue or order. All this while ſhe ſtill bare in with vs, with all ſayles to the Boates end, when ſuddenly one of the Holland Squa-
Greedineſſe loſeth his morſell. dron (contrary to al diſcretion & the direction before) weighed his Ancors, hoiſed his top ſailes, & made towards this Carack, now ready to double the Poynt that entred the Road where we lay: and when the Hollander came neere the Carack, hee preſently made two or three Shot at her. Whereupon ſhee diſcouering vs to bee Enemies, changed her courſe, and at the very inſtant (in the view of vs al that obſerued it, as if ſhee had had the wind at her deuotion) the gale changed, & came full of the Seas: with the helpe whereof, and with the feare of falling into our hands, ſhee 50
The Carack ran her ſelfe on ground. She was ſet on fire. Examples of Cades voyage. tooke a reſolutiou to runne her ſelfe a ground, hard vnder the Towne and Fort. Which done, from thence there preſently came multitudes of Boats, fetching away their men and beſt wares, and that done, ſhee was inſtantly by them ſet on fire in many places at once, being full of great Ordnance, as appeared by the report they made. Such is now the cuſtome and obſtinacie of all thoſe Seafaring men vnder the Spaniſh iuriſdiction, as that by reaſon of the ſeuere order, ſet downe by the King to that effect, they will careleſly burne their Ships, and wares, if they can eſcape themſelues, rather then to grow to any compoſition to ſaue halfe thereby. And the like was ſeene at Cades, by the Fleet that was outwards bound for the Indies: who after they had entertained a parley with vs, to compound for their Ships, and all the merchandize, at a ranſome of halfe the valew: whileſt they amuſed vs with this colourable pretence, thereby they gained time to ſteale out ſome of their goods, and afterwards ſet the 60
Shippes on fire, where they road. But this argueth as great ſeueritie in the Soueraigne, as ſlauery in the ſubiect.

This Carrack was a Ship of infinite wealth, that at Saint Hellens watering as ſhee came from the Eaſt Indies, put ouer to Braſil, and ſo coaſted alongſt the Weſt Indies, and was fraughted with the the riches and wares both of the East and West. Wee hasted all wee could when wee saw her a ground, tottering and reeling, with those few Boats wee had left, to haue entred her. But before wee could make vs readie, or come neere her, being three miles off, shee was on light fire in many places, her Ordnance thundring off apace, and too hot to bee approached, much lesse to bee entred at that time, without ineuitable destruction. And yet such hast was made to haue preuented this mischiefe, that diuers had like by ouercharging Boates and Pinnaces, to haue foundred in the Seas, the Billowes going very high. And in that case was our Reare-Admirall amongst others, who for hast to this banquet tooke his Row Barge, and was so ill able in her to indure the Seas that were rough, and went high at that time, as that I by chance seeing him so ill bested, & in danger was faine to clap him aboord with a good stout shipboat that I was in, hauing made hast also to that feast as fast as I could. But in conclusion wee came all too late, for the broth was growne to hot for our supping. To behold her thus flaming was a grieuous sight to vs, but a most wretched spectacle for the Portugalls, so to see their goods by their owne deedes and fury, to perish with fire and water in a goodly vessell, iudged to bee 1800. Tunnes at the least. Shee was a whole night, and all the next day in burning, and in beholding her, you might haue seene the very shape, Cordage, Masts, and Furniture of a Ship so perfectly in fire, as no Painter could haue halfe so well resembled it with Art, or Colours. And when she was cleane consumed to the water, there arose still a great smoake out of the Sea for many houres after, by reason of some close Decks full of Spices and Sugar vnder water, which the fire had taken hold of. Carack of 1800. Tunnes

This Tragedy ouerpast, wee then fell againe to looke out for our Army comming, but all in vaine. For if in any time, for fiue dayes together after their landing, they had come forwards from Villa Franca, the Towne of Saint Michaels, and the Carack also had beene our owne, safe without question: For if our forces had in all that time inuested themselues of the Towne (which they might haue done, there being neither Walles nor Bulwarkes to hold them out) the Carack would haue runne her selfe a ground, vnder the Towne as shee did: or if shee had, then had shee fallen into the hands of our Generall, and his Troupes: or, if shee had kept a Sea-board, then had shee fallen into the mercy of our Fleet, which by no meanes she could haue escaped. But it was a losse then as vnexcusable, as lamentable, for that no good reason could bee yeelded (as was thought) nor durst bee diuulged, why so gallant a Company, so easily landed for so good a purpose, should so long linger in a little Towne, forgetting themselues and the whole Army, vpon Fruits and Wine, to the neglecting of the seruice determined. But it was manifest, that besides their pleasure and good cheer, the great store of Oade, Corne, and Salt, did intice some Land men of good credite, (who had Ships there of their owne) rather to take the peaceable, and priuate benefit thereof, then to vndergoe some paine and perill, for the winning of Saint Michaels Towne, for the publike good. And this was a piece of seruice very vnfortunately neglected, but vpon what good reason I could neuer learne. And I am perswaded, that if his Lordship had built lesse vpon some mens violent counsells, and vaine conceits, hee might haue done many things better, and long haue liued in great prosperitie. But all his care was to content and winne vnto him, certaine Politithens and Marshall men, whom notwithstanding (according to the custome of the world) hee found many times vngratefully to deale with him, to serue their owne turnes, drawing him withall into ambitious humours, and affectation of popularitie, which, with our Great men rarely succeeds well. And very strange it was, to see so many great fortunes lost in this one iourney; but that the very Heauens did in them (like Comets) foreshew the heauy and lamentable destiny, that traced our Generall towards his end, whose bright shining felicitie was soone after eclipsed, and admirably metamorphosed into ruine and destruction. Onely this comfort remained to his friends, that hee ended his life with as great resolution, pietie, and penetencie, as was possible to bee expressed in the countenance & words of a man, vtterly diuorced from the world, and wholly deuoted to celestiall Contemplation, to the vndoubted comfort of his Soule.

We, from the ships looking thus still in vaine, for those that neither came nor sent vnto vs, whereby we lost all opportunitie of watering and refreshing our selues: for we in the Wastspite, and diuers of our Consorts, had not watered since our setting out from Plimouth) began to resolue to goe to our Generall, seeing wee could neuer heare from him in all that time. And as we were entring into this deliberation, wee might perceiue the Admiralls Ship by her Flag turning out from the point of Villa Franca: And two dayes before, many of our great Ships had left the Reare-Admirall, contrary to the Generall his order, which wee durst not breake in the Wastspite, by a late cautat, because it was flat contrarie to that which was appointed by a Councell, and the Generall his command. But as soone as wee had descried the Admirall (by his Flag) putting roome; our Reare-Admirall tooke his Barge, and Captaine Morgan with him, and rowed to him: and the same night sent Captaine Morgan backe againe, with directions in the Generalls name, to command all the Fleet to weigh, and to come for Villa Franca. This was no little griefe to vs all, that had so long and diligently waited on Saint Michaels Towne, and looked to haue had a better account of that place, then so barely and abruptly to leaue it after all these offers. And (to say the truth) it was either a grosse ouersight, or a wilfull fault vnexcusable to the State, that it was not in better sort manned. For (no doubt) they would willingly haue ransomed their Towne, rather then haue abidden the fortune of the Warres by Sword and Fire, and wee had amongst vs, men of sufficient experience to deale in such compositions, which (for ought I know) they might doe. Thus, with griefe and discontent we left Saint Michaels good Towne, the Inhabitants whereof wauing their Auncients, and ſhooting off their Ordnance, in great ioy triumphed to ſee this vnexpected modeſt departure of the whole Fleet, on a ſudden without any further trouble: And to mee it was ſtrange to ſee the Coronells and Captaines, that a little before were ſo forward and violent to haue landed at the Tercera, being a place ſo difficult to attempt, and of ſo great ſtrength, to bee now ſo ſlow to come forwards to Saint Michaels Towne, that had neither Ditch nor Wall about it, they being already landed for that purpoſe.

lft

But now approached the time of the yeere, that brings with it violent ſtormes, and extreame foule weather to thoſe Ilands. In regard whereof, as alſo for that opportunitie was now paſt of doing any more good to our ſelues, or damage to our Enemies; vpon the meeting of the whole Fleet before Villa Franca, a generall commandement was giuen, that all ſorts ſhould with all ſpeed repaire aboord their owne Ships, for the Wind and Seas began to riſe too high to ride there any longer. And now our laſt worke, was to prouide for our returning againe into England: And therupon all the haſt and preparation that could bee, was made with the helpe of the ſmall Pinnaces and Boates to conuey all our troupes aboord. Wherein, the beſt ſort of Commanders ſpared no paines nor trauaile, and eſpecially our Generall himſelfe, who in his owne perſon was twice in very great danger of tumbing into the Seas, about the imbarking of the Souldiers, in ouercharging his own Boat with thoſe vnruely people, amongſt whom at ſuch times, it is hard to keep any order or moderation. And much trouble there was (conſidering the rough weather, and how the Seas rowled) to get all our Land men aboord. Beſides, our Ships began to find more tickle ryding in that wild Road, then wee ſhould haue done eight dayes before at Gratioſa, where wee loſt the Indian Fleet by tarrying one night. But now at our departure from Villa Franca, for a farewell the Spaniards and Portugues preſented vs with a braue skirmiſh, which being throughly anſwered, the Generall there did make certaine Knights. Our Army being thus brought aboord, and many ſicke men amongſt them, by reaſon of their lauiſh diet aſhoare, where they more weakened themſelues then the Enemy. This Towne alſo was left intire, neither fired nor demoliſhed. But vpon what conſiderations I know not, vnleſſe out of gratitude for the hoſpitalitie, Oade, Corne, and Salt, which it had alreadie yeelded: or elſe out of a prouident regard to leaue them in caſe to bee able to entertaine vs another time, or rather for ſome pettie ranſome to ſome particular perſons that were more capable then our Generall, in vouchſafing to take any benefit whatſoeuer. For ſure I am, that ſome reaſon there was, if I could light on it, wherein the Oademongers, and Corne Merchants might doe well to helpe mee, for they (I thinke) can ayme neereſt to the marke.

Preparation for returne.

Knights made.

The ninth of October, 1597. wee ſet ſaile from Villa Franca for England, with a faire leading winde for three or foure dayes together, and then it grew ſcanter and ſcanter, and at laſt ſtarke nought and flat in our teeths, with ſuch great ſtormes, foule weather, and exceeding high grown Seas, as that many of our Fleet were much puzzeled in the nights in falling foule one of another. Inſomuch that the Mary Roſe, by meere careleſneſſe of the Maſter, and his Mates, had like to haue ſtemmed the Waſtſpite, if wee had not beene very carefull and diligent to auoid the ſudden and emminent danger: which, yet wee eſcaped ſo narrowly, as that the Mary Roſe, with her Beake head, tore away all the Gallery on the Lardboord ſide of the Waſtſpite. This ſtorme on a ſudden ſeparated all the Fleet, and wee in the Waſtſpite after this ſhocke, had ſundry dangerous leakes breake out vpon vs, in ſuch ſort, as that much to doe wee had by pumping and all other meanes to keepe her aboue water, being a very new ſhip, but withall the weakeſt built Veſſell that euer ſwam in the Seas of her burden, and carrying ſuch great ſtore of huge Ordnance as ſhee did, moſt of the which wee were inforced to ſtrike downe into hold, to eaſe her labouring ſides that hourely were like to flye aſunder. Beſides all this, wee were in ſo great want of Freſh-water and drinke, as that I offered to giue to one of the Victuallers of the Fleet, ſixe Cheſts of Sugar, for ſixe Hogſheads of Freſh-water, and yet could not haue it at any hand: Inſomuch as wee were faine to begin to ſet our great Stills on worke, to prouide for the worſt the beſt wee could. For if the ſtorme had longer held in that violence, wee might haue taken the choice, whether we would haue beene drenched in the Salt-water, or choaked aboord our Ship for want of freſh. For with the extreamitie of this Northeaſterly ſtorme, we were put back cleane from our courſe and coaſt, into no little deſpaire. And as wee in the Waſtſpite, ſo were all the reſt of the Fleet (as I after learned) diſperſed aſunder, inſomuch that ſcarce ſly two ſhips in all the Nauie kept company together. But at laſt it pleaſed God, to ſend vs more faire and fit windes, wherewith wee brought our ſelues againe into our due courſe, and within three or foure dayes wee began to meet with one another, ſtragling and ranging in the Seas. And after that, wee in the Waſtſpight chanced alſo to deſcry our Generall, by his mayne Flag (as farre as wee could ken) wayted on onely with two little Barkes, who ſixe or ſeuen dayes before, was attended with foureſcore ſayle of good Ships. A true type of this worlds inconſtant pompe, which the winde and Seas did faithfully teach vs not to build too much vpon. And I would our noble Generall, for his owne ſake and better fortune, had made that good obſeruation thereof.

Their returne.

Want of water.

Stills.

When wee had thus met our Generall, and had hayled and ſaluted one another, with all the ioy ioy that might bee, wee conferred of our course, and began to consult thereof with the aduise of our Masters and Pylots. Wherein, ours in the Waste-spight somewhat varyed from the opinion of the Generals Nauigatours, but yet we submitted our selues, and our skill, to the wisedome and authoritie of his Ship, whose Directions wee were to follow. And withall, wee made knowne vnto his Lordship our great leakes, and scarsitie of Drinke, who told vs very Honourably, that we should want no helpe that hee could yeeld vs, and therefore he straightly charged vs to keepe his course, and to follow his Light, which wee did obserue, though our Master was very vnwilling thereunto, assuring himselfe, that our Generals Master was mistaken, and besides his course, by too much crediting the perswasions and Art of one Iohn Danis a great Nauigator reputed, who at that time sayled much of his Pilotage, and coniecture for the Sleeue, to the no little hazard of the whole Fleet, as afterwards was seene. During this forenamed Storme, sundry Birds came flying into our Ships, when wee were two hundred leagues from our owne Coast. First, there fell into vs an Owle, then a Tassell, and a Falcon, one of the which wee tooke. and brought into England, then at the last, a Dowe lighted on our Maine-yard, which we all liked well, and tooke it as a presage of faire weather towards, and so (thankes bee to God) it succeeded presently after two dayes. After wee had thus met with our Generall, and being well aduanced on our way for the Sleeue, and as we coniectured not farre from the entrance of the Channell, wee began of all hands to fall a sounding for ground, and the next day found it, though indeed by that sounding I saw few the wiser, or the more assured of the Coast. For it was the Banke of Silley, but none could say so, nor then so iudge it, but onely the Master of our Ship, whose name was Broadbant, a carefull man and a right good Mariner. For in the Generals ship, they were all of a contrary opinion, and according to their Errour shaped their course, with straight commandement giuen to vs, and to the rest that were in his traine, to follow his Light and course. The which we did very diligently, my selfe indeed being most in fault for it. For the Master was loath so to doe, but that I vrged our dutie to the Generals commandement, and our danger in breaking it by former experience. And therefore I watched, and stood by the Helme, and Bitackle, most part of that night, to see it performed, though with much repining of the Master, and his Mates, against this dangerous Course as they feared it. Birds.

This sounding of ours, so much in practice, and yet many times bringing no great certainty withall, makes me now call to minde, an odde conceit and speech of a Spanish Prisoner, which the Generall gaue me to this Iourney, but neuer yeelded me other Ransome then some faire promises and smooth discourses: For hee after corrupted or bribed his keeper (a Captaine of a Pinnace) to whom I had committed him in charge, and very cleanely conueyed himselfe away, without euer bidding me farewell. Howbeit others found better fruites of their Prisoners, which the Generall gaue vnto them.

This Spaniard of mine was a Gentleman, and a Souldier, but had of late yeeres, traded the West Indies by way of Merchandize: With whom I one day talking and discoursing of their Voyages and Nauigations (wherein hee was very well experienced) amongst other things hee told me, that in their Nauigation from the Indies, they sought out Spaine in a more certaine and gallant manner, then wee did England. For (said he) wee seeke out our Coast aloft with our Eyes, by the Heauens, by the Sunne, and Starres, and with the vse of Art, and Instruments, which seldome or neuer failes. But you (said he) that seeke for England, when you are to runne into narrow Seas, are (as I heare say) inforced for your surest Directions (like men blindfold) to search vnder the water, and to scrape with Lead and Tallow to the bottome for Bankes, Sands, and Shelues, as if you would rake Hell for instructions; to finde out the Channell, which you call the Sleeue, and yet for all your soundings, are oftentimes mistaken. I answered him againe, indeed it was true, that our Humilitie taught vs, to goe by the ground: Whereat their Pride led them to gaze aboue the Clouds, and by that meanes so dazeled their Eyes, as that they did often stumble vpon such men of Warre, that now vsed as well to sound Spanish Pockets, as the English Sleeue. Whereat my Spaniard smiling, and shaking his Head, said, hee could not well denie it, hauing so lately made too true experience thereof. For indeed hee was throughly rifled and ransackt of good short Wares, before that euer hee came to my hands. These words of his I remembred, and found true vpon our soundings, and the vncertaine coniectures thereof, with varieties of opinions.

For after wee had all found ground, all that Night wee held on so precisely in following our Generals light, as that very early in the Morning, with the first peepe of day, wee in the Waste-spight looking about, found our selues on the North-side of Silley. Which when with cold comfort wee had perfectly made, and perceiued with all our narrow escapes in that darke Night, hard alongst the Rockes called the Bishop, and his Clarkes: wee began of all hands to looke out for our comforts. And then wee discryed our Generall and diuers with him, aduanced some three leagues before vs, bearing in with all Sayles towards the Coast of Wales.

The morning was very close and foggie, and the Generall steering North-east, in stead of East and by North, ranne right with the Sands of the Welch Coast, on which in that darke weather hee had stricken; and perished, if hee had held on, but a few houres longer. But on the contrary, although wee resolued not to lose the sight of his Lanthorne, yet wee kept our selues as farre to the East as wee could, and yet wee were scarce able to double Silley, but fell close aboord it, and a little to the North of it, at the breake of day. All which when I perceiued

Digitized by Google

(the later Watch being mine, and the Reare Admirall being gone to rest) I did instantly command the Master Gunner to shoot off a great Piece to cause them to looke about, but both our Master, and the Master Gunner were so mad at me for forcing them to follow this course, as that they would hardly haue suffered a warning Piece to bee shot, but said, they deserued to taste the perill of their owne wilfulnesse, hauing brought themselues and all the Fleet, cleane out of the way into this danger. And out of very rage and discontent, these men had quite forgotten all Dutie and Charitie, and would by no meanes haue bestowed a shot vpon them, to alter them from that vnsafe course, but that I vrged their Durie, and inforced them to shoot, and shoot againe three or foure times, one after another, much against their wills.

Whereupon we might within a little time, plainly perceiue our Admirall with all his Traine, to tacke about, finding their owne Errours, as afterwards they confessed. And therefore presently they beat it vp, to double the Cape of Silley, thereby to enter the Sleeue, which with much adoe they performed. But we in the Wast-spight, being now by this time shot in alongst the North side of Cornewall, almost as farre as Saint Ines, our ship being extreame weake and leakie, and our Drinke and Water come to the last cast, at very bare allowance, wee durst not againe put to the Seas in these wants, and in a Vessell so ill able to beat it vp against the winde, to double againe the Point of Silley, whereby to recouer the Sleeue. And therefore stood alongst the Coast, and that night anchored before Saint Ines, where wee found sundry Spanish Carauels, and Flee-boates of the Spanish Fleet, which was set out vnder the Adelantado, to haue incountred vs at our returne from the Ilands, but were all dispersed and tossed with the same Storme, that before had scattered vs, which fell out very happily. For if wee had met, wee must haue tryed the Battell, chiefely by Boording, or else trusted to our Sayles, for that our best and greatest Ordnance (for the ease of our Ships in these stormes) were stricken downe vnder hold. So that wee should haue found great disaduantage, to haue incountred with a Nauie, comming strong and fresh from the Maine, and wee tired, and scattered a sunder, with a long and painfull Voyage. Herein was Gods fauour and mercy mightily shewed towards all sides: For by this Storme, which so furiously for the time afflicted vs, were wee, and that Spanish Fleet vnder the Adelantado seuered, and kept from incountring, which had cost much blood, and mischiefe: and to say a truth, in all likelihood, the worst might haue fallen to our shares.

Spanish Fleet dispersed.

For when wee had left the Ilands and were once bresse sayled for England, I obserued, that before the Storme, diuers of our best Ships, made all the haste they could homewards, neuer following nor attending the Admirals course, nor light. Which is an Errour too much vsed amongst vs, and very disorderly and dangerous, as would haue beene well found, if the Adelantado had then met with any of those straglers, or with the Admirall himselfe homewards bound, so slenderly accompanied.

Disorderly haste homewards.

Which manner of disorder and scattering, in the Conduct of a Royall Nauie, especially in so long a Voyage, is very fit to bee straightly reformed.

These Spanish Flee-boates and Carauels, had made many landings by stealth, on that side of Cornewall, and put the Countrey in great frights, and amazements: especially, vpon the report of a great Fleet, that was comming after them for England. Whereupon our Reere Admirall from before the Saint Ines, left the Seas, and went a Land, to take some order for the Countrey of Cornewall, whereof hee was then her Maiesties Lieutenant, seeing it then in much amazement and feare, and so meant to goe ouer land to Plimouth, there to meet with our Generall.

From the Road of Saint Ines, the next morning, wee in the Wast-spight set sayle for Kingroad, and met with such foule weather, as that ouer against the flat Holmes, shee brake againe her Maine yard, which was before broken, and new fished in the beginning of this Voyage. But at last, with much adoe wee brought her about, to Kingroad, and within a few dayes after moored her safe in Hungroad, where I tooke speedie order for the paying, and discharging of her men, at the Spaniards cost, and also for the repayring of her decayes.

By this time wee also had newes, that our Admirall and the rest of our Fleet, were safely met, and arriued at Plimouth. And at the same instant also wee had intelligence, by a small man of Brasil, but newly come from Corke in Ireland, that Sir Iohn Norris President of Munster, and the Lord Burgh Deputie of Ireland, were both lately deceased.

Death of Sir Iohn Norris and Lord Burgh.

Of which two men, her Maiestie and the Realme had no small losse, being both Martiall men of as great worth, and seruice, as England bred in many yeeres before. And although it be no part of this matter to speake of them, yet their Deathes, being diuulged to vs at the same time, cannot be thought vnfit, or vnworthy (by the way) heere to be remembred and lamented.

After I had thus taken order with the Officers of the Ship at Bristoll, I receiued Letters from the Lord Treasurer, and the Lord Admirall, for the accomplishing of that, which I had already (out of due consideration) gone in hand withall: I meane the discharging and paying of the Marriners and Souldiers, being to the number of foure hundred men, which would haue growne to a great, and needlesse expense, to haue kept them in pay and victuals vntill such time as I could haue sent vnto the Court, to receiue directions backe againe for the same. And therefore did first take vp monies vpon credit, and then by the Drum make knowne in Bristow, that there were were Sugars, Brasil wood, and Fernanbuck aboord o. r Ships, which I would presently make sale of, to those that would giue most for it, and not merchandize vnder hand, nor in secret, to the preiudice and deceiuing of her Maiestie. And, therefore, with the knowledge and aduice of the Master, the Purser, and Boatswaine of the Ship, and the Customer, and Searcher of Bristow, I landed those Wares in safe Cellers, and sold them to the best Chapmen in publique, testified vnder the hands of these Officers of the Citie, and of the Ship, for my discharge in that behalfe, and made thereof fiue hundred pounds. The which summe I deliuered to one Askew then Purser of the aduenture, to the end that hee by his Booke might pay the Mariners, and the Souldiers by the c: Rowlands wages, and other poore men vnder my Charge, which was duely performed.

10 d The which I haue beene the more prisse in rehearsall vnto you, for that I had [illegible] paines and care, in getting these Sugars, and Brasill wood aboord vs, one of our ships that was ready to founder in the Sea, before Saint Michaels, and abandoned to any that would aduenture to goe aboord her, to fetch away the lading. Which businesse (in that vacant time that the Armie lay at Villa Franca, and not before S. Michaels Towne) I put my selfe, and my Marriners vnto, and had not so much paines and trauell in the getting, as trouble and vexation afterwards to preserue it, whilest it was aboord, where I came to Kingsale, from the purloyning and stealing of the Mariners, and Officers of the Ship: and yet for all that, I dare vtter much more then I will speake, that if there had beene in some other of her Maiesties ships the like regard for those goods that were gotten, and of the prisoners taken in this Iourney, and as faithfully answered as were these, there then for all the crosses and wracke that had happened, it had fully returned to her Maiestie the double value of all the Charges, she had beene at for this Voyage. But it was strange to see, what carelesse courses were held in all such actions, as were set out by the State, and what poore returnes were made againe into the Exchequer. And therefore more strange, that the Prince could subsist so often to set out, such chargeable Voyages, without any manner of getting, more then to particuler persons. For so fell it out before in the Indian Voyage, when Sancto Domingo, and Cartagena were taken, and sacked by Sir Francis Drake, and when Cades in Spaine was surprised, and sacke by the English Armie, where was infinite wealth. But that of Lisbona in Portugall, vndertaken by Sir Iohn Norris, where the Suburbes did so abound with Merchandize and Spicarie, being wholly at the mercy and disposition of our Armie, was to be excused, for that our Ships kept not promise with him, in comming vp the Riuer, that should haue both assisted the land Armie with Munition and Victuals, and also carried away those Spiceries and rich Merchandize: wherein the Sea-men were greatly wanting, and taxed by the generall voyce. But in this Voyage, wee all saw and knew, that there were beside Brasill wee, three good Prizes taken that came from the Hauana, laden with Cochynella, and other rich Merchandize, besides the Siluer, Gold, Pearle, Ciuet, Muske, Amber-greece, which was amongst the Passengers. And those three Prizes (whereof one was about 400. Tunnes, by the report of those Merchants that came in them) were said, and valued to bee richly worth aboue foure hundred thousand Duckets. At the taking of them I stood in our Gallerie in the Wast-spight, with the Reere Admirall, and wee hailed and called vnto some, to inquire of their lading and Merchandize, and from what places they came, whereby wee learned, that they were come from the Hauana, very rich, and at the least to the value aboue said. Whereupon our Reere Admirall said vnto me in priuate, that although wee should be little the better for these rich Prizes, yet he was heartily glad for our Generals sake: because they would in good sort giue contentment to her Maiestie, so that there should bee no repining against the poore Lords for the expense of the Voyage. And for my better satisfaction in the value of them, I had caused mine owne Prisoner to giue me notice of the Ships, wherein hee had Aduentures, and according to the Rates thereof set downe vpon his owne knowledge; those three Ships could not be so little worth, as they all had formerly affirmed. Now if wee doe but looke into the husbandrie and prouidence of former Ages, and of the mightiest Empire, and best gouerned State that euer was, wee shall plainely see, that they euer tooke a more strict and iust account of the benefit of their gettings and Victories. And that it was an especiall regard of the Roman Consuls, and Generals, at their returne from a prosperous Warre, to render a plentifull gaine into the publique Treasurie, which made their State still able to subsist in their great actions. And many times their greatest and worthiest Captaines were deepely called in question, for imbeseling any part of such gettings, as amongst others, was that famous Scipio, surnamed Africanus, prosecuted in that kinde by the Petilij, notwithstanding his many great services to the Common-wealth. But what became of all these our gettings God knowes. Onely I heare, that there was a Composition made afterwards with her Maiestie for the Cochynella, and other Merchandize, not to a third part of that it was worth. For neither that, nor yet any of the other riches, could truely come to light or publique knowledge, because they were neuer faithfully certified vnder the hands and testimonies of sufficient Officers, when they were first taken: nor any of that which was preserued sold when wee came home, but onely to the Buyers aduantage. And yet in Conclusion, they that had so played the wise Stewards, in so prouiding for themselues, and their followers, had all the grace and gaine, from those that had more carefully and iustly intended the publique Seruice. But this generall neglect of truth and merit throughout the world, is the cause, that so few doe apply to follow those sincere and unprofitable courses: especially, seeing how many doe daily, by fraud and flatterie, finde shorter and smoother wayes to Honours, wealth, and preferment: Euen beyond all measure and expectation.

Note touching priuate gaines and publike losse in many Expeditions.

Roman policie.

The Conclusion of the Worke, with some later Aduertisements touching His Maiesties Care for VIRGINIA.

WE haue now compassed the World in the Courses of so many Planets, euery of which had a peculiar wandering, and yet none erring from the publike benefit of the Vniuerse. And as in Geometricall compasses one foote is fixed in the Centre, whiles the other mooueth in the Circumference, so is it with Purchas and his Pilgrimes, in this Geographicall compassing: they haue their owne motions, but ordered in this Circumference, from, for, and by him which abideth at home in his Centre, and neuer trauelled two hundred miles from Thaxted in Essex (lately adorned and augmented with Franchises by his Maiestie) where hee was borne. All their lines tend to this Centre, and this Centre to the Basis and Ground thereof, that is to his Country, to the honour and benefit wherof, he and all his are due. All Nations dance in this Round to doe the English service, and English Trauellers here enioy the Mayne; others the By, to attend, and with their Trauels to perfect the English, at lest the knowledge of the World to the English.

The Map of England.

ANGLIA
Pars Scotiæ
REGNI
HIBER-
NIÆ PARS
Hibernicum mare
MARE VERGIVIUM
GERMANICUS
OCEANUS
Gallic
confinia
Meridies
Dublyn
Waterford
Bangor
Dundalk
Caryck
Angleſey
Carnarvan
Barnſley
Halyhead
Hartland point
Lezard point
Falmouth ha.
Salcombe
Portland
Wight
Yarmouth
Lincolne
Yorke
Durham
Carlisle
Berwick
Newcaſtel
Hexham
Lancaſter
Manchester
Liuerpoole
Chester
Shrewsbury
Worcester
Glocester
Oxford
Buckingham
Stafford
Northampton
Leiceſter
Nottingham
Derby
Lincolne
Norwich
Cambridge
Ely
Bedford
Hertford
Stamford
Huntington
Barwick
Northumberland
Cumberland
Weſtmerland
Bishoprick
Yorkeſhire
Lancaſhire
Cheſhire
Shropſhire
Staffordſhire
Warwickſhire
Leiceſterſhire
Lincolneſhire
Nottinghamſhire
Derbyſhire
Yorkeſhire
Norfolke
Suffolke
Cambridgeſhire
Huntingtonſhire
Bedfordſhire
Hertfordſhire
Middleſex
Eſſex
Kent
Surrey
Suſſex
Hampſhire
Berkſhire
Oxfordſhire
Buckinghamſhire
Northamptonſhire
Rutlandſhire
Glocesterſhire
Monmouthſhire
Herefordſhire
Worceſterſhire
Radnorſhire
Montgomeryſhire
Denbighſhire
Flintſhire
Merioneth
Caernarvonſhire
Anglesey
Carnarvan
Denbigh
Flint
Chester
Shrewsbury
Ludlow
Worcester
Hereford
Radnor
Brecknock
Monmouth
Glocester
Oxford
Reading
Windſor
Kingſton
Guilford
Darkeing
Lewes
Haſtings
Rye
Winchelſey
Canterbury
Sandwich
Dover
Rochester
Maidſtone
Tunbridge
Arundel
Chichiſter
Portſmouth
Southampton
Winchester
Baſingſtoke
Newbery
Abingdon
Wallingford
Henley
Aylesbury
Buckingham
Brackley
Northampton
Oundle
Peterborough
Stamford
Grantham
Boſton
Lincolne
Gainsborough
Retford
Doncaſter
Yorke
Ripon
Richmond
Durham
Newcaſtel
Morpeth
Berwick
Alnwick
Hexham
Carlisle
Penrith
Cockermouth
Whitehaven
Lancaſter
Preſton
Wigan
Warrington
Manchester
Liuerpoole
Chester
Nantwich
Namptwich
Middlewich
Northwich
Macclesfield
Congleton
Newcaſtel
Stone
Stafford
Lichfield
Tamworth
Coventry
Warwick
Birmingham
Worceſter
Droitwich
Bewdley
Kidderminſter
Bridgnorth
Shrewsbury
Wenlock
Ludlow
Leominſter
Hereford
Weobley
Ledbury
Tewkeſbury
Glocester
Cirencester
Malmeſbury
Chippenham
Marlborough
Newbery
Reading
Abingdon
Oxford
Woodſtock
Chipping Norton
Banbury
Brackley
Towcester
Daventry
Northampton
Harborough
Leiceſter
Melton Mowbray
Oakham
Uppingham
Stamford
Market Deeping
Spalding
Boſton
Sleaford
Grantham
Newark
Lincolne
Gainsborough
Retford
Workſop
Doncaſter
Pontefract
Wakefield
Leeds
Halifax
Yorke
Thirſk
Northallerton
Richmond
Durham
Darlington
Newcaſtel
Morpeth
Alnwick
Ber

YEa, in this English Centre also I haue chosen the Centre of that Centre, the Renowmed Name of Queene ELIZABETH; to which, because Mortalitie hath depriued vs of her Person, wee haue added that of King IAMES; the All that is left vs of Queene ELIZABETH, and more then that All in further perfection of Sexe and Arts. With those auspicious Names, as the faire Starres in the Constellations of both Poles, our Pilgrimes beganne their Progresse; by the Light of those two Eyes of Great Britaine, they haue taken view of the World, and therefore heere wee end in our Pilgrimage with those two auspicious Names.

His Maiestie first (for Brute is vncertaine) hath combined a Trinitie of Kingdomes into an Vnitie, Petiit ex in gentem vnam, & made the Ocean the Way to his Inheritance, hath rooted out the wonted barbarisme of Borderers, of Scottish Feuds, of English Duells, of Irish Bogges; hath confirmed and fenced those crude and more indigested beginnings of our prosperitie; hath enioyed Soueraigne-rie longer then euer did any of Britaines Soueraignes (and still & still may we long long enioy him) hath giuen so manifold securitie against the extreamest and most fatall rigor, both in number, weight and worth of Royall pledges.

The Map of Great Britaine and Irland.

He is beyond comparison compared with others, a meere transcendent; beyond all his Predecessors, Princes of this Realme; beyond the neighbouring Princes of his own times, beyond the conceits of subiects dazled with such brightnes: Beyond our victorious Debora not in sex alone, but as Peace is more excellent then War, and

Salomon

Salomon then David. In this also that He is, and we enioy his present Sunshine; in regard of posteritie not onely sowing herein the fruit of his bodie, but of his learned mind, like a Salomon indeed by voluminous Writings: and not (which is more vsuall to Princes) with apophthegmes flashes recorded by others like Saul sometime among the Prophets. A Miracle and Oracle both this in politicall, publicke, morall, ecclesiasticall, positive Theology, and Bookes of deuotion also: that, in that his Royall body hath had the honour not to be polluted with women, abominations, whose Seruus. And as we haue trauelled abroad that wee may bring forraine rarities home, wee find no greater rarity abroad or at home then his Maiestie the Father of the Clergie, the raiser of so many Families to honour, and of honours to Families; whose bounty and clemencie none deny (but others beware least they perhaps haue ill eyes, because his is good) so honoured of his Subiects with awfull loue, with louing awe, that himselfe hath professed no King hee in his superiour: and we can, and all History will professe with vs, that England neuer enioyed better daies then vnder her deceased Mother, and the present Rex Pacifer, who hath secured Britaine in peace and prosperitie, whiles all Christian Kingdomes haue beene shaken with warres: and that, which alone hath escaped the Lions, hath beene bitten by the Adder, the Spanish Dominions being coasted, braued, spoiled of thousands of their people, besides wealth and security, by the baseſt of enemies, the Algier Pirates. Thus at home doth Great Britain enioy this Gem of Goodnes, the best part of the Kingdome of the worlds Greatnes: & abroad, we see that as Gods Steward to others also, His Maiestie hath ballanced the neerer World by his prudence, by iustice of commerce visited the remoter, by truest fortitude without wrong to any man conquered the furthest North, and by iustest temperance disposed the ouerflowing numbers of his Subiects, not in Intrusions and Inuasions of weaker Neighbours, but in the spacious American Regions, (some thinly, others not all inhabited) to breed New Britaines in another World. We haue giuen Voyages thorow this Booke, and being now returned home and fixed on so illustrious a Name, I meane to trauell no more, here I hang vp my Pilgrims weeds; here I fixe my Tabernacle, it is good to bee here: wee haue brought all the World to England, England it selfe to the greatest of her Soueraignes, King IAMES.

1. Sam. 10.

But yet the mention of his Maiesties Plantations, makes me gratefully to mention his gracious care of the same, euen since the former Virginian Relations were printed. I then left Virginia with some griefe and sorrow, because of her distracted Children and Fathers, the diuisions and mutuall distasts of the Company here and Planters there, sighing to God for them, who hath put in his Maiesties heart to compassionate these his Subiects, and hauing appointed the Gouernment to be according to a Commission in that Case directed, hath to further Virginias gaine beene content to suffer the losse of many thousands yeerly in his Royall Customes arising out of Tobacco (so I haue heard deliuered in open Court) that so only that of the New Plantations may bee vendible till the Colonie may recouer greater strength.

His Maiestie is also pleased to send a Running Armie of Souldiers to scoure the Countrey of the vnneighbourly malicious Naturalls; and to secure the planters from their priuie ambushments. For openly they dare not attempt, but lurking in secret places attend aduantages. I feare not but so bright a Sunshine will quickly produce blessed effects.

Of their vndertakers for three yeeres Tobacco, I lust not to speake, because I wish, and euen from that vndertaking, shortly expect better commodities from thence then Tobacco. I cannot but magnifie His Maiesties care, and manifest that also of the Honorable Lords of the Councell, who after diligent search of Virginian Affaires the last yeare 1623. appointed Captaine Iohn Harvey, Master Iohn Pory, Master Abraham Persy, Master Samuel Matthews to search further into the diseases and possible remedies of that plantation. In Februarie and March last a generall

rall Assembly was summoned, and questions propounded to Sir Francis Wiat Gouernour and the said Assembly: First, what places in the Countrey were best and most proper to be fortified or maintayned both against Indians or other Enemies. Secondly, concerning the present state of the Colonie in reference to the Sauages. Thirdly, touching the hopes really to be conceiued of the Plantation, and fourthly touching the Meanes thereunto, &c. Their answere I know not whether I may publish in other things; In this one I presume, for better confirmation of what hath beene said before to incite and confirme Mens affections to Virginia; namely their answere to the third, subscribed (as the rest) by about thirty chiefe mens hands. We hold it to be one of the goodliest parts of the Earth, abounding with Nauigable riuers full of varietie of Fish and Fowle; falling from high and steepe Mountaines, which by generall relation of the Indians are rich with Mines of Gold, Siluer, and Copper: another Sea lying within sixe dayes iourney beyond them, into which other Riuers descend. The soile fruitfull and apt to produce the best sorts of commodities, repleniſhed with many Trees for seuerall vses, Gums, Dyes, Earths and Simples of admirable vertues; Vines and Mulberry Trees growing wild in great quantities; the Woods full of Deare, Turkies, and other Beasts and Birds. Sir Thomas Gates and Sir Thomas Dales reports to the Company, concerning those praises were in no part hyperbolicall, nor any Countrey more worthy of a Princes care and supportance. Other reports concerning the healthfulnesse of the aire (especially where the ground is cleered of woods) and other needfull prouisions of the plantation in numbers of Men and Armes (which some had hyperbolically disgraced) and in all other necessaries, seeing the late massacre hath not permitted it better, I am glad & reioyce that it is no worse, and hope and pray for the fortunate increase thereof daily. I reioyce also to heare (by one lately returned thence, Master Morell a Minister and man of credit) that the affaires of New England are thriuing and hopefull, which two Colonies of Virginia and New England (with all their Neighbours) God make as Rachel and Leah, which two did build the house of Israel, that they may multiply into thousands, and there inlarge the Israel of God, and the Churches Catholike confines, doing worthily in America, and being famous in Great Britaine. These, with the rest of his Maiesties Dominions, and his neerest and deerest possession, Prince Charles his Highnesse, the Count Palatine, the Lady Elizabeth (more shining, more pure in her fiery trialls, and like the pressed palme, and her Royall Godmother, spreading her boughes the more by greater weight) with the sweet and princely Fruits of her wombe, still multiplied (like the Israelites vnder the Crosse) God preserue and prosper vnto the Maiesty of our Dread Soueraigne, the mighty Defender of the True Faith,

KING IAMES;

There is report also of an English Colony left by C. North in Guiana still continuing. Ruth. 4. 11.

Amen O AMEN.

The end of the tenth Booke.

FINIS.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

AN ALPHABETICALL TABLE OF THE PRINCIPALL things contained in the fiue Bookes of the fourth Part of Purchas his Pilgrimes.

A

AAys a Prouince in Florida, 1553
Abayia formozo, a Harbour in Brasile, where is found great store of Amber-greice, Coral, Brasil-wood, Fish, &c. 1240
Abausango Retambuero a great mountaine in Brasile, 1240
Abausanga, the name of a valiant Caniball, 1228
Abermot, a great Lord of Mawooshen, 1874
Aborollas, dangerous Sands & clifts in the West-Indies betweene the Cape and Spirito Santo, 1222
Abraham Cock an Englishman married in America, 1141
Abrioio great Shoalds in the Latitude of 21 and 22 Degrees from Hispaniola westward, 1834
Acara a towne in Peru, 1446
Acacoustomed a Riuer in Mawooshen, 1874
Acapulca, the situation and description thereof, 1418. 1446. 1562
Acarewanas, Indian Kings & Lords so called, 1247
Acari, a Towne, where is made the best and greatest store of wine in all Peru, 1446
Accomack, a Riuer in Virginia, 1694
Acela, a Towne in Florida, 1531
Achele, a Towne in Florida, 1536
Achneres, a certaine people so called: their natures, habitations, fashions, and commodities, 1357
Acle, a Gulph so called, 1244
Acoma, a Towne of 6060 Indians, the passage to which is by staires hewen out of a rocke, 1561, 1562
Acuco, a Province in America, 1560
Acus, a Prouince in America, 1560
Acuti, a beast of Brasile, like a Coney, 1301
Adams Tree in Brasile, 1310
L. Admirall of England his deserued commendations, 1961
Adultery, how punished by the Indians, 1159. by the Æthiopians, 1234. by the Guianians, 1272
Aquacay, a Prouince in Florida, 1553
Aquatorke, a place situate in the Coast of China, on the North, 1433
Age reuerenced among the Sauages, 1333
Ague, a speciall medicine for the same, 1311
Aio, an Iland in Oreinoco, 1248
Aire causing swelling in the legges, 1221
Alaqua, a riuer in Brasile, the depth thereof, and how passed, 1239
Alimama, a Town in Florida, 1545
Allcatrace a rauenous Sea-fowle described, 1376
Alegranca, one of the most northerly Ilands of the Canaries, 1155. the inhabitants and commodities thereof, 1267
S. Alexio an Iland described, 1238
Alexandro Vrsino his relations of Terra Firma, and Peru, 1418, &c.
Alexander, viz. Sir William Alexander Knight, his patent for the Plantation of Noua Scotia, 1871
Alfonso Gabrero his comming to the riuer of Plate, 1350
Algernoone-Fort in Virginia kept by Captaine Dauies, 1748
Alf Nesico, a tree in Brasil very precious and rich, good against bruises, 1239
Allen the Cardinall promiseth the Crowne of England to the Duke of Parma, 1907
Alo, a kinde of drinke vsed by the Spaniards in the West Indies, like Braggat, made of hot spices, 1174
Alcamaca-towne, 1536
Aluarez Nunnez, made Generall of the Spaniards in Brasile, his memorable exploits, &c. 1356, & sequ. His ship-wracke, land-trauell, and famine, ibid. His disrespect among his souldiers, 1357. sedition among his men, 1359. His dissembled sicknesse and trecherous cruelty toward the Indians, 1360. Hee is captinated and sent into Spaine, and the dissention ensuing, ibid. Vide Nunnez.
Amaie, a towne in Florida, 1553
Amam Buquano, two Ilands in Brasile, 1241
Amapajo Riuer, 1248
Amana Riuer, 1247
Amariocapana vallies, and the inhabitants thereof, 1248
Amazons country, 1559, 1218. The names of all the Riuers and Nations betweene it and the Brabisses, 1286. The description of their nature, country, customes, and commodities at large, 1287
Amazon women, their fashions, and countrie, 1358. Vide Women.
Amber, how called by the Indians, 1241
Ambergreece where found, 1224, 1237, 1240, 1313, 1377, 1796
Ambition among Sauages, 1213
Ambroa, a beast in Æthiopia, 1233
Ambush of the Caribes, 1256
Amecaxo, Indians of Brasile, 1310
Amichas towne in the riuer Maruin, 1283
America, 1223. How diuided betweene the Spaniards and Portingalls, gals, 1435. The ſtriſe about it, 1437

Americaes ſtrange beaſts, plants, &c 1325, 1326. & ſequ. Strange Birds, 1329, 1330. Bees and Butterflies, ibid. The envy of the Americans, 1330. Americaes medicinable plants, and venemous, 1330. With leaues of incredible bignesſe, 1332. The cauſe of their warres, 1333. Their irreconciliation with their aduerſaries ibid. Their aſſemblies, weapons, ſkill, archery, ſtratagems, their clamorous fiercenesſe, captiues, 1335, 1336. vid. Indians and Braſilians.

~~Anato, a berry or cod wherewith the Indians paint, 1251~~

Anapernia a riuer, how ſituate, 1247

Anaquia, ſauages ſo called, 1299

Ancica, a place in Affrica, 1234. The inhabitants thereof, the ſtubborneſt vnder the Sunne, moſt blacke of any, their religion, concubines, countrie, and commodities; they are right vnder the line, 1237

Anebas, a place in the Indies, 1248. certaine Moores ſo called, 1250

Angola, a place in Æthiopia, 1212. The inhabitants, markets, lawes, King, pompe, & rites of obeyſaunce, controuerſies, &c. 1233. Their Religion, ibid. Deſcription of the Country, their ſlauery to the Portingals, their coloured cloathes, greateſt diſgrace, their feeding & lodging, 1233, 1234. their manner of taking Elephants, their colo-blacke colour, ſtature, puniſhment of adultery, circumciſion, how eaſily their country may bee taken from the Portingals, 1234. Yeerly ſhipped from it 28000 ſlaues, 1243

Anhelim, Sauages in the Maine of Braſile, 1299

Anchors that are vnſerviceable, how mended without iron, 1390

Angra, the chiefe towne of Tercera, one of the Azores, the deſcription and fortification thereof, 1668, 1143

Anima, a bird in Braſile, that hath on his beake a medicinable horne, 1306

Anneda, a tree very ſoueraigne againſt the ſcurvy, 1625

Annes Hill, the ſituation of it, 1242

S. Annes Iland, 1379

Anoixi, a Towne in Florida, the inhabitants whereof were taken by the Spaniards, 1550

Ant-Beare, a beaſt with a noſe of a yard long, deceiuing Ants with putting forth his tongue, 1214. It is alſo called Tamandros, 1216, 1301

Ante, a place in Florida, the commodities thereof, 1503, 1504

Anteperiſtaſe, and the effects thereof, 1617

S. Anthonie, a garriſon towne of the Spaniards in Florida, 1182

Sr. Antony Raliſe forced to returne for England, 1941

S. Antonio, a Riuer, 1223. the deſcription, commodities, &c. 1239

Antis, a Prouince neere Peru, whoſe inhabitants worſhipped Tygres and great Snakes of 25 and 30 foot long, and harmleſſe, 1457

Apalachen a place ſuppoſed very well ſtored with gold, in Florida, 1501. The chiefe towne thereof deſcribed, their manner of building, and fortification, their commodities of beaſts, fowles, and plants: a geographical deſcription of their countrie, their aſſault of the Spaniards, &c. 1502, 1503

Apamatica, a country in Virginia, 1688

Apanatucke riuer, 1692

Apanawaſpek, a great riuer in Mawooſhen, lying Weſt and by South of Ramaſſoc, 1874

Apanmenſeck, a great riuer in Mawooſhen, ibid.

Apes with beards and muſtachoes, 1243

Aperupa, certaine Indians ſo called, 1259

Apigapigtangs, certaine ſauages ſo called in Braſile, 1298

Aponig, a great riuer not far from Aponik, 1874

Aponik, a great riuer in Mawooſhen, ibid.

Appiſham, a towne on the riuer Aponik, ibid.

Apples of America, 1332 Apples at Angola and Auanas, pleaſant and wholeſome, but eating iron like Aqua-fortis, 1243. Apples in Guiana cauſing ſleepe to death, 1276

Aquirini Indians, 1299

Aquiguira-Braſilians, 1299

Aquixo, a great Lord in Florida, 1546

Aracawa Riuer, 1251. The commodities and inhabitants thereabout, 1251, 1263

Aracuaiati, certaine Indian ſauages, 1299

Araomi, an Iland in Orenoco, 1248

Ararape, certaine Braſilian inhabitants, 1298

Arawagatos, certaine Indians neere Orenoco, 1248

Arbadaos-Indians, their hungry life, 1517

Archers, very expert and ſtrong, 1503. Archers that kill birds flying, fiſhes ſwimming, beaſts running, 1771

Archers-hope, a point of land in Virginia ſo called, 1688. Archers relation of a Fleet ſent to Virginia, 1733, 1734

Arecias, certaine cliffs in Braſile ſo called, 1238

Capt. Argals voyage and ſucceſſe, 1758, & ſeq. His relation of his acts in Virginia, anno 1613. his getting ſtore of corne for the plantation, 1764, 1765. His taking priſoner Powhatons daughter, and freeing Engliſhmen, 1765. his returne, ibid. His valour in diſplating the French, 1768, 1808

Armada furniſhed againſt the Engliſh in the Weſt Indies, their fight, 1398, & ſeq. An armada prepared againſt the Lord Howard, Admirall of her Maieſties fleet at the Azores, 1144

Arrow running in at the mouth of a man, and comming out at his poale, yet the man ſaued, 1206. Arrowes five or ſixe in one body eſcaping, ibid. One and twenty arrowes in one man that liued after 4 houres, 1219. A hundred arrowes in two men before they fell, 1256. Arrowes of Indians that runne through a Target Piſtoll-proofe, 1688

Arrowhotacks, certaine Indians of Virginia, having but 30 fighting men, 1692

Sr. Arthur Gorge, his relation of a voyage to the Iles of Azores, 1938

Articles offered to Port Ricco-men by the Earle of Cumberland, 1163. And receiued. 1164

Articles propounded by Mr. More to the Company planted in the Bermudas to bee ſubſcribed to generally, 1795

Arraroopana, an entrance into the riuer Orenoco, 1248

Armes vſed by the Indians, 1261

Aruba Iland deſcribed, 1246. 1246

Aruburguary, a town of the Epeuremii in the Indies, 1284

Arwarcas, certaine Indians ſo called that dwell in the Wyapoco, 1253

Aſſapana

Assapana, the first Iland in Orenoque, 1248
Assaccona, a Province in Guiana, 1285
Assawais, certaine Indians inhabiting the Plaines of Samia, 1248
Asshamabaga, a riuer in Mawooshen westward from Sagodok, 1875
Asshaw a towne on the riuer Aponeg in Mawooshen, 1874
Aspinet a Gouernor in Nausset vnder the great Massasoyt. his good entertainment of our English forces, 1853
Assumption, a place erected by the Spaniards in the West Indies. 1352
Asticon, a great Lord in Mawooshen, 1874
Atabalipa Prince of Peru craftily taken by the Spaniards, and afterwards perfidiously slaine, 1445, 1452, 1490, 1491
Atacames Bay, the situation thereof, 1401
Atacama, a towne in Peru, 1443
Athul, a pleasant Country neere the Riuer Orenoco, 1248
Atuhualpa, or Atabalipa, Emperor of Peru, his warres with his brother, his victory, crueltie, &c. 1483, 1484, 1485
Ataios-Indians, 1516
Atrizco, a place fiue leagues from Mexico, 1414
Attoca-Riuer, 1248
Atturari, certaine inhabitants of the West Indies, 1299
Anasalii, spirits possessing and vexing the inhabitants of West India, 1213
Auanares, certaine Indians so called, 1514
Aubri a French Priest, lost in New France, and after many dayes found againe, being almost starued, all his food being a fruit worse then wild cherries. 1622
Audacity of the English Admirall in the voyage to the Azores, 1943
Augurari Brasilians, 1299
Autiamque a Prouince in Florida described, with the commodities thereof, 1550, 1551
Axa a place in America, 1561
Aximocuntla, a place in New Spaine, 1558
Azores Ilands, their number and nomination in particular, why called Azores, and why the Flemmish Ilands, 1667, 1668. Azores Iles situated in the Atlanticke and Westerne Ocean, betweene 37 and 40 Degrees, 1938. the inhabitant Portingals hate the Spaniards, and would bee freed from them, if they might fall with a Gouernour that could protect them from the Spaniards. 1952
Aztatlan a Prouince neere New-Spaine. 1559
Ayard, Indian wood so called. 1251
Ayer, a disease in Tercera. 1671
Aygas Indians, their nature and commodities described. 1351
Aymay a Towne in Florida, called by the Spaniards The towne of reliefe: the commodities and description thereof. 1537

B

BAgres, a very strange Fish in Rio Grand in Florida. 1548
Bahia a Towne in the West-Indies neere the Line. 1189
Baldiuia, his death by a cup of molten-Gold which the Indians forced him to drinke, saying, Now glut thy selfe with gold. 1443
Baldiuia, a places name neere the South-sea. 1391. Baldiuia Port 1442. 1443
Balparizo, a place in America. 1399
Balsamum, of three sorts in Tuppan Basse neere Brasile, white, red & blacke, all very odoriferous. 1189
Bancke in the New-found Land knowne by Mariners to bee neere by the testimony of Birds, 1628. The description of it, and the fishing there, ibid.
Banner of a Spanish ship, hung vp in one of the Churches of Leyden, in token of triumph, 1909
Baptisme of Spaniards leaueth no character in the Indians, 1323
Baptisme forbidden by the Deuill to the Sauages, 1564
Baratta, a delicate perfume, and admirable in curing greene wounds, 1276
Barbudos Iland, the description and commodities thereof, 1255, 1256
Barede, an Indian towne, 1364
Bareras Mermethues hils in Pareyna, 1237
Capt. Barker of Bristowes nauigations, 1180
Capt. Barker slaine in Brasile, 1195
Barkley, viz. Sir Iohn Barkley his noble resolution, ambition and courage, 1151
Baroti, an India towne, 1364
Barrennesse of women how dispelled by the Indians, 1303
Barrenuis Indian inhabitants, 1349
Bartholomew de las Casas his discourse of Spanish cruelties in the Indies, 1569, & sequ. his disputations with Doctor Sepulueda concerning the same point, 1631,
Saint Bartholmew Valley in New Biscany, 1562
Baschirepos-Indians, 1337
Basenesse of the Spaniards in refusing the Earle of Essex his challenge, 1924
Basse, great plenty summer and winter taken at Matachiest, 1859
Bastimento Hands, 1244
A Bath temperately hot in Dominica, 1158. A Bath curing diuers diseases, 1281, 1282. Bates boyling meat, 1185
Batiscan Riuer in Canada, 1611
Battell of Sauages, 1218. 1264, 1272, 1272, 1273, 1348. Battell of Sauages with Spaniards, 1260, 1261
Batts very great and noxious, 1284
Baximere a place fertile with fine gold, 1413
Bay of Cods in Canada, 1616
Bay of heate, ibid.
Baya, a towne in Brasile, 1142, 1438
Bayama, a Gulfe in the West Indies, 1241
Bayamond, a riuer in Port-Ricco, 1169
Bayas de Sant Antonio, sands on the coasts of Brasile, 1238
Bayshas de Ambrobrio, certaine clifts so called, 1223
Beares tame taught by Sauages instead of Ladders, to carry the climbers vp on trees, 1644
Beares that swim 14 Leagues from the Continent to feed on Birds, 1605
Beasts with armed scales repelling Iron in America, 1326
A Beast called Hay that liueth vpon haire, 1328
A Beast with a monstrous snout, ibid.
Beasts hideously howling, 1381
Beasts that carie their young ones in a bag vnder their belly, 1502. A beasts hide of strange forme and fashion, 1560
Beds of what kind vsed among the Sauages, 1188
Beefe how kept in the Ilands of Mona and Sauona, &c. 1146
Beeues infinitely plentifull, 1171, 1421
Bees without stings, 1364
Belle a voire, a riuer of Florida, discouered by the French, 1603

Digitized by Google

Bolligods, 1202
Bengula in Affrica, 1234
Saint Bent, an Iland in Brasile, 1240
Bermuda plantation distrest by Rats in infinite number, 1796. Their deuouring their fruits, ibid. The weakenesse and mortality succeeding, ibid. & 1797. The prediction thereof portended by Rauens, 1797. Bermudas Plantation vnder the gouernment of Master Moore, ibid. Vider. Captaine Tucker, ibid. Its growth inhabitants and commodities, 1798. Its gouernment by Captaine Kendall and Captaine Butler, ibid. Its Forts built by Master Moore, 1802. Its gouernment by a Triumuirate; ibid. A Church built, with supplies of all necessaries, ib. Bermudas plantation affaires vnder diuers Gouernours, and the fortification thereof at large, 1804 1805, 1811. Bermudas impregnability, 1823. Englands naturall and nationall right to plant in Bermudas, 1811
Bermuda Ilands infamous for storms and thunder, their situation, 1169. Called the Deuils Ilands, 1737. Opinions of their number, magnitude, circuit, and latitude, seasons, and climate, 1738. Pearle-fishing there, ibid. The danger of arriuall thither by ships; their soile, want of venemous beasts, fruits, Cedars, 1739. Palmes there, and their commodities; trees, Silke-wormes, ibid. The reason why they were not formerly inhabited, ibid. Their want of fresh water, fish great store, making of salt there, 1740 The wholesomnesse of the fish, and its cause; store of Whales, Fowles, ibid. Wild Hogs and Tortoises, 1741. Bermudas liked by Sir Thomas Gates, and other Mariners, and preferred before Virginia, 1745. The religious orders in Bermudas vnder the said Gouernour, 1746. Bermudas possession taken, their solemnities, Preaching, Administration of the Sacraments, mariage rites, &c. 1746. Bermudas crosse erected by Sir Thomas Gates in memoriall of his deliuerie, the inscription, 1747. Bermudas plantation by the English, 1793, 1794. Articles proposed to the plantationers, 1795. Bermudas store of Ambergreece, 1796. Bermudas geographically described, 1798. The soile, ibid. With other commodities at large, 1799, 1800. & seq. Another description of its seuerall excellencies, 1806
Bermuda City in Virginia, 1767, 1768
Berries making drinke, of a restie- & that operation, 1739
Bertiz, a Riuer, 1206
Beuer-skins very plentifull in Canada and New England, 1842
Beuers burnt by Sauages, 1644
Biarataca, a beast in Brasile that killeth with his stincking smell men and dogs, 1503
Biesaie a nation neere the Riuer Parana in the West Indies, 1364
Bigrorgia, Indians of Brasile, 1360
Bird-land, one of the Virgin Ilands in the West Indies, 1159
Birds incredibly plentifull there, 1159, 1160
Birds strange in Brasile, 1305, 1306 Birds that haue two generations, that dance, that sound like bels, that haue three skins, that haue hornes, ibid. Birds that bring tidings of ships arriuall, whose fat is good for leosenesse; birds that die and liue againe: their seuerall names, 1316, 1317. Birds in America very delicate and glittering, their natures, names, and diuersities, 1329. A bird of a most monstrous bill, 1330. A bird no bigger then a Drone Bee, that makes most harmonious melody, 1330. Birds beleeued by the Barbarians to bee sent from their friends with newes, 1330. Birds like Snipes that discouer dangerous shoales, 1374. Birds taken with hooke and line, 1383. Their description, ibid. Birds worshipped as gods, 1560
Birds strangely taken in the Bermudas, by men yelling, and howling, 1741
Biscaines, a sauage people inhabiting neere Grand Bay, on the north of New-found Land, 1882
Biscouers vse to fight well, 1150
Bishop of Cusco taken prisoner by the English at Cadiz; he is set at liberty without ransome, 1933
Bishop and his Clerkes, certaine Rockes on the north side of Silley so called, 1967
Blanches Bay, 1386
Blancke, a place whither the French Biscaines, and Portugals yeerely repaire for Fish, neere the South Cape of New-found Land, 1886
Blacke-Pinace sunke, 1167
Blacke-Rocke, a place yeerely fished by three or foure hundred sayle of Spaniards, 1837
Blanco Iland, 1266
Blasius, a Frier of the Order of Francicus of Sinill, being in great extremity through the Spanish bondage of the Spaniards, was releeued by the Sauages of the Ile of Dominica, 1833
A Blazing-star in the yeare 1590. Ouer Tercera, 1678. Another ouer England Anno 1606, page 1685
Blondy flix rife, and the causes thereof, 1149
Blew-beads well sold for two or three hundred bushels of corne, 1710
Bores in Brasile that haue their nauels on their backes, by the sent of which the Dogs hunt and destroy them, 1361
Boates of strange forme and fashion, 1504. Boates onely of hollowed trees by the Indians of New France, 1633
A Boat that sailed from the Bermudas to Ireland, 1803. And there hanged vp for a monument. ibid.
Boaeyua, Snakes among the Sauages, 1210
Bogs and watry places engendring euill diseases, 1623, 1624
Boicurecanga, a kind of Snake that hath venemous prickles on his backe, 1303
Bolus, a Riuer in Virginia, the commodities, and inhabitants, 1693
Bonas Ayres, a place in the riuer of Plate, 1218
Bonito or Spanish Mackarell, 1376
Boarding how to bee auoided in a Sea-fight, 1405
Borsis a towne taken by Captaine Petuin in the Portugall voyage, 1926
Boybona an Indian name of a mountaine in Brasile, in English the Rotten Whale, 1240
Boycininga and Boiciningpeba, certain snakes in Brasile that haue bels in their tailes, and are very poysonous, 1304
Boyes of the Indians not suffered to take Tobacco, their reuerence to their elders, their habit, &c. 1869
Boytiapua, a Frog-eating Snake or Serpent, wherewith if a barren womans hips be strooke, the Indians say she presently conceiues with child, 1303
Boynara, a place in the Indies, 1246

Boysterous

Boisterous Seas, not agreeable to London delicacie. 1941
Brabisse River, and the particular names of the Riuers betweene it and the Amazons, and Nations, 1286
Bracheo, neere the Paretaes in the West Indies, 1246
Branco de Malambo, 1424
Brasile, the Riuers, Capes, and Ports thereof described: their danger or safety for Nauigators, 1237, 1238, & seq. Brasile when first found and discouered, and by whom, 1437. The controuersie concerning it, betweene the Spaniards and Portugals, 1437
Brasile, the difficulty of saylingthither some times of the yeare, 1156, 1157
A Brasilian brought to K. Henry the eighth in his wilde accoustrements, 1179
Brasile is sixe hundred leagues from the Streights of Magellane. 1193
Brasilian coasts full of Shoales, 1195
Brasilian Sauages, 1225, 1226. seq. strange and monstrous Beasts in Brasile, their names, 1242, 1243. Brasilians their nature, subiection, man-eating, shooting, nakednes, flat-heads, 1243. plenty of mynes, 1243. Brasil, and Brasilians, described, 1289. & seq. their opinion of an Iland of God, of their soule and paradise, ibid. Their mariages-rites, drinkings, diet, ruling children, liberalitie, drunkennesse, rudenesse, manner of eating, 1290. Their lodging, nakednesse, modestie, haire, houses, child-birth, ceremonies, loue of children, and education, 1291. Their entertaining strangers with weeping welcome, their hospitalitie, their drinking smoake of Petigina, their trafficquing ornaments, the vsage of their wiues, iealousie, musicke, 1292. Singing, instruments, loue of poetry, their burials, and excessiue lamentation, tooles, weapons, archerie, their arts, quick-sightednesse, trauels, swimming, fishing, swords, 1293, 1294. Their manner of eating mans flesh, and diuers their ceremonies at large, 1295, 1296, 1297. Their creating Gentlemen, the badges thereof, and their three titles, Abaetes, Murubixaba, Moçacara, 1297. Their languages and nations, ibid. The climate, seasons, nature of the soyle, 1300. Varietie of strange wilde beasts, 1301, 1302, & 1303. Diuersity of fearfull Serpents, and the venome of the climate, 1303, 1304. The varietie of Parats, and strangenesse of other Birds, 1305, 1306. Diuersitie and wonders of their trees and fruits for Physick, and otherwise: the seuerall names and wonders at large, 1310, 1311, 1312. Their maruellous and singularitie of fishes, and their names at large, 1314, 1315. & seq. Their Fishes out of diuers admirable plants together in Salt-water, and their names, 1316, 1317. The delicate fresh-waters of Brasile, and Riuers, ibid. Their strange, vast, and fearfull sea-serpents, and their seuerall names, 1317, 1318. What Fire-stuff commodities in Brasile, 1319. Brasile hath few Lice and Fleas, but infinite store of venemous gnats, ibid. Articles for the good of Brasile to the Spanish King, 1320. & seq. The want of iustice, and the irregularities of those parts, 1321. Their dis-respect of the Iesuits in the matters of counsaile, ibid. How cruelly the Brasilians are dealt with by the Portugals, 1321. & seq. Their want of instruction, and inhumane slauerie, 1324. Brasils beasts, plants, and other liuing things described, 1325, 1326. & seq. Brasile wood, ibid. Difference of plants, beasts, and commodities from ours, and their seuerall description, 1325. & seq. Their astonishment at the hearing of God: Their inconstancie, naturall parts, &c. 1340. Their mariages, and polygamie, the manners of women with child, &c. 1341. The destruction of families, and bounds of their possessions, 1342. Their household stuffe. 1343. Their entertainment. 1344, 1345. Their Physicke and demeanour towards the sicke, their buriall attended with diuellish rites. 1346. Brasils description and chiefe Hauens. 1382. A Brasile Ship taken by Sir Water Raleigh, 1938. Brasile commodities sent for Spaine, not onely gold, but much other treasures, as Ginger, Sugar, Hides, Tobacco, &c. 1817
Brauadoes, are seemed not the hinderers of successe in great proiects, 1946
Braverie, of the English turned to beggerie. 1942
Bridegroomes that giue the first handsell of their sports to their kindred and friends. 1481
Brigalian Iland and the situation thereof, 1240
Buena Ventura, a Riuer in the West Indies, the description thereof, 1413, 1414
Buenos Ayres, a towne in the Riuer of Plate, 1141
Buccaw ganecans, a towne vnder the dominion of Basbabes Segamo of Mawoosheu, 1873
Building without tooles or engines, miraculous by the Indians of Peru, 1477, 1478
Burdones, a place so called, 1266
Burkes rebellion in Ireland. 1893
The Burlings, an Iland so called: the soyle, commodities, and inhabitants described, 1455
Butter how made by the Indians. 1539

C.

CAbot, vid. Sir Sebastian Cabot his American trauels, 1177, 1178. & seq. he discouered so much of the continent of the New World, that it deserued to bee called Cabotiana, rather then America, 1177, 1178
Cabusto, a towne in Florica, 1544
Caaete, certaine Brasilians so called, 1258
Caera River, 1248
Cadiz taken by the English, the Castle surrendred, &c. 1981. Cadiz described, 1932. It is set on fire and rased to the ground, 1933
Caiama Iland, the description thereof, 1248
Caiocame, a towne in Mawoosheu, 1874
Caioses, Canibals so called, liuing in Brasile, 1241
Caiuari, certaine Sauages of Brasile liuing in Caues, 1199
Cale, a towne of Florida, 1532
Californie, a sea so called, 1560 or an Iland, or many Ilands, as others say, 1562
Calenture, 1181, 1182
Caliane, a River in Guiana, very aboundant with gold and siluer, 1260
Caliquen towne, 1533
Callipuny, a mountaine in Guyana, 1271

Digitized by Google

Calis taken by the Spaniards, 1927
Calmes, the strange effects thereof in the Sea, and in mens bodies, 1373
Camalaha, a Fayre in the Indies neere Orenoco, where women are sold. 1248
Camacuiara, certaine Savages that haue paps reaching vnder their waste. 1299
Camana, a road in Brasile, 1142 as also a towne in Peru, 1446
Campseau, a Port in New-France, described, 1639
Camarijiuua, a River, how situate, 1213. Its danger or ease for Nauigation, and the commodities thereof, 1238
Camo a Hill on the coasts of Brasile, 1240
Camoni, Indians, 1514
Campeche the chiefe towne of Iucatan, 1186
Canacum the Gouernour of Manomet, his friendly entertainment to the English, 1858
Canada River, 1606. The adioyning Country, the Inhabitants, description, feasts, fights, lodging, houses, Canons, with other customes, 1606, 1607. They endure great famine, lye, and are false-hearted, their beliefe, and ridiculous relation of God, ibid. & 1609. vide Indians of Canada.
Canasagua, a towne in Florida, 1539
Canauerall, where, 1247
Canarie Ilands, their number, and description, 1369, 1370
Canariagranda, 1185. 1369, et seq.
Candish his Voyage, 1971. & seq. he takes the towne Santos, and Saint Vincent, 1191. Loseth Captaine Dauies, ibid. His arriuall at Port-desire, and the Magellane Streights, ibid. His mutinous company, 1192. and distresse in the streights, 1193. Returne for Brasil, 1194. His company slaine, 1195. His valour and proiects, ibid. Losse of men by Indians and Portingals, 1197. Losse of the Roe-bucke, 1200. Senerity, ibid. His weakenesse, and vnwillingnesse of his company, for going to the Streights, 1200. His voyage further discouered by Anthony Kniuet, 1201, 1202. & seq. The supposed ouerthrow of his voyage, 1203
Canduacu, Brasilian beasts that dart their bristles through a mans skin, 1302
Canari, a Prouince of Morequito, 1248
Cannete, a towne in Peru, 1446
Canri, a towne in the Riuer Marwin in America, 1283
Canibals with faces like dogs at Ports-desire, 1191. Other strange and valorous Cannibals. 1208
Canibals prefer fauour to Candish in Santos, 1203. Cannibals naked and fearfull, 1204. cold Pories, 1208. Their strange entertainment of strangers, 1208.
Canibals called Tamoyes; 1228, 1240. vid. Sauages.
Cano, a famous Nauigator, 1191
Canoas or boats of threescore foot long with 80 men in them, 1380
Cape Blanco, 1379
Cape Saint Francisco, 1400
Cape Saint Antonio, 1147
Capawucke a place in the Indies, stored with gold, 1841
Cape bona Esperanza, the danger of the passage there, 1151, 1152
Cape Rico, 1170
Cape Verdi, 1181
Cape de la vela, 1181, 1244
Cape Frio, or cold Cape, its situation, 1202. Its Nauigation, 1240
Cape Saint Augustine, 1238
Cape Caldera, 1246
Cape de verde, its vnhealthinesse, 1370. Its Ilands, 1371
Capignramirinij a place in Brasile 1238. Cape Agreda, cape froward, 1386
Cape chiqui-towne, 1535. Cape Francois, 1603
Cape Saint Maries, Cape de Rare, Cape Saint Lawrence, 1606
Capcrrocca, a Sauage towne, 1285
Capitua a flat land in Brasile, 1238 Cape-cod, 1647. Cape Charls, 1691. Cape Henry in Virginia, 1687. Cape Laware in Virginia, 1762. Its adioyning Shoales, ibid.
Captaines for warres, how chosen among the Indians, 1262
Captaines errours checked, 1397. patience commendable in a Captaine, 1153
Captaine Listers dangerous attempt in my Lord of Cumberlands voyage, 1143. Hee is drowned and his Ship in his returne, ibid.
Captaine Bayly slaine, 1144
Captaine Munson taken captiue, 1144
Captaine Nortons Voyage, ibid.
Captaine Cates surpriseall of an Argosie of Lisbone. ibid.
Captaine Nortons assailing a Portingall, ibid. Capt. Caue, Admirall in the eighth Voyage of the Lord of Cumberland, slaine, 1147
Captaine Antonie killed, ibid.
Captaine Dounton wounded, 1148
Capurisell a River, 1250
Capucaras, water-Serpents in the Indies, 1211
Capari, a River neere Orenoque, 1247
Carrabouca, a place in India, 1249
Carcocies, Indians so called, 1365
Carder, viz. Peter Carder a Cornish man, his hard fortune and escapes, 1187. The losse of his company. 1188. His liuing two moneths vpon a fruit like Oranges, and his drinking of his owne Vrine, ibid. His conuersing with Indians, ibid. Teacheth them to warre 1189. His departure from them, ibid. His imprisonment, deliuerance, 1189, 1190. His imployment, 1190. His escape from the Portingals, and arriuall to England after nine yeares voyage, 1190
Carigue, a Beast in Brasile that carieth her yong ones in a bag about with her, 1301
Cari-River, 1248
A Carrak runneth a shore to auoid the English, 1938
Caripo a towne in Guiana, 1268
Caroli, a pleasant River neere Orenoco, 1248
Carraemba, Sauages so called, 1199
Carapana, a place in the Prouince of Emeria, 1247
Carraibas, certain Iuglers in Brasile. 1290
Carracus a place in the Indies, 1242, 1248
Caredenas, a Prouince in America, 1560
Carripapoory Ilands neere Guiana. 1268
Carendies a fierce Nation of the Indies, neere the River of Plate: their nature, warlikenesse, and description, 1348
A Carrack runneth her selfe on ground for feare of the English, 1964
Carracks taken and burnt by English Captaines, 1145, 1147, 1148
Carracks not so great as wealthy, 1150
Carracks vsed to returne from the Indies

Digitized by Google

Indies, at the Acores by September, 1169
A Carrack with foure millions and a halfe of treasure burnt in Port-Ricco, 1171
Great Carrack fired, 1182. Another taken, 1183
Carchicenos Indians, 1364
Carcarisso, Indians so called, 1353
Caribes neere Orenoco, 1249 great enemies to the Indians, 1261
Carios Sauages, their nature, commodities, customes, townes, fortification, &c. described, 1351
Captaine Carre slaine in the Portugall Voyage, 1924
Caruolos Sauages, their nature, and description, 1232
Carruco, certaine Sauages in Florida, 1510
Capt. Carsey slaine in the Portugal Voyage, 1924
Cartagena assaulted and taken, 1182, Its description and force, 1419, 1434. Tis massacred by Spaniards, 1584
A Caruell stolne by English captiues, 1151
Cascais, a towne of Portugall forsaken at the approach of the English, 1923
Casiste, a great Floridan towne, 1541
Casuero Riuer, 1248
Casqui a great Gouernour in America, his large dominions, and townes, 1547. 1548
Cassaui bread, 1146. The maner of making it; the goodnesse and description of it, 1173, 1251
Cassia Fistula in Brasile, 1308
Castro, a place on the coast of Chili, 1442
Castro his discoverie, 1447
Casuays, a Riuer in the Indies, 1223
Casslipa River, 1248
Casslipogoros Indians, neere Orenoco 1248
Castle of Cascais yeelded to the English, 1924
Castle of Saint Philip, neere Porto Bello, 1244
Catalte, a Province in Florida, 1553
Caragua Indians, 1300
Saint Catalina Iland, 1438
Caturi River, 1248
Caramaya, a towne in Florida, 1550
Cattle infinite store in Port-Ricco, 1151
Cat of the Mountaine, called by the Indians, Marcayahire, store in Brasile, 1229
Catuoques, a language of some Indians in Florida, 1519
Cawas a Mountaine in Port Ricco, 1170
Caxamalca, a large Indian Citie, described, with its chiefe ornaments, 1489
Cayas, a towne of Florida, 1549
Caycoolcoocoooro, a towne in the River Marwin, inhabited by the Arwaccas Sauages, 1283
Cazique, a Title of dignitie among the Sauages, as much as to say, a Lord. 1502
Cedars, in New France, 1622. In the Bermudas, 1739. Cedars in Alexandria, reported by the Iewes to be them of Libanus, that beare old and new fruit all the yeare, ibid. Cedars ill for shipping. 1747
Ceuola, a Province, 1560. In it are seuen Cities neere together, their manner of making houses, for summer and winter, their commodities of Turqueses and Emeraulds, their beasts, and climate, ibid.
Chachapuya, a Province in America of valiant men, and faire women, that worship Snakes, 1478
Chagre, a Riuer in the Indies, 1180
Chagnare a towne in Florida, 1553
Captaine Chalons his voyage to the Northerne parts, his vnfortunate hap to the losse of the whole aduenture, 1827
Mr Henry Chaltons voyage to the North of Virginia, his comiseration towards a distressed Frier, his taking captiue by the Spaniards, his goods diuided into the Spanish Ships, 1834
Chalaque Province, 1539
Champlains voyage into Canada in the yeare 1603, 1605 His arriuall at Canada: 1606. His discouering of diuers Ilands there, ibid. His returne, 1619
Chauca, a valiant Indian Nation, descending as they suppose from a a Lyon, which they worship for a god, 1457. 1641
Charges of certaine voyages to Virginia, little gaine for losse of life, 1842
Charitie, a great Ship landing at Plimouth in New England, 1856. Charitie of the Indians, toward those which are impouerished by sickneſse, 1869. Charitie and courtesie among Sauages, 1345
Chawonock in Virginia, its different languages mentioned, 1894
Chereno, a great Commander in Port Ricco, 1169
Chebegnados, a towne in Mawooshen, 1874
Cherente, a River in Florida, 1603
Chiaza, a Province in Florida, 1538
Chickhahamania, a River in Virginia, 1692. The inhabitants gouerned by Priests, 1692
Chicaca, a towne in Florida, 1544
Chithilcale, a Province in America, 1560
M. Chidleys voyage for the Magellane Streights, 1187
Children throwne to dogs, 1582
Child-birth, how and with what ease among the Indians, 1263, 1868
Chile, a rich Country in the Indies, 1232. Its description and discouerie by some Spaniards, 1442. The taking thereof by the Spaniard, and the towne first inhabited by them, 1442
China hath two wayes to it through the Streights of Magellane, and Caput bonæ spei, 1193
Chirihuana bruitish Indians so called, 1475
Chiriguana, a Province subiect to Peru, 1419
A Chirurgion curing with words, 1205
Chisapeack a brooke in Virginia, 1692
Chischa, a Floridan Province, 1549
Choamo, a country in Port Ricco 1169
Chesepian-Bay, 1658
Chesupioc-Bay, 1686
Chily, a Province subiect to Peru, its seuerall townes, 1419
Chilca, a place in America. 1398
Chinca, a place in the South Sea, 1416
Chinchilla, a beast of wondrous estimation by reason of a rich Furr, 1395
Cholupaha, a towne of Florida, 1533
Chouakoet-Bay in New France, 1626
Chioosa, a valley in the South sea, 1416
Christs name blasphemed by the perfidie of Spanish-Christians, 1469
Christians cruelty to each other exceeding Sauages, 1623 Christians deserued reproued by the Indians, 1449. How thought of by them, an Indian definition of a Christian. 1450. Christians eate one another, 1508

Chrystall. 1230
Chrystall Rocke in Virginia. 1772
Chrystall Mountaine. 1231
Cholula, a part of New Spaine ruinated, in respect of the inhabitants, by Spaniards. 1577, 1578
Chullula, a place in the South Sea. 1418
Chule, an Iland poorely inhabited by the Spaniards in the South Sea, yet rich with gold. 1392
Churches profanation punished. 1163
Cia, a towne. 1561
Cibola, a Province in America, discovered by the Spaniards. 1560
Cicu, Inhians of Brasile. 1299
Cicuic, a towne in America. 1561
Cilicedemo, a mountaine in Guyana. 1272
Cinque Llagas, a great Carrack fired. 1148
Circumcision among Æthiopians. 1234
Ciuet Cats. 1372
Ciuill dissentions. 1452, 1453
Sir Nicholas Cliffords death by a shot, as hee was at supper. 1184
A Climate unsufferably hot, and within sixe miles againe intolerably cold. 1420
Coaio's, or Coucho's, Indians. 1516
Cobe, a place neere Hauana in the West Indies. 1246
Cobrus, vide Serpent.
Coca, a Floridan Countrey, the townes and commodities therein. 1540
Coche, an Ile neere Margarita. 1186
A Cocke treading a sow, another crowing clearely within twelue houres it was hatched. 1805
Cocos trees, and their fruit described, 1371, 1372, 1173
Corwina a towne, 1279
Coiula, a Province in New-Spain. 1558
Cold very extreame, freezing men to death. 1204. & 1205. vid. winter.
Colliek how cured. 1308
Colliman a precious gumme in Guiana, for sundry diseases. 1276
Colonies in Virginia the first. 1645, 1683, 1684
Colonies plantation, requireth first a faire land, and a safe harbour. 1664. Colonies in Virginia on what conditions granted, as it appeareth by the Patent, 1683, 1684
Colonel Bret, slain in the Portugal Voyage. 1924
Comana a townes name. 1266. Its description and climate. ibid.
Coman Ibes, Inhabitants in the Indies. 1248
Commanders, how farre to trust Officers. 1402
Comorratty, a towne in the River Marwin in America. 1283
Compasse used in travelling sandie Countries. 1242
Compostella Citie. 1528
Conduit-head. 1384
Conde de Andrada his Armie. 1920
Conception, a town in Chili. 1443
Concoere, a towne in America inhabited by Sauages. 1283
Congo, a Region in Affrica, the King thereof: his great strength, his Christian Religion, guard, pompe, riding on Elephants, rites of State. 1234
Conibas lake. 1566. Neere it a stately Citie of Indians, their ornament and great fortification. 1566
Connies of two sorts in Florida, the manner how they are taken by the Indians there. 1551
Conauacus, chiefe Prince of the great people of Nanohigganset, his challenge to the English men, he is terrified by a present of powder and shot. 1854
Coniuration used of the Indians, being in distresse for want of raine. 1867
Conversion of sinners, a worke meritorious, witnesse a Spanish Captaine, 1558
Content, a small Ship of Sir George Carews, fought with three great Spanish Ships of six hundred tuns a piece, 1185
Cooligoa, a Province in Florida, 1549
Cocunibo, an excellent and safe harbor in the West Indies. 1394. The markes whereby to finde it. ibid.
Cordoua-towne. 1446
Cooropan, a place ten dayes iourney from the head of the River Marrawin, 1285. Directions for the iourney betwixt Marrawin, and Cooropan, ibid. Directions to Cooropan from the head of the River Selinama. 1286
Coosheberry, a Province in Guiana: the description, pleasantnesse, healthinesse, and commodities thereof, 7171
Corburrimore, a towne of the Epuremei in the Indies. 1285
Cape Corientes, 1147
Corne how kept in Tercera, 1669
Corn-hil, a place in New-England, where the Sauages were wont to hide their corne, 1845. Corne much increaseth in New-England, 1871
Coro, a towne in America, 1258. The fruitfulnesse & commodities thereof. 1258
Corrall, 1316
Combination of the English forces in New-England, 1843
Complaint of a Sauage woman for her sonnes losse, stolne away by Hunt an Englishman, 1853
Copiapo a towne of Chili, in the Indies. 1440
Coquinibo, an American towne, 1443
Coresao Iland, how situate. 1146
Coro, a towne and Castle, burnt by Captaine Preston, and Captaine Summers, 1186
Cororoespe, or the River of Toads in America, 1223
Cortez a Spaniard, cometh with Don Antonio de Mendoza, for discoveries of land, sendeth forth Francis Vlua with a Fleet of three Ships for that purpose. 1569
Corupeo, a spirit vsing to possesse and vexe the Americans, 1215
Cainero River, 1248
Costa Ricca, a West Indian towne, copious with gold, 1419, 1446
Covetousnesse the cause of the dispeopling the Indies by the Spaniards, 1569
Couetousnesse is an Idoll, vnto which the Spaniards haue sacrificed millions of Indians, 1602, 1603.
Couetousnesse reproved by a Sauage, 1332
A provinciall Councell held at Lyma. 1421
Countaile vsed among the Indians, 1270
Countries vnhealthy. 1360
Countries very healthy, 1274
Countries vnknowne, and description of them, 1383, 1384
Cowab, a Mountaine. 1271
Cowardlinesse of the Indians, 1154
Cowardlinesse of the Master of the Roe Barke in Brasile, 1198 Cozco, the Imperiall City of Peru, the opinion the Inhabitants haue of of it, the admirable Temple of the Sunne in it, rich hangings, images, profuse ornaments, Chappels, roofes, plates, gardens, heapes, all Church-instruments in gold, their priests, and charinesse of their Temple, 1464, 1465. Their divers Monasteries, their riches, manner in mariages, care of Infants, 1457. Their superstition, feasts, braverie, fasts, solemn feasts for the Sunne, 1472. Their adoration, & sacrifices solemnized at the rising thereof, holy fire, festivall eating, drunkennesse, 1473 Their sooth-saying, ibid. Manner of creating Knights, and Ceremonies, 1474. Cozco, also described, with its situation, fortification and splendour, 1496, 1497

Crabs on the land in great abundance, 1172, 1330: Ten or twelue sorts of Crabs, 1315

Crocodiles by the Indians called Aligartos, 1228. Their description, and maner of fishing for them, and bait. ib. His Cods are muske, ib. Crocodiles in America harmlesse, and kept tame, 1326. Crocodiles in great Sconles, 1400.

Saint Croix point, and the countrey described, 1611, & 1622

Crooroorere, a Suppay towne in the Indies, 1285

Crosses erected by the Spaniards in New-Spaine in token of possession, 1557

The Crozier, a Starre neere the Pole antartick. 1157

Crokemago, a Province in Mawooshen, neere the River Shawakotoc. 1875

Cruelty is companion of cowardize, 1395. And feare, ibid. Requited in the Spanish Governour by the Indians, 1449. Cruelty cruelly rewarded, 1959

Cuba, an Iland described, 1147. Its want of fortification, the chiefe Port Lahauana, wherein is a castle of Spaniards, 1415. The length and breadth thereof, and the Christian townes thereof named, 1529. The King, commonaltie, men, women, and sucking children, how many murdered by Spaniards, 1572

Cueremaghas, Indians so called, their nature, strength, courtesie, and commodities, 1351

Cueruo, one of the Azories Iles, taking its name from the multitude of Crows breeding in that place, 1939

Cuigbe Indians, 1299

Cuigtaib, Brasilians so called, 1299

Cuimechi, warlike Indians that wander in droues in the mountains to seeke food, 1561

Cuinao Province, 1557

Cuinquiro, a place in New Spaine, 1557

Cuiseo Province taken by the Spaniards, 1558

Culiazzon, a Nation in the Indies, 1527

Cultalculebes, Indians of Florida, 1519

Cumberlands first Voyage discouered, 1141. The time when they set forth, his ships and company, ib. His arivall at Brasile, 1142. Hee taketh foure Ships from the Portingall, ibid. The hinderance of his Voyage for the South sea, his disastrous losse of a Hulke, men, and goods, his returne to England, ibid. His second voyage, his acts at Sluce, the 88 service, his company returne, 1142 His third voyage, ibid. His ariuall at Saint Michael, and attempt there, danger by a Fish, ibid. Taketh a prize from the Spaniards, the evasion of some of his men with a small Boat, 1143. His surprizall of Fiall, a town in Tercera, ibid. His losse of men, and danger of his person, ibid. His great want of drinke, his clemencie, and equity. ibid. The number of his prizes taken in the voyage, his returne; 1144. His fourth voyage, purchase, losse, returne for England. ibid. His fifth voyage, hindrances, defeating, retiring to London, and committing the charge to Captaine Norton; ibid. His gaines by the Portingal Carrack taken in that voyage, 1145, 1146. His sixth voyage, purchases, sicknesse, returne, ibid. The seuenth voyage, ibid. The eighth voyage, and the surprize of a Carrack, 1147. The ninth voyages successe, 1148. The tenth voyage, ibid. Eleventh voyage, 1149. Twelfth voyage its preparation, company, and ships, ibid. His meanes to get intelligence, ill successe of his plot, 1150. Arines at the Canaries, 1151. His care and government of his company, 1151. His discreetnesse, and guidance by reason, 1152. His protests, ibid. His ariuall at Dominica, and entertainment, ibid. His comming to Port-Ricco, 1153, 1160. To the Canaries, 1155. His perill at the assault of Port-Ricco, 1161. Besieging Fort-Mora, his iustice, severitie, and taking the fortresse, 1162, 1163. Offers the ransoming of Port-Ricco, departeth hence, 1168, 1169. Meetes with his Fleet by Flores, 1176. His returne and danger on the coast of Normandie, 1176, His unfortunate missing the Spanish ships at the Azores, where hee lost forty millions, 1673. And others of fiue millions, ibid.

Cumana, a towne, 1186, 1248

Cumpehe, Brasilian Sauages so called, 1299

Cunames, Indians in New Mexico, their townes, and faculties of painting described, 1561

Cunarreo sands, 1506

Curenda, a populous Indian nation in the River Parana described, their apparell, ornament, and commodities, 1350

Cures wrought by prayers, 1515

Curewapori Ilands, 1279

Curiadan, a place in Trinidad, the inhabitants called Sauages, 1247

Curiapan, a place neere Orenoque, 1147

A Current in the Sea, vnder thirty two degrees, 1174

Currents that set East or West may breed mistake in Navigators, ibid. Other vncertaine currents, 1400, 1373

A Current setting to the Northward in forty degrees, 1759

Curucucu, Snakes in Brasile of 15 spans long very venemous, 1304

Curupija, Indians of Brasile, 1299

Cusco, a place in the South Sea, 1416. & Citie as bigge as Rome, it hath in it a thousand Spaniards, 1420

Customes of fishing; of wonderfull gaine to the townes of Lubecke, Hamborough, and Embden, 1837

Customes paid yearely to the Prince of the Indians, 1866

Curisa-chiqui, a Province in Florida, 1537

Caynaccaro a Province, 1558

D.

DAinty, a Ship of Sir Richard Hawkins, fortunate in voyage for her Maiestie, vnfortunate for the owners, 1367

Dale, viz. Sir Tho: Dales ariuall in Virginia, 1733. His relation of the passages there, and how the affaires stood, An. 1614. p. 1768, & seq. His commendation. 1770

Damarius Coue, a place neere Munhiggen, forty leagues from Plimouth in New-England, North-east-ward, 1856

Dancing, distinguishing nations in the Indies, 1480

Dancing of the Virginians, 1687, 1573, 1574

Dariene, a Sound in the Indies, 1180

Sir Ber. Drake, his arriue at the New-found-land. 1883

Captaine Darmers fishing voyage, his coasting the shore till hee came to Virginia, his men fall sicke, his returne to the New-found-land, his discouerie of many fruitfull Coasts, and pleasant Rivers from Hudsons River to Cape Iames. 1830. The prosperous successe hee had in procuring a truce betweene vs and the Savages: is treacherously betrayed, wounded, and flyeth to Virginia for succour, and there dyeth, 1831

Capt. Davies voyage to the South Sea, 1191. & seq. His losse of Cap. Candish successe, ibid. & seq. Accused for treacherie, 1193

Candishes opinion of him, 1194

Daycao, a riuer in Florida, 1554

Dayes of publike Thanksgiving instituted in New-England, 1867

Dayes length in New-England, 1871

Dead, not lamented by some Indians, 1523

Deaws very unhealthy to Englishmen, and Indians, 1250

Deere worshipped by some Indians, 1479. Deere of seuerall sorts bringing forth two, three or foure at once, 1831. Deere good store in New-England, and the manner of taking them, 1845. Deeres-flesh dried in the winde, food of the Indians, 1881

Dermers resolution by letter, of some passages in Virginia, 1778, 1779

Description of the King of Spaines invincible Armada, 1897

De Todos los Santos, a towne in the West Indies neere the line, 1189

Devill consulted withall by the Indians of Wyapoco: they call him Peyar, 1263. As also Wartipi, who beats them sometimes blacke and blew, 1274. The Brasilians call him Curupira, Taguain, Pigtangua, Machchera, & Anhanga, they feare him much, and think their soules after death are turned into Devils, 1290

The Devils, illuding, wounding, and tormenting the Savages of Florida, 1516, 1517. The Devill worshipped by New-Spaniards, that is, in Noua Hispania: their delusion by him, 1558. Temples built for him, and an oratory made, and meat given him by them of new Mexico, 1561

The Divell forbids Baptisme to the Indians, 1564

The deuils policy in keeping the Indians poore, 1868. His tryall of those which are dedicated to him, ibid. His being worshipped by the Virginians, his images, feare, and name of Oke, 1701

Dyals, how admired by the Virginian Savages, 1708

Diamonds in Brasile, 1230, In Canada, 1612. in New France, 1611

Difference betweene Campe and garison Souldiers, 1944

Diego Flores de Valdes, a Spaniard sent with a Fleet to Brasile, and the successe, 1440, 1441

Diego de Almagro, the first Spanish discouerer of Chili, 1475. The next Pedro de Maldiua, 1476

Discoveries of diuers Ilands, and Lakes in Canada, 1614. & seq. A Discoverie of the English full of danger. Discoveries proue best, when least discouered, 1955

First discoveries of America the new World by English, and Spanish, 1812

Diseases very strange, 1191, 1214, 1258

Disorder, the fore-runner of ill successe in Candishes Fleet, 1202

Disorder more weakeneth the English, then the enemy, 1966

Disputations touching Spanish cruelties in the Indies, 1601, 1602, 1603

Dissequebe an Indian River, 1269

Dogs worshipped, 1471. Ravenous dogs, 1172. Terrible to the Indians, 1327, 1328

Great dogs that fight with Buls and carie fifty pound on their backe in hunting, 1561

Dogs that deuoure men, first taught by Spaniards, 1582

Dogs that cannot barke, 1696

Dolphin described, his loue to mankinde, 1375

Saint Domingo, 1146. The description, riches, and fortification thereof, 1418

Dominica, 1152. The inhabitants described, with their brutishnesse, 1685. The inhabitants hate the Spaniards, loue the English, their presents, tradings, and commodities, ibid. Want of cloathes, ornaments, Canons, Merchandise, and red painting, 1158. More copious description of the soyle, woods, mountaines, towne, women, modestie, King, familiaritie of their maids, chastitie, desire of cloathes, 1158, 1159. Their common fare, state, meat, haire, desire to learne English, 1159. Distinction of maids and wiues, 1159

Dominica assaulted, and taken by Sir Francis Drake, 1182. Inhabited by Spaniards, the sand of the Rivers mixed with gold, great plenty of Roots, and Sugar Canes, 1835

Don Alfonso Perez de Guzman, Commander of the Spanish Fleet in 88. 1901

Don Antonio de Mendoza, his strife with Cortez, for most discoveries, and sending forth divers by sea and land for that purpose, 1560

Don Diego de Pimentell, taken prisoner in Zeland, 1911

Don Iohn of Austria, defeated of his intended treachery, to get to himselfe Mary Queene of Scots his wife, 1893

Dos Patos, a River in America, 1218

Don Pedro and his company taken prisoners by Sir Francis Drake, 1905

Douer-cliff-sound, on the North of Virginia, 1648

A Doue lighted on the Maste of English Ships, 1967

Dragnanes, a certaine kind of Indians in Florida, 1510

Drake, viz. Sir Francis Drakes first discovery of the Southermost land, 1391. His treacherous vsage by the Indians, 1392. His expedition with a great Fleet, 1434. His riches gotten by his voyages, 1439

Sir Fran. Drakes original parentage, education, progresse, first voyage, surprising of the towne of Nombre de Dios. 1179. His burning 20000 Duckets in Merchandize, and protestation for the South sea, 1180. His circumnauigation, the opinion of his riches, ibid. Which

Digitized by Google

Which were sequestred to the Queen, his voyage to Domingo, company and ships, arines at Saint Iago, and takes it, 1181. His comming to Dominica, and Saint Christopher, 1181. Takes Saint Domingo, 1182. And Cartagena, ib. Fireth two Spanish fortresses, ibid. His returne, benefit, losse of men, ibid. His voyage at Calz, his Fleet, and Prizes, ibid. Takes a Carrack, 1183. His going for the Azores, ibid. His last voyage, His fellow Commissioner, his taking Rio de la Hacha, Rancheria, Tapia, S. Martha, and Nombre de Dios, his death, successor, and Fleets arivall at Plimouth, 1183. His disagreeing with Sir John Hawkins, 1184. His comparison with him, 1185. 1186. His buriall, 1245. His clemency to conquered foe. 1905

John Drake lived 15 moneths with the savages, 1186. His mishaps, 1440, 1441. His fame gotten by his iourney to the West Indies, and about the World, 1916

Drano, a River neere Orenoco. Its unhealthy passage, 1250

Dreames seeming ominous, 1191

Drinke to some poison, to other bodies beneficiall, although the very same, 1173. Great drinking-match by the Indians, 1285. Drink made of roots, great want of drink, 1364. Its quality and varietie among the Indians, 1381. Drinking esteemed by those of Peru the greatest courtesie that can be offered by King, or Subiect, 1473. Strange drinking, 1519. Drinke made of Berries at the Bermudas, 1739. Drinke made of Plummes in Virginia, 1784. Scarcitie of drinke, 1143

Drowth extraordinarie in New-England. 1866

Drugs in Guiana, 1276

Drunkennesse, a vice of Savages, 1189, 1473. Drunkennesse like to overthrow an English Armie, 1916

Ducks, the curiousnesse of making their nests in the Magellane Streights, 1385

Dudley, viz. Sir Robert Dudley his voyage, and successe to Trinidada, and the coast of Paria, &c. 1186

Duke of Medina his kindnesse to the English, 1834. His yearely tribute of the Fishers of Tunny, Mullit, and Purgos, 1837. His preparation, for the Spanish Fleet in Anno 1588, 1895

Duke of Parma his forces in 88, 1902. His apparell for horses, 1903. His vaine hope of the Crowne of England, 1907

Duke of Medina is prohibited the Court, because hee returned without the English Crowne, 1910

Duke of Parma's force against England, 1895

Capt. Du Pont his voyages into the New-found-lands, 1643

A Dutchmans courtesie to the English, 1261. Dutchmens treachery to the Englishmens inhabiting Virginia, 1841

Dutchmens false-heartednesse, 1721 And abuse of Capt. Smith, by ioyning to Powhatan, 1723. Their treacherie frustrateth his attempt for the surprizall of Powhatans house, 1725. Their plot to kill Capt. Smith, and fruitlesse issue, 1726. Their continued base treacherie, and deserved pension; one comming to a miserable end among the English; the others having their braines beaten out by Savages, 1729

E.

EArle of Essex, his worthy acts, 1917. His valorous chalenge in Portugall Voyage, 1924. His voyage to the Iles of Azores, 1935. His trouble, travell, and arivall: Hee taketh three Spanish Ships, 1937

Earth medicinable: earth like gumme in Virginia, 1765. Earth red like terra sigillata, 1765

Earth-quakes, 1476

Earth-quakes frequent in Tercera, 1670. A terrible Earth-quake in S. Michaels Ile, and the dreadfull effects thereof, 1678, 1679

Ease and effeminate life, enemies to great practices, 1436

East-India warres, disburden the Spaniard of West India gold and silver, 1815

Ecatepeck, supposed the highest mountaine in the world, from the top whereof are discerned the north and South seas, 1177

Eclipses, what conceited to be by some Americans, 1462

Echro, an Iland neere Port-Ricco, 1267

Eggs very hard; and sounding like Bels, 1306

Ekinnick, a kinde of worme that poysoneth the water, 1286

Elephants, how taken by the Æthiopians, 1234

El estado de Arauco, the description thereof, the fiercenesse of the inhabitants, and their opinion of the Spaniards, 1442

El Calao, the Port of Lima, 1446

Capt. Ellis his relation of Sir Richard Hawkins his voyage, 1416

Q. Elizabeths providence in repairing her Army Royall, 1903

Q. Elizabeth denounced excommunicate by Pope Pius 5, her subiects are discharged from loyalty and allegeance, 1892. Her enemies abroad are disappointed, traitors at home taken in their owne pit, ibid. Her triumph after the deliverance in 88. 1912

Q. Elizabeths Encomium. 1823

Q. Elizabeths martial affairs, 1181

Elizabeth-Bay, 1386

Elizabeths Ile in Virginia, 1648 Its description, being thought fit and commodious for plantation, 1649. At large, 1651. vide Ile of Elizabeth.

Elizabeth her manifold dangers, and gracious deliverances, 1890

Elizabeth Iles, inhabitants, described: their ornaments, nature, proportion, wittinesse, courtesie, yet theeverie, 1651. The description of the climate, ibid.

Embalming by the Indians, how well performed, 1459

Embassage from the English to the Massasoyt, chiefe Commander of the Savages in Pacanokick, 1851.

Embroderie exercised among the Savages, 1560

Emeralds of inestimable worth, 1420 1446. An Emerald as big as an Estriches Egge, and therefore was adored by the Indians, 1481. Emeralds store, 1560

Emeria the easternost part of Dorado, 1247

Enemies to bee kept in awe, as the Spaniards by the Earle of Cumberland at Port-Ricco, who though he meant not to spoile their towne, yet told them not so much, 1186

Enemies taken among the Savages are commonly killed and eaten; 1217, 1218

Engines in warre by the Indians performed, 1361

Englishmens discoveries of America, 1812

An English Pilots treacherie, and adherence to the Spaniards; 1773

Digitized by Google

Englands gaine by Salt-fish, Poore-Iohn, Salmonds, and Pilchards, 1837

Englishmen rather desirous to bee renowned for mercy and clemencie, then for dreadfull conquest, 1959

English miracles by Captain Smith in Virginia, such as the Spaniard vsed in the Indies, 1727

English-Bay in the Magellane streights, the description of the inhabitants, 1388

English Captiues delivered by the Duke of Medina, 1934

English Nauy returneth from Azores Iles, 1968

English forces mustered, 1903

English gallants reprehended for their vnprouidence in going to warre, 1942

English inhabiting the River Wiapoco. 1270

Englishmen chusing rather to trust God and the Sea, then the deuill, and the Spaniards, 1186

Englishmen striking terrour in the Charibes, 1273. Take possession of the Mountaine Gomerigo, 1278

English mens nature. 1440

Englishmen slaine in Virginia by the treacherie of the Indians, and the cause why, 1841

Englishmens encounters in New-England, 1841

Englishmen cheat the Indian of their victuals, and turne sauage, 1865

Englishmens throats cut by the Portingals, 1959

English fugitiues appointed to giue the first onset against their owne Nation, 1908

Englishmen sinke the Spanish ships, or take them, 1673, 1674

English Fleet set forth, and successe, 1676

English returne from the pursuit of the Spaniards, 1910

English ships by their nimblenesse farre exceeding the Spanish Galliasses, 1905

English victory, ioyned with courtesie, 1677

English famine and mortalitie in Virginia, 1690

English souldiers dye with drinking of water, 1927

English desire a battell with the Portingals, 1924

English forbidden to furnish the Spaniard with munition, 1927

Enmity imparted by sending a rattle, Snakes-skinne full of arrowes, 1854

Entertainment, how strange among the Sauages of Pores, 1208, 1292. Among Brasilians,

Enuy espyeth more in pretended, then in professed enemies, 1959

Eparigotos, enemies to the Epuremi in India, 1248

Epeoya, a great Iland in Brasile, 1241. Called by the Indians Sapeawera, ibid.

Epuremi, Indians neere the River Orenoco, 1248

Equibone, a towne at the foot of Marwin in America, inhabited by the Arwaccas, and Parawagotos Sauages, 1283

Eregooda, a place neere Orenoco, 1248

Escudo, an Iland, 1185

Estanca, that is, a farme place, where slaues keepe cattle, and make Cassani bread among the Indians, 1146

Estechemins, Sauages in Canada, enemies to the Irocois. 1607

Estriches tame, 1230

Eteowbo, a mountaine in America, 1214

Etepararange, a mountaine abounding with gold, 1229

Etaoca, a place in America, 1219

Etapuca, a great mountaine in America, 1214

Etamariqua, a Cape in Brasile, its fitnesse for Nauigation, 1238. And description, ibid.

Etapusick, a place in the Indies, with singular mynes of gold, 1222

Etechemins, Sauages of New-France, that are theeues and treacherous, 1626

Etoica, a River in Brasile, its dangerous Nauigation, 1240

Euill-peace, a towne so named by the Spaniards in Florida, and the reason thereof, 1533

Europa, a River that commeth into Orenoco, 1248

Example prevaileth more then precept. 1743

F.

FAls of water very violent and strange, 1610

False-heartednesse how auoided in the treacherous Indians by Spanish policie. 1552

False-heartednesse of the Sauages, called Massacheusets, 1859

Of the Indians towards Master Westons men, 1865

Famine very vrgent in the Indies, 1214. Miserable in the same country, 1258

Famine among the French-men, 1325. Among the Dutch and Spaniards, at the River of Plate, the vnnaturall effects thereof, 1348. Famine among Spaniards, 1401, 1477, 1508. Among the Indians, and some few hungry Spaniards, 1517, 1518. Incredible famine, 1526. Famine and mortalitie of the English in Virginia, 1690. Famine in great extremitie, enforcing man-slaughter, and man-eating, 1732

Famishing strangely escaped, by Andrew Hillyard, all his fellowes perishing, 1802, 1803

Faraon, a towne burnt vp by the English, in their returne from Cadiz, 1934

Fast, publikely instituted, and obserued, by the English in New England, being in distresse for want of raine, 1867

Fasts instituted in England, and Zeland, for Gods gracious deliuerance in 88. 1911

Father Martin Perez, of the societie of Iesus, his relation of his trauels, and description of Ginoloa, 1562, 1563, & seq. His baptizing many Indians, and instructing them in a knowne tongue, &c. 1564. What kinde of Christianitie hee taught them, 1564, 1565

Fayael, one of the Ilands of the Azores, the description and taking thereof by the Earle of Cumberland, 1672. Their feare of the English Nauy, 1676

The Feags a strange sickenesse in the Bermudas, much annoying the English, 1797

Feare, the cause of Tyrannie, 1437

Feare, causing death in the Indians, 1522

Feasts of Sauages, 1607

Feathers vsed for cloathes, 1212

Feuers, how eased by plants, 1311 How gotten in hot Countries and auoided, 1370, 1371

Febacco Iland. 1266

Ferdinando Gorge, his employment in the plantation of New-Scotland, 1842

Captaine Fenton his expedition and ouerthrow, 1141, 1142

Fer-

Digitized by Google

Fernambuc, a port in America, 1190, 1202, 1438
Fernandes Gires his discovery of a Land in the south Sea, with the rare commodities thereof, 1422
Fetherstons Bay in Virginia, why so called, 1716
Figs of Brasile, 1332
Fight betweene the English and and Spaniards in Saint Iohn Port-Ricco, 1161. Betweene English and Indians with Portingals, 1197. Fighting against a native countrie rewarded, 1404 Fighting betweene two Indian nations in Peru very extreame and bloody, 1458. Betweene the English and Spaniards in the narrow Seas, 1906. A fight betweene the English and Spaniards before Greeneling, 1908. A fight by sea betweene the English and Spanish before Cadiz, 1930
Fire burning in the woods for the space of three dayes, 1890. Great danger by fire, 1145, 1918
A Fish endangering a boat and men, 1142. Fishes flying, 1157, 1314 Their danger of devouring in Sea or Ayre, 1376
Fishing of New England very commodious to the plantation of Virginia, 1842
Fishing how commodious, and especially to the Hollanders, 1821
Fishing with swords, 1714
Fishing with golden hookes, 1216
Fishing with wood, 1251
Fish great store in Guiana, 1275. A fish with foure eyes, two above water, and two under: a fish also with warme blood like flesh. ibid.
Fish made drunke with wood, 1276
Fish like beefe in taste and proportion, 1283. It is called the Ox-fish, the description thereof at large, 1313 1314. It hath eyes which it may close and shut at will, armes, and hands, in his head it hath 2 stones of approved soueraignnesse for the stone in the body, ibid.
A Fish that snorteth, and thereby is apprehended, ibid. A fish that hath two broad stones in his mouth ibid. fish good against the poison of a Snake, and very wholesome, 1313. Fish that maketh the holders hands benummed, or shaking as one that hath the palsie: Fish that maketh all that touch it to sticke fast vnto it: Fishes like men and women; their fearfulnesse to the Indians, their manner of killing men: Fish that dyes the water, and exadeth the Fisher: Fish that proues a remedy for the Spleene: a Fish that casts his mouth, skull, and feet, 1314, 1315 & seq. A Fish with fingers, and vttering a squeaking sound, 1331 Fish so plentifull that it may bee kild in the water with clubs, 1549 Fishes that haue voices like Owles 1639. Good fishing, 1640
Fits-Morrice slaine in Ireland, 1893
Flatterers, base kind of people, 1957
A Flemmish Ship burnt at the fight before Cadiz, 1930
Flores, a place in the Azores, 1144 The description thereof, 1175, 1672
Florida possessed by the Spaniards, 1501. The inhabitants many of them tall of stature, and expert archers, 1503. The townes and inhabitants thereof variously described, 1503, 1504. & seq. Florida hath gold and pretious stones on the sea-coast, 1554. The distance of sundry places one from the other, necessary for trauellers, 1556. Losse of inhabitants in Florida by Spanish cruelty, 1589. The great age of some men there, 1604. They liue in the woods 3 months in the yeare, vpon hunting, 1604. English men the first discouerers of Florida, 1813
Flutes made of Reedes, 1687
Fluxes stayed by fruits, as Guianas Papaias, and wild Grapes, 1172. by a berry, 1276, 1308. by a plant 1311
Fooles-coat, a liuery of the Spanish Inquisition, 1179
Forests trauelled by compasse, 1636
Fort Mora summoned, besieged, and taken by the Lord of Cumberland, 1163, 1164. The strength and danger of passage for ships by it, 1164
Fort S^t. Iohn of the Spaniards in Florida, 1182
Fortileza, a towne in Port-Ricco, 1164
Fountaines of pitchy substance very hot, that serue to calke ships withall, 1481
A Fountaine that turneth wood into stone, 1670
Fox-Iland, on the north of Virginia, 1654
Francis Bouadilla chiefe Marshall of the Fleet in 88 sent for England, 1901
Francisco de Zeres his relation of the conquest of Peru and Cusco, called New Castile, 1491. & sequ.
Francisco Pizarro a Spaniard, his discovery of Peru, and successe, 1444, 1451, 1452, 1489, 1490. 1491, 1492, 1493, 1494.
S^t. Francis a riuer in America, 1223 A towne there with Chancery, Bishop, Deane, and Vniuersity of Spaniards, 1421
Franciscan Fryers of great esteeme in the West Indies, 1242
French-Bay in New France, 1621
French-Pox cured with Sassafras, 1655
French nauigations to the north America, 1602. Their discovery of Cape Francois, the Riuer May, taking possession there, and discouering eight riuers more, their dissention and ouerthrow, ibid. French famine on the Sea, their miserable distressed scarcity in Florida, mutiny, and ease by Sir Iohn Hawkins, 1604. Frenchmen remoue their plantation from S^t. Croix to Port Royall, 1626. Frenchmen settle themselues within the limits of the English in the Newfound-Land, though to their small aduantage, 1828. Frenchmes courteise to the English nation, 1834. Frenchmens couetousnesse, and their infamy in that regard, 1638. Frenchmens mutiny against their Captaine, discouered and reuenged, 1624. Frenchmen baptize Indians, 1644. French yearely repaire to the New-found Land for Traineoyle, 1884. French Kings wrongs to England, 1892. French Ambassador plotteth with Moody about the death of Queene Elizabeth, 1893. Frenchmen displanted from Virginia by Captain Argall, 1808, 1809. Frenchmen seise on part of the King of Spaines Armada, 1910
Fresh-water-springs in the New-found Land, 1886
Fryer Marco de Niza accompanied with diuers other, their voyage into New Mexico, and the adioyning coasts and lands, 1560, 1561 & seq. Fryers that shewed more charity to the Indians then some mariners of our English nation, 1828
Captaine Frobisher his valorous and prosperous conflict with the Spanish Armada in 88, and rewarded

warded with the order of Knighthood, 1907
Fruits poisonous 1213. Good fruits how discerned from the bad in the Indies, 1379. Fruits gathered 3 times in the yeare, 1527
Fuego, one of the Ilands of Cape Verde, the fruits therein, fiery hills and naturall fortification, 1371
Funerals among the Indians of Wiapoco, 1264
Furres very good bought for knives, 1232
Furres rich and sweetest of any thing 1505
Fyall or Fayall, a towne in the Azores, the fertilitie, bigneſſe, dwellings, and taking thereof by the Lord of Cumberland, 1143

G.

GAboretho, an Indian towne, 1364
Gachepe, a high land neere the entrance into the riuer Canada, 1606. The description and bigneſſe thereof, 1616
Galliaces in number 4 in the fleet in 88, vnder the command of Dom Vgo de Moncada, 1900. They are described, 1901
Gallies, and their power in fighting, 1183. Gallies of Anda-luzia ſeiſe on a Barke of Plimouth, 1925
Gallions comming to the Weſt Indies were caſt away on the Ile Guaddopa, 1833. Galleons of the Fleet in 88 described, 1901. A Gallion burnt in the Portingall voyage, 1918
Games vſed among the Maſſaſoyts, 1852
Garcillaſco de la Vega, his relation of the ancient Kings, and Lawes of Peru before the Spaniſh conqueſt, 1454. & ſeq.
Gardens of Gold, 1465, 1466
Garone a riuer in Florida, 1603
Gates, viz. Sir Thomas Gates his arriuall in Virginia, 1732
Gates his Bay in the Bermudas, 1739. Sir Thomas Gates wrack and redemption on the Iland Bermudas, largely related, 1734, & ſeq. His endurance of a grieuous ſtorme, 1734, 1735, 1736. Arriuall at the Iland, 1737. His care for the Virginian Colonie, ſending Rauens there, and care and toyle to furniſh Pinaces for a voyage, 1742, 1743. His puniſhment and pardon of mutinies, and conſpiracie against him, 1743. His croſſes by a ſecond mutiny, 1744. By a third, ibid. His puniſhing of a factious fellow, 1745. His Letters to Sir George Summers, containing his deſire of furthering a Plantation, and reclaiming the factions, 1745, 1746. His religious orders in Bermudas, 1746. and poſſeſſing it for the King of Englands, with good rites and ceremonies, ibid, & 1747. His ſetting ſayle for Virginia, and arriuall there, 1748. His miſerable welcome, ibid. His aſſuming the Preſidency there, 1749. His ſpeech to the diſtreſſed Company, with its acceptation, 1749. his propoſing orders to the Colony, 1749. His allotting times of labour, 1750. Purpoſe to leaue the Country, 1751. Reſigning the Preſidency, 1754. vnto the Lord De la Ware, ibid. His returne for England, 1756. His teſtimonie vnder oath of the ſtate of Virginia, 1757, 1758
Gawaiba, the north weſt point of Port-Ricco, ſomewhat dangerous for nauigation, 1170
A Generall ſhould bee courageous in fight, and courteous in victorie, 1411
The Generals authority among the Spaniards, 1413
Geneuera Riuer, 1416
Gentlemen, in what manner made knowne and ſtyled among the Braſilians, 1297
Sir George Carew his valour in the voyage to the Azores Iles, 1840
Maſter George Percies relation of the ſouth colony of Virginia, 1685 et ſequ. He is Deputy Gouernor in the abſence of the Lord De la Ware, 1763
Maſter George Thorpe too courteous to the Sauage-Virginians, cruelly repaid, 1789
Saint George, one of the Ilands of the Azores, the ſituation and deſcription thereof, 1672
St. George, one of the Bermudas or Sommer Ilands, 1794
George Fenner, his valorous encounter with the Spaniſh Armada 1906
Georges Fort, a plantation neere the riuer Sagadoc in Mawooſhen, 1874
Giboya, a great land Snake without poyſon, in Braſile, 1303
Gilbert, viz. Sir Humfrey Gilbert his arriue at the New-found land, 1882. Loſt one of his Ships at the Iles of Canady, and returning for England was ouerwhelmed in the Sea, ibid.
Captaine Bartholmew Gilbert his voyage to Virginia, with the occurrents therein, 1656. 1657. et ſeq. He is ſlaine and foure men more by the Indians, 1658
Gilbert-point, on the coaſt of the New-found Lands, 1648
Ginge a towne of Sauages in the Indies, 1364
Ginoloa, an Indian Prouince, the deſcription and ſituation thereof, 1563. The fruitfulneſſe thereof, commodities, inhabitants, and their workmanſhip and apparell, their long haire, tall ſtature, great valour, and weapons, 1563, 1564 readineſſe in them to heare the Goſpell, their Baptiſme, and Catechiſme, ſubiection to the Deuill, and familiarity with him, their houſes, ingenuity, and adoration of Caſtles, with Mats, and couerings of Reeds, 1564. Their formes of mariages, and Polygamy, education of children, faſhions in making Knights, adopting ſonnes, manner of burialls, ibid. et 1565
Ginger plentifull in Port-Ricco, 1171
Ginger how it groweth, 1178
Gironde, a riuer of Florida, diſcouered by the French, 1603
Glaſſes ſold deare, 1232
Guamanga, a City in the ſouth ſea, 60 leagues from Lima, 1416
Gnats, 1359
Goauar Riuer, 1248
God acknowledged by the Æthiopians, and called Cari-pongoa, 1233. by the Braſilians Tupan, 1290
Godwin-ſands, 1149
Gomeribo, a mountaine in Guiana very fruitfull poſſeſſed by the Engliſh, 1278. deliuery thereof to an Indian as tenant to the King of England, 1279
Gomora, one of the Canary Ilands, 1833
Iohn Goodmans voyage and diſtreſſe in New England, 1848
Gold (which is ſtrange) very much diſpraiſed, 1814, 1815. Gold in Port-Ricco, 1165, 1170. In Topimo, 1560
Gold-getters ſhall haue many corriuals, ibid.
Gold ready tried of great valew in the Riuers of Port-Ricco, 1170
Gold in no valew, 1189

Digitized by Google

Gold among the Topinaques, 1229 among the Paries, ſtore, 1229. Gold, 1230, 1231. 1232, 1358. In Affrica, 1237. The manner of purifying it in the Indies, 1242. and plenty there, ibid. Gold in Guiana how, and how pure, 1249 1261. Gold in ſhew, 1255. in the Riuer Aracow, 1263. Gold how greedily deſired, 1277. Gold ſtore in the mountaine Oraddo, and plaine of Mumpara, 1284. Gold gathered two wayes, 1395. Plenty of gold, ibid. Gold procureth trechery, 1415. Gold great ſtore, 1419. Gold ſhipped from Cartagena for the Spaniard euery yeare, how much, 1420

Gold is not alwaies the greateſt elevation of the Country where it is, 1814, 1815

A Gold-deſirer how ſerued by the Indians, 1391. The deſire of gold maketh Chriſtians infamous among Pagans, 1449. Gold called by them the Chriſtians god, 1450. Gold not valued, 1526

Golden Country, 1231

A golden chain of incredible weight and bigneſſe, 1480. Infinite ſtore of gold in Peru, 1490. 1491, 1494. A gold-wedge, the greateſt that euer was naturally found, loſt in the Sea, 1571

Goſnols voyage to Virginia, their reſolution to plant, and breaking off againe, 1647, et ſeq.

Goſnols hope, 1648

Gotierez his conuerting the Indians after the Spaniſh faſhion, 1449

Gouernment neceſſary by Land or Sea, 1156

Gouernours-Iland, a little Iland neere Port-Ricco, abounding with ſtore of Pigeons, 1172

Cap. Gourgues, a Frenchmans nauigation into Florida, his reuenge on the Spaniards, for the wrongs his Countrimen ſuſtained by them, 1604, 1605

Grampus, a Bay in New England ſo called by reaſon of the multitude of Grampuſes found in that place, all kind of hearbes, roots, and trees, and a very fertile ſoile, 1846, 1847

Granada, a new Kingdome of the Spaniards in America, the plenty of gold, chiefe City, and ſeuerall Prouinces thereof, 1419. Extream deſolation and loſſe of inhabitants by the ſauage tortures and cruelties of the Spaniards, 1591, 1592 1593, 1594, 1595

Granata Iles, 1186

Grande, a riuer in Florida, 1603

Grand Bay, a Harbour on the north of the New-found Land, 1882

Grapes good againſt the flux, 1172, Grapes in New France, 1622

Graſſe wanting in a blacke champion country of the Indies, 1214

Gratioſa, one of the Iles of the Azores, 1671. It ſubmitteth it ſelfe to the Engliſh Admirall, 1960

Gregory 13. his rage againſt Q. Elizabeth, 1893

Greedineſſe a dangerous enemy, 1152, 1393. Greedineſſe loſeth his prey, 1964. Greedineſſe of Mariners a maine preiudice to the Virginian Colony, 1751

Sir Richard Greenuile Generall of Virginia, his voyage and acts, 1645. his deſperateneſſe againſt the Spaniſh Armadoes, 1961

Sir Richard Greenuiles fight with the too vnequall Spaniſh Fleet, his ſtout reſiſtance, and great preiudice the Spaniards ſuſtained by him, his taking and death, with his Encomium, 1678

Guammbique, ſtrange ſmall birds in Braſile, of admired colour, hatched as ſome thinke of bubbles of water, 1305

Guacapo, drinke made of the coorſeſt Sugar called Molaſſes, and hot ſpices, in the Indies, 1174

Guacoya, a towne in Florida neere the riuer Rio grand, the inhabitants and commodities thereof, 1552

Guadalcanal, one of the Iles of Salomon, 1447

Guadalupa-Ile, wherein is a Bathe ſo hot, that meat may bee ſeethed in it, 1685

Guiahate, a towne in Florida, well peopled, and plentifull with Maiz 1550

Guaiacatu, Sauages of Braſile, 1299

Guaiacones-Indians, 1519

Gualua a ſtrange Spring in Tercera, 1670

Guaniguanico, 1501

Guarionix, a Realme in Hiſpaniola, the King pittifully abuſed by Spaniards, 1751

Guanos, a fruit in S. Lucia which eaten ripe ſets a man a ſcouring, but greene, ſtayes from ſcouring, 1265

Guatatlan, a prouince in New Spain 1559

Guayanaguacu, cane-inhabiting Sauages, 1299

Guayo, Braſilian Indians. 1299

Guayayaquill a riuer with 2 Ilands in the mouth, 1400 1446

Guaſco, a Prouince in Florida, 1554

Guatimala, a Prouince in America diſpeopled by Spaniſh cruelty, 1579 1580

Guaracayo, inhabitants of part of Braſile, 1298

Guaitaca-Indians, 1300

Guatalca, a principall Port Towne. 1446

Guadianilla, a riuer in Port-Ricco, 1170

Guaire, Braſile-Indians, 1300

Guirapanga, a bird that makes a ſound as hard as a Bell, 1306

Gulgaiſi, Indians neere the riuer of Plate, their deſcription, 1350

Gummes of rare operation for ſundry diſeaſes in Guyana, 1276

A Gunners careleſneſſe, 1402

Gunpowder ſowne by Sauages, 1709

Guacouelica, a place rich with ſiluer Mynes, 1421

Guſts on the Weſt Indian ſhoares, 1157

Iohn Guy his Letter from the New found Land, 1876

Guyamo, a great mountaine in Port Ricco, 1169

Guyauas, a little excellent fruit as big as a Peach, with little ſeeds in them like Gooſeberies, 1172 It is good againſt the flux, 1172

Guyana, a riuer in America, not that of Sir Walter Raleighs, the ſtore of Cattell, Sugar-mills, commodities, and inhabitants thereof, 1238

Guyrig-Braſilians, 1300

Guanſa Tomalongano, a riuer in Affrica, 1220

Guyana, 1247, & ſeq. The riuers and countries adioyning, 1249. The bounds and limits, 1270. Riuers and Prouinces, 1271, 1272. the gouernment thereof, inſtice, iealouſie, mariages, ibid. Their diuers languages, ancient inhabitants Caribes, 1272. Artillerie, order in the warres, 1272, 1273. Policy, ſeaſons, accompts of time by the Moone, religion, rites at burying Captaines, 1273, 1274. Their drunkenneſſe, opinion of the dead, Prieſts, and conference with the Deuill, 1274. The quality of the Climat, 1274. their proviſion, bread, drinke honey, poſſibility of vines, beaſts, fiſh, fowle, fruits, 1274, 1275. Its commodities of Mer-

Merchandise, as Sugar-canes, cotton-wool, wood for dyers of cloth, 1275. Sweet gums very precious in Physicke and Chirurgery, drugs, medicinall plants, strange wood, Tobacco, 1276, 1277. the things these Indians most desire to trade for, ibid. 1277. hopes of gold, ibid.

Guyaxule-Prouince, 1539

Guyraupiaguara, a great land-snake that goeth as fast on top of trees as a man on the ground, 1303

Guyranhe eng eta, an excellent speaking Bird in Brasile, 1305

A Giants Anatomy sent from China to the King of Spaine, of wondrous greatnesse, 1178

Gyants at Port-Desire, their length, bignesse, slinging-stones, 1232

Gyants at Brasile, 1243. of twelue foot height, ibid. Gyants in Peru, of whom one eates as much as fifty men, 1481

H.

HAberebin, a Plaine in the West Indies betweene Marwin and Coorepan, 1285

Harbours in Virginia very safe and admirable, 1664

Harbour of Pentecost, its description, and commendation, preferred before the riuer Orenoco, and others, 1664. Its seuerall beneficiall matters of worth largely, 1665, 1666

Harbour of Frenchmen, called by the Indians Aiurema Piasaue in Brasile, its passage for nauigators, 1239

Capt. Mich. Harcourt, his taking possession of Arrawary, 1278

Capt. Harcourts voyage 1267, & seq. His company, and departing from Dartmouth, 1267. His arriuall at the Canaries, and from thence to Wiapoco, and Guiana, 1267, 1268. commeth to Caripo, conuerseth with the Indians, 1268, 1269. agreeth and resideth with them, 1270. taketh possession of the mountaine Gomerigo, 1278 The losse of his voyage, 1279. leaueth Guiana, 1281. Returneth home, his small losses of men by the voyage, ibid. & 1282

Harris, one that blew off his nose in frosty weather, at the Straits of Magellane, 1204

Hadarinner, a town of Suppay-Sauages in the Indies, 1286

Haile as big as Oranges, 1561

Haire as big as a mans finger, 1560

Halo, the circle seen about the Moon very strange and large in the Barmudas Ilands, 1738

Hamaca-beds, 1256

Hamburgers ships surprised by the English, 1929

Han, a Language of the Indians in Florida, 1519

Hanamob, a towne of the Arwac-Sauages in the Indies, 1286

Haps hill in Virginia, 3649

Hapaluia, a great Floridan towne, and its commodities, 1534

Harbouring in enemies ports is verie dangerous, 1378

Hardoo an Arwacca towne in the West Indies, 1285

Hatuncolla, Pancarçolla, Indians that haue diuers fables of their Originall; they worship a Ramme, and sacrifice vnto him, 1461

Hawkins Mayden-land, 1384

Sir Iohn Hawkins his courtesie to the French, 1604. Sr. Ioh. Hawkins voyage, 1177. His courtesie to the Spaniards repayd with trechery, ibid. & seq. his misfortune, 1179. Death, 1183. A comparing of him with Sr. Fran. Drake 1185, 1186

Master Will. Hawkins men perfidiously slaine at Playa, 1181

Sir Richard Hawkins his voyage, 1367, & seq. His comming to the Canaries, Ilands of Cape Verde, the West Indies, and accidents there & by the way, ibid. at large: the ouerthrow of his voyage, 1383 His comming to the Straits of Magellane, 1384. the danger of his ship vpon a rocke there, 1388. their strange deliuerance againe from shipwracke, 1389. His comming into the Straits of Magellane, 1391. His taking fiue ships, 1393. His fighting with the Spanish Armada, his dangerous wounds, 1403, 1404, 1405, 1406 The successe and accidents of this fight at large, ibid. & 1407, 1408. His surrendring the Ship, 1410. His courteous vsage by the Spanish General, 1413. et seq. Imprisonment, &c. 1415. his respect with the Spaniards, 1417

Hauana, where situate, 1242, 1501

Hay, a beast in Brasile feeding on ayre and leaues of trees, 1243

Head-ache cured by a leafe, 1276

Herbes very medicinable in Brasile, their names and qualities, 1310, et seq. Herbes good against the poyson of Snakes, against the stone, but hurtfull to feuers; others good for feuers, with leaues of a faddome long, for vlcers and the Poxe, for the stone, and liuer, ibid. Good herbes against the ague, for a purge, for the bloody-fluxe, for poyson, for feuers, for the wormes, for a womanish fluxe, for wounds, for old sores, for the cough and rheumes, for the scabs, for abortion, 1311. An herbe that openeth or shutteth with the Sunne, that is sensible, that hath no smell, 1312

Herbe that seemeth to haue the sense of feeling, 1174

Heardsmen of Port-Ricco, their thankefulnesse to Master Chalons for giuing them a poore Frier 1833

Heauen refused by some Indians, and why, 1574

Heauen angry with the English polices, 1942

St. Helena a Spanish garison towne in Florida, 1182, 1200

Henrico, a towne in Virginia, the description and situation thereof, 1767

Henry Earle of Northumberland murthereth himselfe, being committed for treason, 1893

Highney, a realme in Hispaniola, the Queen and inhabitants burnt, hanged, torne in pieces, or otherwise tortured by the Spaniards, 1572

Andrew Hilliard his strange and miraculous preseruation from famishing, 1802. His sustenance for eleuen dayes on his flesh, and a spoonfull or two of water, with a little blood, ibid. et 1803

Hills-hap, a place so named in the North part of Virginia, 1646

Three Hils, markes of Nauigators on the coast of Brasile, called by the Indians, Aquare, Waſon, Remitum, 1238

Hills worshipped by some Indians, 1459

A strange Hill in Saint Michael an Iland of the Azores, wanting fire, and the Ayre cold, yet hauing hot fountaines neere it, 1243. A smoakie fiery Hill in Fuego, 1371

Hirara, a beast in Brasile like a Ciuet-Cat, that eateth nothing but honey, 1302

Hispania Noua described, the inhabitants, riches, and commodities thereof, 1432, 1433. Discoueries

Digitized by Google

ries of divers Provinces thereabout, with their names, 1556, 1557. & seq. The time when first it was begunne to be inhabited by the Spaniards, 1577. The fertilitie thereof, ibid. The cruelty committed by them on the poore Indians, 1577
Hispaniola described, 1146. Inhabited onely by Spaniards without one naturall, 1419. The number of inhabitants consumed by the drowning, roasting, paunching, strangling, and other unknowne butchering of the Spaniards, 1570. & seq. Hispaniola hath twenty fiue thousand Rivers plenteous with gold, the Realmes thereof, 1571, 1572. The innocencie of the Inhabitants, and vndeserved Spanish tortures, 1572
Hobbamoqui, a Power worshipped of the Indians of New-England, the same which wee call Divell, 1867. His illusion, wherewith hee deceiveth that blind and superstitious people, 1867, 1868. His appearing to the Indians in sundry shapes, but vsually in the forme of a Snake, ibid.
Captaine Hobson his voyage being directed by two Indians, the treacherie of his Indians, and his returne with the losse of the whole aduenture, 1828, 1829
Hollanders trade in Hudsons River, 1830. Their yearely revenues by the commodities of fishing, the number of their fishing boats, their industrie in providing Ships, 1837
Hollanders and Spaniards enmitie each to the other is implacable, 1951
Honduras a Bay, 1147
Honestie of certaine Indians, in restoring such things as they found in the woods, 1850
Honey, aboundance thereof in certaine Trees, 1363
Honour preferred before life, 1944
Stephen Hopkins a factious fellow condemned, yet pardoned for mutiny in Bermudas, 1744
Horrura, a mountaine, 1285
Horses cast ouer-board, 1910
Horses all traitors, 1171
Horses shoed with gold, 1490
Horses eaten, 1504
Ho. Hortops relation of aduentures, 1178
Hospitalitie of the Indians to trauellers, 1869
Hospitalitie among Sauages, 1188, 1209
Hot-countries agree not with idelers, 1370
Houses of two Bow-shot in length, 1188. Houses on tops of trees, 1285. Houses without roofes in Regions without Raine, 1420. Houses of great men, how distinguished from those of inferiour ranke, among the Florida-Americans, 1536
Houses of the Sauages in New-England, the manner of their building, and description of their houshold-stuffe, 1846
Lord Howard, Admirall of her Maiesties Fleet to surprise the Indian Fleet, 1144. His valorous conflicts with the Spanish Armada, 1905
Huamachucu, Indians neere Peru, that worship party-coloured stones and sacrifice mans flesh, conquered, and reformed by the Emperour of Peru, 1471
Hunapampa, Indians that goe naked, worshipping birds, beasts, or plants, 1478
Huana Cupac, sometimes an Emperour in Peru, his worth, valour, conquest, enlargement of his Dominions, his subdued nations, clemencie, courtesie to women, 1480, 1481. Further conquests, and acts, his discreet coniecture of a power supremer then the Sunne, 1481. His feare, will, and prophesie of the Spanish invasion, his death, 1482, 1483
Hubates, a well-peopled Province, 1562
Hugo de Moncada, slaine by the English in the narrow seas, 1908
An Hulke with nine tunne of gold, 1223. Threescore Hulkes laden with prouision for Spaine, taken by the English, 1924
Humanitie among Sauages of Florida, to the distressed Spaniards, 1507
Hungry fare of the Sauages inhabiting New-England, 1852
Hunt, a worthlesse fellow of the English Nation, his cruelty and treacherous vsage of the Sauages, to the great disaduantage of many of our country-men, 1828
Hunting, how handsomely performed by the Indians in Florida, 1521
Hunting the wylde Boare, how atchieued by the English at the Bermudas, 1741
Huntly wasteth the enemies in the Portugall voyage, 1918

I.

SAint Iago, a towne taken by Sir Francis Drake, and other English, 1181. The fruits, fortification, commodities, and inhabitants thereof, 1371, 1529
Iaguacini beasts that are killed by their sleepinesse, 1303
Iayos Indians, their desire of Religion, 1251
Iamaica, the situation and description thereof, 1147, 1185. 1419. possessed by the Spaniards, one of which were slaughtered by them sixe hundred thousand guiltlesse soules without faith or Sacraments, 1573
S. Iames Ilands, 1379. The commodities thereof, ibid.
Iames town in Virginia, how situate, 1692. The first founding thereof, 1707. The burning and repairing thereof, 1710, 1711. The abandoning, and re-assuming thereof by the English, 1732. The description, situation, fortification, temple, building, and vnhealthinesse thereof, 1752, 1753
Iangathus, things made of Canes, and tyed together with Withs, in stead of boats, 1213
Iaquerequere, a towne neere Saint Sebastian, 1211, 1212. The Inhabitants thereof, 1300
Iaquereasick, an American River, 1223. In what manner nauigable, 1239
Iaquetyua, a Tree growing in the mountaines in America, 1214
Iaques Carters nauigations to Newfound-land, & Bird-Iland, 1605
Iarraraca, venemous Serpents in Brasile, whereof there bee foure kinds there mentioned, 1303, 1304
Iararaques, Serpents that vse the water amongst the Indians, 1211
Iawayri, a Riuer in America issuing from Potosin a mountain in Peru, 1214
Iawayrippo, a towne in the West-Indies, 1208, 1211
Iberacua, a Snake whose vehement poison maketh the hurt persons blood distil through all the passages of his body, 1304

Digitized by Google

Ibiboca, a Snake very faire to looke on, and of most vehement poyson, but very plentifull in Brasile, 1304
Ice-mountaines of eight leagues, 1606. Ices of the Newfound-Land, how caused, 1627
Idolatry how caused among the Indians, 1558
Idols sold to the Indians by Spaniards, 1583
Iealousie of Sauages, 1662, 1272
Ienero, a riuer neere the Line in the West Indies, 1190. the description thereof, 1240. three hundred houses on it, its description, 1438
Ieperos, Indians so called, 1361
Ieronimo-riuer, 1386
Ierome Benzoes relation of the new World, 1448, & seq.
Iesuits Colledge at Santos, 1203. Iesuits friends to Sauages, 1243 Iesuits bring up the children of the Brasilians, 1292. are of great esteeme among them, 1298. Iesuits acts in the Indies, 1564, 1565. Iesuits exploits and trauels, either for deuotion or ambition, 1807, their pride, ibid.
Igwabes Indians of Florida, 1511
Ilha grande, a place neere Brasile, 1202
Ilands on the North of Virginia, their description and commodities for fish and salt, 1694
Iles of Salomon, their discouery and description, 1447
Ile Malhado in Florida, 1508. the inhabitants, description, and commodities: extreame mourning for children, and the neglect of age, their burials, and mariage-rites, their Phisitians, their houses, beds, sports, manner of curing the sicke, 1508, 1509
Iles of Saint Peter, } neere Canada
Iles of Saint Paul, } 1606
Iland of Pearles in the South Sea, 1180
Ile Francisco, 1180, 1411
Faire Iland, 1384
Iland of Cockles. 1439
Iland of Birds innumerable, 1605
Ile of the Hare in the River Sagenay, 1610
Ile of Filbeards, ibid.
Ile of Orleans in Canada, encompassed with dangerous flats and sands, its description, 1611
Thirty Ilands full of Walnuts neere Canada, 1612
Ile of Saint Eloy, the fertility of the soyle adioyning, fitnesse to bee planted, 1611, 1612
Iles neere the Sault, or fall of Canada, description, various fertility of beasts, trees, and fruits, 1613.
Ile Percee in Canada, 1616
Ile de Bonadventure, ib.
Ile of S^t. Croix in New France, its description and fertility in diuers kinds, 1622. its three discommodities that hinder good wintering in it, 1623. an Iland of Vines thereabout, 1633. Iles very commodious and harborous, 1884
Iland-voyage vnder the Earle of Essex, 1935, & seq.
Illas de Lobos, desart Ilands in the Indies abounding with Seales, 1400
Illas de los Galapagos, desart Ilands and fruitlesse, 1400
Ile of Elizabeth, the Trees, Fowles, Beasts, Fruits, Fishes, Snakes, Colours, Metals, and Stones, thereof described, 1651, 1652, & 1653
Image of our Lady at Mexico, 1178
Images of gold among the Indians, 1285
Imperiall, a City of Spaniards, the inhabitants banisht, 1477
Inca Roca, a Peruan Emperour, his acts and conquests, repairing Schooles for proficiency in Arts, his death and successor, 1457
Incas, the name of the Emperours of Peru before the Spanish inuasion, 1458. their Sacrifices to the Sunne, their ceremonies, conceit of sicknesses, idolatry, Priests, Monasteries, diuision of Empires, tythings, tything-men, officers, education of children, 1460 their Iudges, and manner of deciding of controuersies, Counsellors of Warre, Prinie Councellors, and pretended conuersion of their neighbours, 1461. their Astrologie, opinion of Eclipses, Thunder, and Rainbow, their Dreames, Geometry, Chorography, Arithmeticke, Musicke, Poetry, Commedies, Handicraftsmen, 1462, 1463. The Incas, their Monasteries, and pretious golden ornaments, their life, chastity, and employment, 1466. their manner of sharing of tillage, care of widowes and souldiers, tributes, freedomes, want of Beggars, Innes, hospitals, treasuries, courses after victories, 1469, 1470. stupendious riches and pomp of their Princely houses, and admired superfluity of gold on their ornaments, officers, hunting, and Postes, 1470, 1471. triumphes and ceremonies, 1471. the Incas marrie their owne Sisters, 1479. their abuse, banishment, trecherous conquest, and finall extirpation by the Spaniards 1487, 1488
Indians killing themselues because they would not serue the Spaniards, 1415. A stratagem of theirs against the Spaniards, 1442, 1443. Indians how dealt with by the Spaniards, 1448. their abusing all Christians for their sake, 1449. their magnanimity, and feare of horses, 1449. their discreet reproofe of vnchristian Christians, 1450. and opinion of them, their name for them; the promulgation of their liberty, 1453, 1454. Indians worshipping high mountaines. 1459. Indians that worship the sea, because it yeelds them fish, and the Whale because of his greatnesse, 1471. Indian policy and ouerthrow of the Spaniards, 1476. Indian victories, 1477. their valour and dexterity in armes, ibid. Indians names beyond Moreshego, 1280. Indian nations and languages almost innumerable in Florida, 1521. Indian superstition, 1522. Indians countries dispeopled by the Spaniards, the feare they beare toward them, they are sooner reclaimed by loue then cruelty, 1525. Indians lazy life, 1154. Indian Sodomy, 1519 West Indians described, 1158. Canibal-Indians afraid to eate a man, least he should haue the Pox, 1177 Indians at least thirtie thousand slaine and captiued by the Portugals at one time, 1219
An Indians courage and Christian desire at his death, 1219. Indian, a Fish in the Sea, and Pox in the wood, 1243 Indians artillery, 1261 Indians manner of punishing murther and adulterie, their iealousie of their wiues, 1272 Policie in their warres, 1273 Indians auoyding the sight of Christians, and other Indians, 1271

Digitized by Google

Indians with rough skinnes like buffe, 1280. Names of Indian Rivers, 1281. et 1282. names of Nations, 1280 et 1282. Indians how bruitishly and trecherously dealt withall by the Canibali-Portingals, chusing rather to flye to the mercy of their flesh-devouring enemies, then these Christian-Antichristian Savages 1322. Their fruitlesse baptisme by the Portingals, 1323. the Indians religion of Brasile, or rather irreligion, the feare they have of the Deuill, 1336, 1337. their solemn assembly, singing. 1337, & sequ. dancing, ibid. Ceremonies, superstition, idolatrie, ibid. Indian valour, 1395. Indians worse then slaves to the Spaniards, 1398. Indians government, disposition, and state in generall, 1421. Indians valour, 1557. and simplicity in matters of knowledge and religion, ibid. Indians in New England very tractible, their manner of hunting the beast called Mosse, 1832. Indians of Dominica taught to driue their Canoas with sayles, 1833. Indians sore terrified at the sight of some Englishmen, 1843. Indians drinking onely at the Spring-head, 1852. their feare of the English, vpon report that they kept the plague buried in a store-house, permitting it to infect as it pleased them 1855 they buy wiens liues for Beuers skins, ibid. Indians of Mattachiest, their kinde vsage of the English, 1858. Indians of Manomet much giuen to gaming, will play for the skin on their wiues backes, 1859. their ioyfull receiuing some religious precepts, 1862 Indians in Port-Royall, their courtesie in getting prouision for the French Plantation, 1632. Indians oration and eloquence, courtesie, nobleneſſe, liberality vpon what termes, 1632. Indians of the Northerne America, their playing & musicke, their customes in curing wounds, their simplicity and ignorance, yet subtilty, theeuishneſſe, and traiterousneſſe, 1634. they must not bee depended on, but swayed with seuerity. ibid. an Indian womans present ibid. the Indians disapproose of garments, ibid. Indians of diuers languages, not vnderstanding one another in New France, 1635. Indians how they may best be terrified, 1635. you must not expresse any security, but alwayes seeme to be warie, resolute, and prepared for them, 1635. Indians of New France their warfare, 1638. Indian Southsaying, and supposed trechery, 1639. Indians loue to their children, ibid. they are preferred before Christians, ibid. Indians weepe at the departure of the French from their coasts, 1640. Indians christned in New France by the Frenchmen, 1644. Indian battaile, victory, and the consequents thereof, ibid. Indians of Virginia, their strange apparell, and other description, 1647 Their great delight in musicke, dances, weapons, ornaments, boats, gardens, &c. 1655. trechery, and discouery, 1656. Indians disposition and trechery, ceremonies, idolatrie, women, and their nature, their ornaments, 1662, 1663. & seq. Indian-Virginian words of language vsed amongst them, 1667. Indians in Virginia creeping vpon all foure, with their bowes in their mouthes, desperate and hardie, 1686. their women and maids habit, and other customes, 1689. An Indian 160 years old, with a long white beard very lusty, which is euen a wonder amongst them, 1689. Indians subtilty and rebellion to the Spaniards in Florida, their slaughter by them, after slauerie, 1533, 1534. their murder by the Spanish seruilitie, 1535. an Indian Lady that swaid a Nation of them in Florida, the commodities of her country, and the courtesie shee shewed the Spaniards, 1537, 1538. an Indian burned, ibid. another christned by the Spaniards, 1538. Indian stratagem against the Spaniards, 1544. their sudden slaughter, and endangered vtmost ouerthrow of them, 1545. Indians paint themselues with terrible colour, to strike terror in their aduersaries, 1546. their trecherie, ibid. Indian eloquence, 1550. an Indians valiant and wittie answer to an imperious Spaniard, 1552. Indians ridiculous customs at the death of their Catique, 1553. Indians how they are wont to expresse obedience to some of their superiors in Florida 1553. An Indian throwne to the dogs by a Spaniard, 1554. Indians conspiracy against the Spaniards in Florida discouered, the actors cruelly deals withall, hauing their right hands cut off, 1555. An Indian burnt for heresie, and conspiracy, by a Spanish Iudge in New Spaine 1557. Indian idolatry and worship of the Deuill, 1558. they must bee brought to Christianity by feare, as saith a Spanish Preacher, 1559. Indian hypocrisie, 1558. linea vltima. Indians so couragious and valiant, that armed most with poore clubs, they contest brauely with strongly armed Spaniards on horse backe. 1558. Indians worshipping plants, and birds, and singing songs vnto them: and that sacrifice one man yearely to a painted Serpent, which the sacrificed man taketh patiently, 1560. Indian embroidery, 1560. Indian want of Masse and instructing Ministers, 1563. Indians capable of religion, and their baptisme and instruction, 1564 Indian secrets smothered by Spaniards lest they should come to light with their disaduantage, 1567. Indies discouered by the Spaniards; Anno 1492. the first Land inhabited the Ile of Hispaniola, 1569. The nature of the Indians in generall thereabout their simplicity, patience, meekenesse, innocency, ingenuitie, and tender breeding, 1569. Three Millions of Indians perish by the Spaniards in Hispaniola, fiue hundred thousand in the Lucayos, in all thereabout twelue or fifteene Millions, 1569, 1570 Indians to the number of a Million slaine and consumed by them in Iohn and Iamaica Ilands, 1573. Indians suppose Gold to be the Spaniards God, 1573. Indians refuse heauen, fearing to meet the Spaniards there, 1574. Indians how many in the Ile Cuba deuoured by Spaniards. 1574. Indians destroyed by Spaniards in Terra Firma, and their multitude, 1575, 1576. Indians in Nicaragua consumed by the Spaniards fiue hundred thousand, 1577. Indians in New Spaine, and its seuerall Prouinces, deuoured by the Spaniards to two or three Millions, 1577, 1578. Indians in Guatymala, dispatche by Spaniards innumerablie, 1579 1580, and Spanish Man-eaters, that is, Spaniards allowing shambles of Mans-flesh for food, 1580.

Indians tortured and slaine abundantly by Spaniards in Panuco, Mechuacham, and Xalisco, 1580, 1581. Indians to the number of eight hundred sold for one horse by a Spaniard, 1580. Indians sold for infamous Merchandize, 1581, 1582. Indians how many were slaine in Yucatan, 1581, 1582, 1583. What store in Saint Martha by Spaniards, 1583, 1584. In Carthagena, 1584. On the coast of Pearles, Paria, and the Ile of Trinity, 1586. In Yuia pari, and Venetuela, Indians slaine in number foure or five thousand thousand, 1587. In Florida, the River La Plata, in divers Provinces of Peru, 1589, 1590, 1591. Indians in new Granada, dispatched by sundry cruelties of the Spaniards, 1592, 1593, 1594, 1595. In divers other places, by divers diuelliſh ſtratagems, 1596, 1597, 1598, 1599, 1600, 1601, 1602. Indians worſhip a Pillar of ſtone in Florida, 1603. Indian ſubiection to the Engliſhmen in Virginia, 1841 Indians of New-England, their care in preſerving the carkeiſes of their dead friends in ſepulchres, full ſtuffed with ſweet powders, 1846. Their encounter with the Engliſh, the manner of inciting their men to Battell, 1847. Their habite and manner of welcoming forrenners, 1849. Indians glory, in the weakneſſe of the Engliſh forces, 1856. An Indian plotting treacherie is taken priſoner, 1864. Indians terrified in conſcience, forſake their houſes, and fly into the deſerts and thickets, 1866. Indians opinion concerning the Creation, that all men deſcend from the loynes of one man, and one woman, which were firſt created, the cauſe of their diſperſions, being as yet vnknowne, 1867. Indians of New-England witty and laborious in diuers arts, 1870. Indians described both in habit, and nature, their manner of ſalutation; 1881. Indians of Canada, 1609. Their ſpeaking with the Divell, their painting themſelves, apparell, deuice to goe on ſnow, mariages, licentiouſneſſe of yong Wenches, and burials, with their beliefe of the ſoule, 1609, 1610

Induſtrie of the Engliſh, in the diſcouerie and plantation of New-England, 1848

Infants ſlaine by the Savages to doe ſacrifice to their god Habbamok, 1868

Inquiſition in New-Spaine, the puniſhment of two Italians there, 1177. Inquiſitions barbarous crueltie, 1178

Inſolencie of the Indians of Maſſachaoſet, 1864

Interpreters ſo neceſſarie to a land-trauell in a ſtrange countrie, that without them it cannot bee effected, 1554

Ioanchp de Luyando, a Mynt-maſter in Port-Ricco, his riches, and plenty of gold, 1170

Iohn Orus a Spaniard, his taking by the Indians in Pamphilo de Narnaez, his voyage, his ſundry misfortunes, and eſcapes, with a happy meeting his countri-men, 1531. His large travailes with Captaine Soto, his death, and the diſcontent thence iſſuing to the Captaine, 1551

Saint Iohns River in New-France, its beauty, ſtore of fiſh, vines, with other commodities, 1522

Saint Iohn de Port-Ricco, a Citie in the Weſt Indies, taken by the Engliſh, its deſcription, aire, dewes, greatneſſe, Church, want of Glaſſe-windowes, doores, ſtanding of their Quire in the loweſt part of the Church, 1144. Fortification, 1165. Healthineſſe, ibid. Its ſituation, 1169 And fortification, 1418

Saint Iohns head, the eaſterly part of Port-Ricco, 1169

Captaine Iohn Smith his diſcouerie of Ruſſels Iles, Point-Ployer, and Limbo Iles in Virginia, 1712. His entertainment by the Savages, with courteſie, and treacherie, his mens deſire of returne, 1713. His many Savage bickerings, endanger by a ſtinging Fiſh, and ſafe returne, 1714. His ſetting forth againe, and encounter with the Savages, 1714, 1715. The loue hee received from Moſco that Savage, ibid. His fight with the Tapahonecks, 1716. His great tempeſts, yet ſafe returne, 1716. His aſſuming the preſidencie of Virginia, 1716. His oppoſition by the Councell, iourney to Powhatan onely with foure, 1717. His ſtrange entertainment, ibid. His proviſion for Nanſamund, proiect for Powhatan, and ſetting forth, 1720. His diſcourſe, and paſſages with Powhatan, 1721, 1722. His eſcaping death amidſt his treacherous vaſſals, ibid. His abuſe by ſome treacherous Dutchmen. 1723. His great danger with fifteene men, by a multitude of Indians, ibid. His valiant evaſion, and forcing them to compoſition, captinating their King in the midſt of them, ibid. & 1724. His poyſoning by the Vaſſals of Powhatan and eſcape, 1725. His death plotted by Dutchmen, his eſcape, encounter, and captivating the King of Paſpahigh, and other bickerings, 1726. His progreſſe in the plantation, hinderance, and deſire of remoouall thereof, 1727, 1728. His hatred by vpſtart planatationers, eſcaping their plots, and revenge on them, 1729. His ſuppreſſing mutinies, appeaſing, concluding peace, endanger by powder, 1730, 1731. His endanger of murther, grieuous torture, returne for England, and the cauſe, with the conſequents. 1731, 1732. His accuſers, and accuſation, 1731. His innocencie, 1732

Maſter Iones his endeuours, furthering the plantation of New-England, 1867

Ippoa, a place neere the great Iland in America, 1212

Iraſing, a place ſeven leagues from Mexico, 1414

Irocois, Savages in Canada, 1607 Their River, and manner of fortification with ſtakes, 1612. Their further deſcription, proviſion, and townes, and warres, with their vanquiſhment, and affrighting with a muſket-ſhot, 1643

Iron extolled aboue gold, 1814

Iſla del Gallo, an Iland, 1444

Itſhuera, a towne of the Caribes, one dayes iourney from the head of the River Marwin, 1285

Saint Iuan de Lua, a chiefe part in Noua Hiſpania, 1432

Iuan de Oñate, his diſcouerie of the North from old Mexico, his armie and preparation, 1563. His loſſe and revenge of his Nephew, his building a towne, and poſſeſſion for Spaine, 1566

Iuan Fernandes Ilands, their ſituation and plenty, 1393

Iucatan, how ſo called, 1455. The inhabitants tortured, and conſumed, by the Spaniards, 1581, 1582, 1583

Iumanos Indians, 1561

Sain

Digitized by Google

Saint Iuo de Vllua, a Port towne, 1418
Iuana the second Iland in Orenoque 1248
Ixtatlan, a place in New-Spaine, 1558
Iyanough, a Governour among the Savages of Pechanochick, 1853
Saint Izabella, one of the Iles of Salomon, 1447

K.

KAiwaire, a towne inhabited by the Careebees, in the River Marwin in America, 1283
Kebec, a place in New-France, wherein was a plantation of the French begun by Capt. Champlaine, 1642. The naturall fruit and commodities thereof, ibid.
Kecoughtan, a towne of Savages in Virginia, 1687. The inhabitants, maner of entertainment, dancing, Orations, 1687
Kenebek, a towne vnder the Dominion of Apomhamen in Mawooshen, 1874
Ketangheanycke, a town vnder the Sagamos Octoworth, 1875
Capt. Keymish his voyage to Guiana, 1269
Kiarnio, a towne of the Sauages, 1286
Kietitan, a god of the Savages, 1862
Kine very strange in Brasile, living in water, without hornes or vdders, 1243. Kine strange neere Quiuira, with bunched backs, 1561
A Kings distinction from others among the Amazons, is by a crowne of feathers, a woodden sword, or a chaine of Lyons teeth, 1288
Kings bodies how bestowed after death by the Peruans, before the Spanish conquest, 1464
Kings dying among the Floridan Indians, and Tartarians, two young men are slaine, to wait vpon them in the next world, 1553
King Iames his name nothing respected among the Spaniards, 1834. His faithfulnesse to the Queene of England, his wise answere to her Embassadour, 1912. His gracious letters to the Earle of Southhampton, touching the Silke-wormes, and Silke-grasse in Virginia, 1787
Io. King Englishman, one that lived fifteene yeares at Santos, 1203
Kimbeki, a River in New-France, 1625
Knaw-saw an Iland, how situate, 1184
Knights, how chosen and created among the ancient Emperours of Peru, and who thought worthy of Knighthood, 1474
Kniuets adventures, accidents, 1192 He finds a chest of Rials, 1203. Loseth his toes by frost, 1204. Narrow scaping death, 1205; 1206. His danger by a Sea-Monster, 1207. Eateth Whale, 1207. His escaping (all his fellowes slaine) 1207. His comming to the River Ianero, and escaping from drowning by a woman, his life there, 1208. His slaverie in a Sugar-mill, nakednesse, shame, and flight to the wildernesse, his life there, 1208. His perill by a Savage, 1208. By a Sharke-fish, 1209. His disastrous flight and wracke, 1209. In danger of starving, ibid. His imprisonment, condemnation, pardon, 1210. His wounding the Factor, flight, iourney, and fortune, 1210. His fearfull travels through the wildernesse, and manifold dangers there, 1210, 1211. His returne to his old master after many perils, 1212. Kils a great dangerous Snake, 1215. Is stocked, and brought to execution, saved, 1216 Passeth in a weake vessell through a River that ran vnder-ground, 1217. His escape, all his fellowes devoured, ibid. His nakednesse, 1218. Returne againe to his Portingall Master, his danger, ibid. & 1219. His adventure vnderwater, 1220. His escape and voyage to Angola in Africa, his sending backe againe, ibid. His plot and dangerous discoverie, 1221. Saveth his master from drowning, ibid. Is imprisoned; 1222. Escapeth drowning, 1223. Ariveth at Lisbon, his sicknesse there, 1224. One and twenty times let blood, 1225. His recoverie, imployment, and imprisonment, ibid.
Kniues and Hatchets deare sold amongst the Indians, 1229, 1208
A Knife bought eight women, 1249
Kuskarawaock, a river in Virginia, the inhabitants thereof, 1694

L.

LAbour well imployed hath its reward one time or other, 1832
La Buena Ventura, an vnhealthy place in Peru, 1446
La Canela, a Country in Peru, 1415
Lacana, a miserable towne in Florida, 1553
Laguada, a towne in Port-Ricco, 1170
Lake of a hundred leagues in length, 1644
A Lake wondrous great, 1612. A Lake of 80 leagues, 1614. Many others, ib. & 1615. One of three hundred leagues, 1616
La Loma de Camana, a very fertile soyle in America, the description thereof, 1420
La Mocha an Iland in America, 1443
Lampere, a fortified Citie of the Carios in the Indies, taken by the Spaniards, 1352
Lancerota, the town and Castle taken by the Earle of Cumberland, 1151, 1155. It is one of the greatest Ilands of the Canaries, 1155 The chiefe towne in it described, 1156. The inhabitants, armes, situation, commodities, latitude, their severall harucsts, Church, Religion, ibid.
Language of Savages, 1237. A thousand languages of Savages, 1524. Language words of Virginian Savages, 1667. Language very copious and difficult, 1870
La Pacheta, a small Iland, 1414
Laquedambaras, Nut-trees among the Indians, 1502
La para Iua, a place in the Indies taken by French from the Spanish, and repossessed by them, 1438
Las Cabecas, Iles so called; 1244
Las Illas, an American towne, 1438
Layfield, viz. Doctor Layfield his relation of Port-Ricco voyage, 1155. & seq. His imployment vnder the Lord of Cumberland, 1169
Leafe in Guiana called Kellette curing poisoned wounds, and the headach, 1276. Apparell made of leaues, 1213
League betweene the Mussasois and the English, 1850 Leakes, how stop'd vnder-water without without a boord, 1394

Leagh, viz. Sir Oliph Leagh, the traiterous massacring of threescore and seuen of his men, in an Iland of the West-Indies, 1255, 1256. & seq.
Capeaine Leighs voyage to Oremoque, 1156. To Guiana, and plantation there, 1250. His comming to Wyapogo, and Aracawa, 1251, 1252. his death, & the danger of his men, 1621, 1622
Leopards called by the Indians Iawarile, 1229
Le Equille, a River in New-France, 1621
Lepos Tomienos a kinde of Canibals, 1216
Lerius his relation of Brasile, 1325. & seq. 1836
Letters sent from the Colony in New-England, Anno 1622. 1840. From New-found-land, 1889
Lice, 1205
Leyhannos, a Savage people of the West-Indies, 1364
Lignum Vitæ, 1657
Lightening kils two men, 1672
Lightening in a great tempest saues Mariners from shipwracke. 1716
Light at sea seene on the Shrouds in a hell-darke night, conceits and names thereof, 1737
Lima Indians of Peru, 1365. Their City, bignesse, and inhabitants, 1416, 1421
Limbo-Iles in Virginia, 1712
Lime made of Oysters, 1315
Limo River, 1248
Line, how and when most safely to be passed, 1377
Listers dangerous attempt, 1143
Liver, by what meanes corroborated and preserved, 1310
Lizards eaten in America, 1326
A monstrous Lizard, 1327
Master Locks death neere the Line, the onely friend of Captaine Candish in his last voyage, 1201
Lomioo, a town in the Indies, inhabited by Arwacca Savages, 1285
Londoners voyage to New-England, Anno 1616. p. 1838. To the Canaries from London, An. 1616. p. 1839. From London to New-England againe, An. 1620 ouerthrowne by the rage of divers tempests, to the losse of goods and men, 1840
Long-Ile in New-France, 1622
Long-reach, a place in the Straits of Magellane, 1389
Lopez de Agira, a mutinous Souldier among the Spaniards, his extreame cruelty, and event, 1436, 1437. His plot to poison Queene Elizabeth, 1894
Lopez Vaz, a Portingall, his voyage and Historie touching places and discoveries in America, 1432 & seq.
Loquilla, A hill famous for Mynes in Port-Ricco, 1171
Lopos Savages in Brasile, called by the Portingals Bilreros: their houses, wyldnesse, harmlesnesse, shamelesnesse, beastlinesse, women, complexion, 1230. Store of gold, ibid.
Lord de la Ware his happy arriuall at the distressed Colony in Virginia, 1732. His presidency there, 1754. his first Acts, and the constitution of Officers, his councell, ibid. His sending Sir George Summers to the Bermudas for prouision, ibid. His wrongs by Powhatan, and reuenge, with a message to him, 1755. Its successe and his punishing an Indian, 1756 His relation to the Lords and the Councell of Virginia, touching his returne thence, 1762. & seq. His sundry sicknesses, ibid. & 1763. His death in a voyage to Virginia, 1774
Lord of Southampton Treasurer of Virginia, 1783. His prouision and supply of it, ibid. His letters to the Colony touching silk-plants. 1787, 1788
Lotterie set vp in London, for the Colony in Virginia. 1773
Lots cast for euery mans seuerall lodging in New-England, 1848
Low-Countries supposed to haue Ships great and small of all sorts, 20000 1821
Saint Lucia, 1146. The description and commodities thereof, 1165
Lukes-Bay, a pleasant harbour in New-Scotland, 1873
Lutherans thought a title of ignominie to the Spaniards, though they confessed God tooke part with them, 1680
Luysa, a towne neere Port-Ricco, 1170
Luys de Moscoso made Gouernour of Cuba, and Adelantado of Florida after Sotoes death, 1552. His and his companies resolution to trauell by Land Westward in that country, his arriuall at seuerall Indian townes, and entertainment, 1553. His being in danger of losing himselfe, and his company in the desert-countreys, ibid. His vncomfortable trauels in the deserts, & endurance of scarcity there, his returning the same way hee came, 1554. And taking passage downe a River to the sea, the whole remainder of his company, their dangerous storme, and perill by the Indians in the River, 1555. His arriuall at Panuco, 1556
Lying, how punished by some Indians, 1451
Lyma, a place in the West-Indies, 1242, 1393. The description of the Bay that leadeth to it, 1394
Lyons in the West Indies, 1218. They call them Iawarosou, 1229. are worshipped in Peru, 1457

M.

MAcanao, the westermost point of Margarita, 1266
Mace, his voyage to Virginia, in a barke sent by Sir Walter Raleigh, 1653
Machaseis, a river in the West Indies, 1365
Maccah, a small River neere Orenoco, and Guyana, 1246
Macucagua, a Bird resembling the Feasant, and hath three skins one ouer another, 1306
Macurio, a River, 1247
Macuerendas, a Nation in the River Parana in the Indies, populous and fierce, their description, 1350
Macura Indians in Brasile, 1299
Madalena, a River in Florida, 1504
Madera Ilands, their description, diuision, and commodities, 1369
Madera Ile discouered by Master Challons, in his voyage to the North of Virginia, 1833
Madiopuera, a venemous plumme, 1230
Magalines, a Portingall Navigator, 1191
Maguana, a Province in Hispaniola, 1572
Magdalene River, 1434
Magellane Straits described, 1384. vide streights. Magellane streights extreame winter, 1193
Magury, a tree yeelding Wine, Vineger, Honey, beds, threads, needles, tables, and hafts of knines, besides many medicinable vses, 1421
Maiz of two sorts, the one like Rice, the other like Ginny Wheat, 1173 1851. Maketh strong drinke, 1258
Malabrigo Port, 1399

Digitized by Google

Manco King of Peru, his distresse by the faithlesse Spaniards, and the issue, 1486, 1487
Mammeis, an excellent kind of fruit, 1172
Manarippano, an Iland in the midst of the Riuer Orenoco, 1249
Manilla Iland. 1446
Mandioco, the ordinary food of the inhabitants of Brasile, which serveth for bread: the strange effects thereof, 1214, 1309, 1310. Wine made of the root Mandioco, which preserveth the Liver, 1310
Man-eaters, vid. Canibals.
Mans inconstancie, 1190, 1191
Mapies, certaine Indians so called, their description, countrey, and commodities, they are a very warlike Nation, and treacherous, 1362, 1363. Their ouerthrow by the Spaniards, ibid.
Marble Rocke of halfe a mile in length, 1761
Marchin-Bay, how situate, and why so called, 1626
Marcomwin, a village in the River Marwin, 1283
Saint Maries Iland, the situation and description thereof, 1393, 1143, 1671
Mariages how vndertaken and solemnized by the Inhabitants of Peru, 1457. Mariage forbidden to him that hath not taken his enemie, 1290
Mariquites, certaine Canibals so called, their stature, women, dwellings, religion, language, cloathing, &c. 1226, 1227
Maroer, a Brasilian Riuer, 1242
Mariners, their duty and disposition, 1368, 1403
Martha, a Prouince in America very rich in gold and other commodities, 1583. It is now changed from a peopled Countrey to a desert, by Spanish crueltie, 1583, 1584
Martha's Vineyard, a dis-inhabited Ile, 1648
Saint Martha, a towne taken by Sir Francis Drake, 1183
Marwin Riuer; and the Regions thereunto adioyning, 1283
Massasoys, a company of Sauages in New-England, 1849
Massasoyt, his acknowledgement of King Iames to be the Gouernour of his Countrey, and himselfe his man: his kinde entertainment of Englishmen, and perfidiousness to the French, 1852, 1862
Matangome, a Portingall Fort in Affrica, the description thereof, 1220, 1234. Gold therein taken by the Portingals, 1237
Mastiues much regarded in Virginia, 1655
Matauzas, the situation and description thereof, 1246, 1247
Matinio, a haven in America, 1146, 1157
Saint Matthews Bay. 1401
Matta diabolo, a Fort in Port-Ricco, 1162
Mattaick, a Rocke which with the brightnesse thereof dazeleth the eyes, 1285
Mattouri an Iland in Guiana, 1272
Mauriapigtanga, Inhabitants of Brasile, 1298
Mawooshen, a Countrey discouered by the English, Anno 1622. 1873
Maids how distinguished from married women in Virginia, 1689. Their habite and behauiour when they are to be taken to mariage, 1869, 1159
Henry Mays his voyage and shipwracke on the Bermudas, or Summer-Ilands, 1795. The losse and saving of some men. ibid.
Meat made of Snakes, 1210. Meat how kept from corrupting among the Sauages, 1326. Meat not eaten by the Indians, vnlesse sanctified by the Spaniards, 1522
Meecombe, a towne on the River Apanawipesk. 1874
Mechuacan, a place in New-Spaine, 1557, 1580
Mechuacan, a place neere the South Sea, 1559
Mecola, the situation thereof, 1246
Mendozaes Indian voyage and successe, 1347, 1348. & seq. Hee builds the citie Buenos Ayres, the miserable famine there, and warres with the Indians; the death of his souldiers: his returning and death by the way, 1348, 1349, 1350
Men of three hundred yeares age in Florida, 1604
Mendoza his intended treason against Queene Elizabeth, 1892. Hee being Embassador from Spaine is commanded to depart the English coast, 1893
Menehighon Iland, how situate, 1829
Mepenes, a Nation in the River Parana in the Indies, their description, strength, and multitude, 1351
Mermaids seene in Brasile, 1240 on the coast of New-found-land, 1887
Mermen, or men of the Sea that kill men with embracing, and then seeme to sigh, 1315. Some are as little as children, and doe no hurt, 1318
Mesquiquez an Indian fruit, 1519, 1520
Mestizo, one that is halfe a Sauage, and halfe a Portingall, 1207
Metall like Lead found in Canada, on the South, 1618
Meuis Ile the situation, excellent bathes, and commodities thereof, 1685
Mexico Nauigations, 1177. The bigenesse of the Citie, the nature and docibilitie of the naturals, the company of Spaniards there, 1421 The populousnesse thereof, 1432. Mexico and all the adioyning Prouinces vnpeopled by Spanish crueltie, 1578. Two millions of Indians slaine by them there; ibid.
Saint Michael a place in the Azores, 1142. A strange Hill, and wels there, 1142. Its description, 1671
Saint Michael, a River in America, neere the River of Toads, 1223. It is dangerous for Nauigation, 1239
Saint Michaels Strait in Florida, 1505
Saint Michaels towne triumpheth at the departure of the English, 1966
Mico, a river in Florida, which at the mouth is called Rio Grand, 1552
Middletons voyage, 1246. & 1247
Miles Standish his travell in New-found-land, 1848
Military orders established in New-England, 1849. Military discipline as well shewed in making a faire and safe retreit, as in giving a fierce and furious onset, 1962
Will. Millington drowne into the Sea by a Fish, and neuer seene more, 1802
Mines of gold in Port-Ricco, 1165. Where the richest Mines, 1177. At Erapuscick very rich Mines of gold and siluer, 1222, 1229. Mines in plenty, 1230. Likewise, 1231, 1248. Mines of Apalatci in Florida, 1604. Mines of Copper, of a metall like siluer in Canada, 1617. Other Mines there, & where to be found, 1618, 1619. Mine of Steele, 1639

Digitized by Google

Minoya, a place in Florida, 1554
Miracles wrought by the Spaniards (as themselues report) in the West Indies. 1516
Mirth, a preseruatiue against the scurvy, 1625
Mists, store and thicke, neere the Banke very cold, and the cause thereof, 1628. It is then faire at land, though at sea foggie, 1629
Mocha, an Iland in the South sea, 1391. The description and commodities thereof, 1392
Mochocho, an Indian Gouernour in Florida, 1531, 1532
Mogador, a place on the coast of Barbary, 1250
Mohotse, a populous Indian Prouince, 1562
Molopaques, certaine Sauages of Brasile, 1229. They haue store of gold, but esteeme it not, except to fish withall, ibid.
A Monasterie in Saint Iohn de Port Ricco, 1165. Monasteries in Peru and Cozco, 1456, 1457
Moneta Ile, its difficult landing, and vnspeakable abundance of Fowle, 1686
Monkeys rosted and eaten, 1213
Monkeys in Brasile called Wariua by the Inhabitants, as bigge as a Spanyell, with long broad beards, 1226, 1302. Their King, his fashion, and other feats of actiuitie, ibid. Some that are man-deuourers, ibid. Their care in prouiding for the safety of their yong, 1328
Monserotta Iland, 1281
Monsieur de Montz voyages related, 1620. & seq. His societie broken, and is enuied at, 1638
Monte Christo, a weake towne of the Spaniards in the Indies, 1418
Monte de Plata, 1432
Mooremoreno Iland, 1397. Its inhabitants, description, their loue to the English, and hate of Spaniards, 1398
Master Moores Plantation and gouernment in the Bermudas Ilands, 1802. His building Forts, ibid. dispelling Spanish ships, and other acts, ibid. His death, and disposition, ibid.
Moratiggon, an Ile about a dayes sayle from New-England, 1849
Morecapana Road, the situation thereof, 1246
Morecshego, a place in the River Marwin, 1283
Morrequito, a certain country neere Orenoco, 1248
Morou, a towne of Canibals, 1227
Morrowina, a Guyanian Prouince, 1271
Captaine Morgan slaine in Brasile, 1197
Morouishaua the Kings name among some Sauages of Brasile, 1229
Mosco a Sauage, famous for his loue to the English, 1715
Mosse, a certaine beast as bigge as an Oxe, headed like a Deere, with a broad Palme, which hee mewes euery yeare: his haire is long like an Elke, hee hath a great bunch vnder his throat, his legges long, his skin maketh very good Buffe, his flesh is excellent food, very vsefull to the Sauages in New-England, 1832
Motto of the King of Spaine in Saint Domingo, 1182
Mottayas certaine Canibals in Brasile their loue to the English, feeding on Frogges, Snakes, Monkeys, and Dogs, their man-eating, haire, beasts, and commodities, 1229, 1230
Mourning expressed by cutting of the haire among Indians, 1291
Mourning of the Indians for those that die, 1869
Mount-mansell, an Iland on the coast of New-England, abounding with the Beast called Mosse, 1832
Mount Howard, 1260, 1254
Mount Huntly, 1261
Mount Aldworth in Virginia, 1655
Mountainiers, Sauages so called in Canada, that make warres with the Irocos, 1607
Mountaines stored with gold, 1284. A mighty mountaine snowy on the top, and torrid at the foot, 1156. A mountaine exceeding steepe, 1214. A glittering mountaine, 1216. A mountaine of Crab Lice, 1228. Mountaine of metals, 1232. Mountains abounding with siluer and gold, 1248. Mountaines couered with Snow, that for their height may bee seene thirty leagues into the Sea, 1434
Moyemon, a large towne in the River Marwin, 1283.
Muccambro, an Iland and Mountaine in Guiana, 1272
Mumpara a plaine, abounding with graines of gold, 1284
Murther, how punished in Guiana, 1272. In Brasile, 1342
Murther punished by the Indians, with present death, 1870
Muskitoes, their venemous stinging, 1556
Muso, a towne in new Granada; the exceeding benefit thereof, to the King of Spaine, 1420
Muske of a Crocodiles Cod, 1218
Muske-Snake, a sweet smelling Serpent of Brasile, 1304
Mutinie like to receiue its deserued reward, 1201
Mutinie, the ouerthrow of a voyage, 1260
Mutiny among the Spaniards, 1436 Among the French in Florida, 1603. Among the English in Virginia, 1729, 1730. In the Bermudas, 1743
Mutinga aboundeth with Mynes, 1203
Mutton-Port, 1620

N.

NAguatex, a towne in Florida, 1553
Namaschet, a towne vnder Massasoyt, 1851. The Namaschets courteous entertainment of the English, ibid.
Names encreased, according to the number of persons slaughtered among the Indians, 1226
Names altered amongst the Indians according to their acts and disposition, 1869. Names of certaine Englishmen, assistants in the Plantation of the New-found-land, 1888
Names of the English Knights fighting at the siege of Cadiz, 1933. Names of the Captaines and chiefe officers in the Voyage to Azores, 1939
Nansamund, a River in Virginia, 1692
Nanohigganscts threaten the English, 1853. Their great superstition in doing sacrifice to their god Hobbamoqui, 1868
Naruaez, his voyage, arriuall at Dominica, Saint Iago, the Trinitie, his shipwracke there, his comming to the land of Marles, 1500, 1501, 1499. His taking possession of a towne in Florida for the King of Spaine, 1502. His arriuall at Apalachen, and entertainment there, his surprisall by other Indians, his comming to Ante, 1502, 1503. His distressed successe, 1504. And losse of, more by the Indians

Indians, ibid. His misery by thirst, 1505. His companies extreame weakneſſe, 1509. With inſufferable famine and mortalitie, 1508
Napetuca, a towne in Florida, 1533
Naragooc, a towne in Mawooſhen, 1875
Nations that are barbarous, licenced by the Popes Bull to be ſubdued by violence, 1602
Nauarre ouerthroweth the forces of the French King at the battell of Couttras, 1942
Nauy of Queene Elizabeth ſent to the Azores, 1939
Navigation the aduancement of Nations, 1820
Nauigators inſtructions, 1368, 1373
Nauſets, a company of the Sauages in New-England a hundred ſtrong, 1849
Nebamocago, a towne bordering on the River Aponeg, in Mawooſhen, 1874
Negligence like to endanger the loſſe of a great prize, 1145
The Portingals *for the Weſt-*Negro's rebelling againſt the Spaniards, 1434
Neguiwo, an Ile neere the River Sagodohoc in Mawooſhen, 1874
Nepios certaine inhabitants of Trinidad 1247
Niewoc an Ile in Mawooſhen, 1874
Neredoſhan, a towne on the River Aponeg, 1874
Nets made to carie trauelling ſtrangers from towne to towne in Braſile, 1242
New-France, a great part of it thought to be ſandie ground as far as Virginia, 1634. 1635. New-Frances commodities preſented the King of France, 1641. The inhabitants when firſt chriſtened, 1644
New-France inhabited by the Frenchmen, becauſe they hope to get a paſſage thence to China, 1642, 1644. The manner of trading in New-France, 1616
New-Frances diſeaſes how they may be eſcaped, 1624, 1625. New France, the bounds thereof, 1603. The probabilities of gold Mines there, 1621. Diamonds & Turkie ſtones there, 1621. Grapes, Fiſh, and Cedars, 1622
New-Mexico the townes thereof, and building the inhabitants, and their worſhipping the Deuill, 1561
Capt: Newports voyage to Virginia, and returne for England, 1186, 1705, 1706. His ſuppoſed preiudice to the Engliſh plantation there, 1717. His oppoſing Capt. Smith, ibid. His proceeding to diſcouer Monacan in Virginia, and ſucceſſe, 1778
New-England & the New-found-land diſcouered and implanted by the Engliſh, 1827. The climat very temperate, agreeable to the bodies of the Engliſh, making them liue longer then in other countreys, the ſoyle fertile, variety of nouriſhing hearbs, and roots, the coaſt full of commodious harbours and hauens, many Iles fit for plantation, wood of all ſorts in abundance, 1831. The people haue our Engliſh Nation in good eſtimation, and are tractable in trading, the Sea is ſtored with all kind of Fiſh, diuerſity of wild foule, Doues in great abundance in time of Strawberries, abundance of rich Furs, 1831, 1832. Great ſhewes of Amber-greece and Pearle, ſtore of Whales in the Sea thereabout, ibid.
New-England deſcribed, 1870. Engliſh corne and cattle proſper there, 1878
New-found-land deſcribed, the fertility of the ſoyle, the temperature of the aire, conueniencie of the Baies, the inhabitants, their nature and cuſtomes, 1885. Herbs and flowers pleaſant and medicinable, great increaſe of corne, ſtore of Deere and other beaſts: great ſtore of land and water-fowle, 1885. Store of trees fit to build with, 1886. Great probabilitie of Mynes, and fiſh in great abundance, ibid.
New-Plimmouth abounding with diuers commodities of great worth, and very neceſſary for mans ſuſtenance: Timber of all ſorts, diuers Mines of vnknowne worth, ſtore of fiſh, Beauers, and others, 1840
Nicaragua Prouince, 1446, 1576
Saint Nicholas Bay, 1146
Nicholas Sanders his ſlanders againſt Q. Elizabeth; Hee obtaineth to be the Popes Nuncio; entereth Ireland, winneth Deſmon: runneth mad, and dyeth miſerably, 1893
Nicorago, a River, 1185
Nilco, a Prouince or territory in Florida, one of the richeſt in all that country, the townes, inhabitants, and commodities thereof, 1551
Noblemen imployed in the voyage to the Azores, 1939
Noble Perſonages voluntaries in 88. vnder the King of Spaines banner, 1901
Nondacao, a province in Florida wel inhabited, the commodities thereof, 1553
Norrack, a Prouince neere the River Arwi in Guiana, 1271
Gen. Norris his materiall education, Generall of all the Engliſh Forces: Martiall in the field vnder Conte Hohenlo, Martiall of the field in England; Generall of the Army in Friſland, Lord Preſident of Munſter in Ireland, 1916. Winneth great honour & fame by his well ordered retrait in the ſeruice before Gaunt, 1962. His death, 1968
Mr Norwoods relation of the Bermudas, and the Engliſh plantation there, 1797. & ſeq.
Noert, a famous Nauigator among the Dutch, 1191
Norumbega River, and the fabulous narrations thereof, 1625
Noſe loſt in cold weather, 1205
Noua Galitia, 1526
Noua Scotia, a proſperous plantation, by the dexterity of Sir Samuel Argall, 1828. Noua Scotia, a plantation in America, 1871. Abundance of Strawberries and all kind of wild foule, and very pleaſant countrey, 1873
Nunnez his relation of the Fleet which Pamphilo Naruaez was gouernour of in India, 1499. & ſeq. His ſhipwracke, 1500. His diſaſtrous fortune by famine, ſickneſſe, labour, and nakedneſſe, among the Indians, 1509, 1510. His comming after diuers perils to the Indians-Auanarez, 1514. His miſhaps there, and dangerous eſcaping of burning, 1515. His curing the ſicke by prayer and raiſing one from the dead, 1516. His comming to the Barbudaos, and the hungry ſhifts hee made there, 1517, 1518. His repute among the Sauages, their feare and admiration of him, 1521, 1522, 1323. His trauell to the South Sea, and occurrents, 1524, &c. His meeting with his country-men, 1526. His arriuall at Compoſtella and Mexico, 1528
Nunno de Guzmans his expeditions, 1556. & ſeq. His taking poſſeſſion for the King of Spaine in the River

River of Purification, his erecting trosses, killing, and converting Indians, burning heretickes, 1556, 1557. Travels and discoveries of divers Provinces, bickerings with Indians comming neere the South Sea, and purpose touching the Amazons, 1558, 1559
Nutmeg-trees, 1309
Nuts in the ground, 1650

O.

OAres of what fashion among the West-Indians, 1158. Oares of the Indians of the Newfound-land, 1880
Oaths and Blasphemie against God, and our Lady, forbidden in the Spanish Armado, 1902. Oaths how punished among the English in Virginia, 1719
Ocagna a place in America where is abundance of gold, 1419
Ocawita, a pretty bigge Iland in Orenoque, 1248
Ochare towne, 1534
Ochus, a Floridan Province, 1515
Ocoa, a towne in Hipaniola, 1186, 1418
Ocute a towne in Florida, 1556
Oecope, a high mountaine, 1248
Offrings amongst the Indians to the Diuell by the intercession of their Priest Powah, 1868
Olmoleigh River, 1254
Olynda a towne in Brasile, 1238
Olyphe a mount in the Indies, 1253
Omitlan, a Province of the greater Spaine in America: the description of the country, soyle, and noisome serpents, the discoverie and taking possession thereof by the Spaniards, 1559
Opechinkanow, a great King amongst the Indians taken by an Englishman in the midst of his armie, 1841. And in his own house, 1723, 1721. His plots and perfidie against Captaine Smith handsomely repelled, ibid.
Opportunities neglected, 1196
Oraddo, a mountaine plentifull for gold, 1284
Oranges their soueraigne vertue, 1378. Good against the scurvie, 1763
Order observed in the Spanish Fleet, 1905
Ordnances best for Ships: whether long or short pieces, 1403
Orenoque a River in America described, 1156, 1247, 1248, 1249, & seq.
Organs, a place in the West-Indies abounding with gold mines, 1222, 1242
Orillano a Spanish Captaine, his discoveries, 1415
Orange, a strange kinde of disease, 1671
Ostriches as tall as a man, 1189
Ouercharging pieces of Ordnance, and other pieces how preiudiciall, 1397, 1398
Ouigondi a towne of Savages in the Northerne America, 1638
Oxenhams voyage to the West-Indies, his attempts and travels to the South Sea, his prizes and misfortune, 1180, 1414
Oxen woolled like sheepe in Florida, 1550. Oxen Bunch-back'd, and very strange described, which are meat, drinke, shooes, houses, fire, vessels, and their maisters whole substance, 1561
Oxen called by their name in in Tercera like men, 1669, 1670
Ox-fish, 1313, 1314
Oysters great and having Pearles in them 1315. Oysters the onely sustenance of some Indians for a quarter of a yeere together, 1509

P.

PAchacutec Emperor of Peru his Acts, Temple, and Idol, 1471, 1472
Pacaba Province, 1549
Pafallaya Province 1544
Paiembos, or Piembos, an Indian Savage Nation, 1353
Palisema Province, 1549
Palma one of the Canary Ilands, 1833
Palmeto tree, and the fruit thereof described, 1173, 1375
Palmes excellent to cure the Hæmeroides, 1332
Pamaunke River, 1692
Panape yuawe apacone, a great Mountaine so called, 1213
Panama the situation, description, and riches thereof, 1180, 1418, 1444
Panaco a Province dispeopled by the Spaniards, 1580
Panagiri Indians of Brasile, 1300
Panpoicot, a towne vpon the River Ramasuc, 1874
Pano River, 1248
Paps which certaine people haue reaching vnder their waste, and neere to their knees, 1299
Papayes a kinde of fruit like an Apple of a waterish taste, good against the Eluxe, 1172
Papemena River, 1248
Parahol River, 1351
Paracuoma River, 1213
Paratee Fort, 1812
Paracyua River, 1209, 1211, 1213 1237, 1242,
Paramaree, a towne in the River Marwin, 1283
Paranapiacano, a Mountaine full of Snakes and wilde beasts, 1210, 1212
Parker, viz. Capt. William Parker his voyage and taking of Saint Vincent and Puerto Bello, 1243 1244, 1245
Parrats & Parochetroes wonderfull plentifull, 1172, 1264, 1304, 1305, 1372. A strange relation of a Parrat in America, 1329
Parry his treason against Queene Elizabeth in what manner reuealed, 1893
Partridges as bigge as Geese, 1329
Pasim a towne in the River Marwin, 1283
Passaos Cape, 1400
Patogones, people of great stature like Giants, 1383
Patosa Prouince described, 1536
Patawomeck, a River sixe or seuen miles in breadth, and nauigable an hundred and forty miles, 1693
Patent of the French King to Monsieur de Monts, for the inhabiting of the Countreys of La Cadia Canada, and other places in New-France, 1619, 1620. New Patents thought on concerning the plantation of New-England, 1830 A patent for the plantation of Newfound-land. An. 1610, 1876. Patents granted by his Maiesty of England for Virginia's plantation, 1683, 1684, 1787, 1777
Paruxet a border of New-England inhabited by the English, 1849
Painting much vsed by the Indians, 1229, 1358
Payen River, 1285
Payta Iland how situate, 1400, 446
Peace: Musicall signes thereof amongst the Indians, 1533
Pearles plentifull, 1419, 1560, 1661, 1843. Pearle-fishing performed with incredible torture of the Indians, 1586. Pearles of wonderfull bignesse, 1411. The best Pearles where found, and how knowne, ibid. Pearles found in Muscles and Oysters, 1205, 1235, 1315, 1316
Pease which are venemous, 1206
Pedro Sarmiento a towne in the Straits of Magellane, 1416
Pedro Ordonnes de Cevallos, a Spa-

Digitized by Google

Spanish Priest his observations concerning the West-Indies, 1420, 1421. & seq.
Peiouas a Savage Nation, 1363
Pemaquid River, 1874
Pemptégoet, 1625
Penguin Iland, the situation and description thereof, 1187, 1191, 1384, 1385
Penguins described, and how taken, 1385
Pentecost Harbour, 1660
People of the Kine, certaine Indians so called their admirable proportion, agilitie, beauty, behauiour, &c. 1523
People of Harts, other Indians so called, 1524, 1525
Pepper hoter and stronger then the blacke Pepper vsed with vs, 1173
Peritoqua, a River that goeth to Saint Vincent Iland in Brasile, 1241
Pert, viz. Sir Thomas Pert his American travels, 1177. & seq.
Peru language and letters, 1454 The originall, liues, conquests, lawes and Idolatries of the ancient Kings of Peru. 1454, 1455. & seq. The first voyage to Peru, 1455. Names and traditions of Peru, ibid. The wrongs which the inhabitants of Peru haue sustained by Spanish cruelty, 1590. Spanish forces, forts, and townes in Peru, 1418, 1419. The discouery, commodities, and Provinces of Peru, 1419, 1443, 1444, 1445. Neuer any raine in some parts of Peru, and the cause thereof, 1444 The admired plenty of gold in Peru, 1490. Peruan expeditions by the Spaniards, and their successe in such enterprises, 1450, 1451. The Peruans their opinion of God, and reuerence in the very naming of him, 1450
Petiuares or Petiwares, certaine Sauages in the Indies, their nature, stature, region, religion, superstition, diet, rites of childbirth, &c. 1225, 1226. Their man-eating, butchering Captiues, and the manner thereof, 1226. Their language, and how to trade safely with them, 1237
Petutan River, 1525
Philippina Ilands discouered, 1446
Philip and Iacob towne, 1563
Physicke hath the same operation in England, and vnder the Line, 1157. Indian Physitians their esteeme, and manner of curing, 1509
Piache towne and River, 1542
Pianita towne, 1211
Pico, one of the Ilands of the Azores, the description and commodities thereof, 1632, 1638. The high hill of Pico, which is more then fifteene miles in length, out of the top whereof issue often flames of fire like Etna, and is thought to bee higher then the Pike of the Canaries, 1672
Pigs without tayles, 1189
Pigmies of Brasile dwelling in Caues, 1231, 1300
Pigru, certaine Indians of Brasile, 1299
Pillars of stone, which are worshipped by certaine Indians, 1603
Pines, an excellent and delicious fruit, 1172
Pinos, an Iland on the South side of Cuba, 1836, 1185
Pipicorwarra Mountaine, 1285
Pirats English and Spanish, 1412. Misprision of that terme Pirats, and what a Pirat is, ibid.
Pitch plentifull, and how made, 1556, 1281
Plantines, *a fruit growing on a shrub betwixt an hearb and a tree, in tast like an Apple-*Iohn, 1173, 1371
Plants adored by Indians, 1479, 1560. Plants that haue the sense of feeling, 1280. Venemous plants 1525
Plantations in New-England, 1832. In New-Plimouth, 1842. The necessaries required for plantation, 1621, 1631
Plate River, 1141, 1252
Plumbe-drinke, 1784
Plumbs that are venemous, 1230
Pocahontas, daughter to King Powhatan, her being baptized and maried to an English man, 1841, 1760. Her vertuous life and death, 1774
Poeticall Sauages, 1292
Polizado, a Port in New-England, 1844
Pome-citrons so great as that two or three of them will load a horse, 1173
Pomegranats medicinable, 1794
Popaian Prouince, 1446
Popes authoritie derided by the King of Peru, 1445, 1452
Porco, a place plentifull for Gold, 1419
Ories certaine Sauages so called, 1213. Their stature, diet, complexion, habitation, lodging, &c. 1229
Portingals their cruelty to the Sauages, 1297, 1321. & seq. Diuers of them massacred by Sauages, 1189, 1117. Portingall Ships surprized by Sir Bernard Drake, and brought into England laden with Fish, 1883. The Portingals exquisite cesse in steering, 1379
Port-Ricco the situation and description thereof, 1153, 1169. & seq. 1415. It is the key of the West-Indies, 1166. The fortification thereof, 1161. Fight betwixt the inhabitants thereof, and the English, 1162
Port St Iulian, 1187, 1194, 1383
Port-Famine lying at the mouth of the Straits of Magellane, 1204, 1233. The inhabitants, their commodities, coldnesse of the climate, &c. 1232, 1233
Porto Bello, the situation and description thereof, 1601, 1245. The surprizing thereof by Captaine Parker, 1245
Porta la Spaniola, 1247
Port de la Heue, 1640
Port Saualet, 1640
Port-desire, 1193, 1194, 1232, 1391
Port-Royal, 1621, 1631, 1632. The French plantation remoued from Saint Croix thither, 1626
Porto Sequero, 1438. Porto de Plata, 1418. Port Fortune, 1635 Porto Reale, 1418. Port Calua, 1224. Port Negro, 1873. Port Valparizo, 1393. Porto Decalno, 1238. Port du Rossignoll, 1630. Port du Mouton, 1630. Port-Folly, 1873
Possession Bay, 1261
Possowne, a strange beast which reassumes her yong ones into her belly at pleasure, 1772
Potosini a mountaine in Peru, the inhabitants thereof, rich mines, multitude of Spanish treasure, and Spaniards there, 1214, 1420, 1421, 1365
Potossi a place rich in Mines, yeelding great store of treasure to the King of Spaine, 1419
Powah an Indian Priest, 1868. The Powahs inuocation of the Diuell, and offering sacrifices to him, ibid.
Powels voyage from the Summer-Ilands to the Indies, 1804
Powder and shot, how abominable to some Sauages, 1854. Straw-powder eaten by some Indians, and needy Spaniards, 1524
Powhatan River, 1689 Powhatan the Virginian Emperour his his subtilties, flatteries, practices, &c. 1721, 1722. Hee becomes subiect to the English governour, 1841. His person, attendance, guard, treasure, wines, authority, lawes, 1703, 1704. His policy and Coronation, 1778. His diuers treacherous practices against the English, 1711, 1722, 1724, 1725, 1756. His enuy to the English plantation, 1750. His death, 1775

Poxe how cured, 1308, 1310
Point of St Matthews 1606. Point of all the Divels, ibid. Point Ployer, 1712. Point-Care, 1648. Point-Comfort, 1687
Poison on trees, 1525. Poison cured by a certaine leafe, 1276. by a plant, 1310, 1311
Prayer made by Q. Elizabeth, after her deliuery from the Spanish inuasion, 1928
Pretious-stones variety and abundance, 1224, 1231
Priests and Iesuits alwayes chiefe actors in projecting and effecting treasons, 1894. Virginian Priests, 1358, 1701, 1274. their authority and manner of life, 1771
President of Siuill his cruelty to the English Captiues, 1835
Priguica, a beast like a shag-haird dog, in face like a woman, the laziest of all beasts, 1303
Pringe his voyage set forth by the Merchants of Bristoll to Virginia 1654, & sequ. his discouery of Fox-Island, Whitson-Bay, and Mount Aldworth, 1654, 1655. his danger by Sauages, and safe returne, 1656
Prodigies portending desolation of the ancient inhabitats of Peru, 1482
Prophecy amongst the Indians concerning the destruction of their country, 1482
Prosperity, the effects thereof, 1192
Prouidence of the English in New England, in hoarding vp corne vnder ground, 1844
Prouisions soundnesse or defect proueth the furtherance or ouerthrow of a voyage, 1396. the mischiefe of corrupt or scanty prouisions, 1396, 1397
Pueblo de los Angelos, 1413
Puerto Vicio, 1400
Puerto Seguro, 1190
Puerto Santo, 1186
Puerto Vieio, 1446, 1481
Puna Iland, the place where the Spaniards build their principall shipping in the Indies, 1400. Neere it is the River Lima, which is medicinable, ibid. The inhabitants grosse Idolaters, worshiping Lyons, Tygers, and other beasts, 1480
Punta de Olyndr, 1238. Punta de laraya, 1242. Punta de Santa Elena, 1400. Ponta de Augustia, ibid.
Purging plants in the Bermudas, 1801. A purge for the Ague, 1311, 1379
Purification of Mary, a River so called in New-Spaine, 1556
Purapayma, an Iland farre vp within the River of Orenoco, 1248

Q.

QVebec strait, 1611. Along the coast of Quebec are Diamonds in the Rocks of Slate, ibid.
Quereiua, a Bird of admirable beauty, and great esteeme amongst the Indians, 1305, 1306
Querna Vaca, a towne in the Marquesado of Hernan Cortes, thirteene leagues from Mexico, 1418
Quibiquesson, a famous Riuer in Mawooshen, 1873
Quigaure a great Province, and a very plentifull Countrey, 1548
Quillacu, the most miserable of all Nations, neither having good land, nor Aire, nor water, whence growes a Proverbe applyed to couetous Misers; Hee is a very Quillacu, 1479
Quillacena, or Iron-nose Province, a vile brutish lousie people without Religion, eating any Carrion, 1479
Quintera Bay, a place of good anchoring, but an open Bay, 1394
Quipana, a towne fiue dayes iourney from Tulla, 1550
Quires Province, 1561
Quiriciguig, and Quirigma, certaine Indians of Brasile so called, 1300
Quito the first Citie of the Kingdome of Peru, 1419, 1420, 1479
Quiuira Province, the situation and description thereof, 1561
Quiyoughcohanocke, two Riuers so called; and how situate, 1692
Quizquiz Province, 1546

R.

RAines very vnwholsome, happening in the way betwixt the Canaries, and West-Indies, 1157. Continuall raines at some times of the yeare vpon the coast of Guiana, 1270. Countreys where it never raineth, 1420. Prodigious raines of sand and ashes, 1476. Exceeding cold raines, 1554
A Rainbow appearing by Moone-light, and differing in colour from those of the Sunne, 1949, 1951. The forme of a Rainbow vnder a Caue, 1631
Ramasoc, a great River in Mawooshen, 1874
Rancheria, an excellent place for Pearle-fishing, 1146. It is assaulted and taken by the English, ibid.
Rapahanna, a towne in Virginia, 1687, 1688
Rapahanock River, 1694
Rashnesse in great enterprizes greatly blamed, 1961
Ratliffe, alias Sicklemore, slaine by Powharan, 1732
Rats of twelue kinds, 1303. Rats that sleepe all day, and wake all night, 1316. Danger by Rats, and the preuenting thereof in ships, 1391. Rats innumerable in the Bermudas, 1796, 1797. A strange Rat-plague, 1727
Henry Ravens, his voyage from Bermuda to Virginia, 1742
Ravens in Bermudas, which seemed to portend a sequell of mortalitie. 1797
Raleighs, viz. Sir Walter Raleighs his acts and esteeme in Orenoco, 1269. His furnishing Ships for the first Discouerie of Virginia, 1645. For a second, third, fourth, fift and sixt voyage, 1645, 1646. He is accused of breach of Articles, in the voyage to the Iles of Azores, he answereth for himselfe, 1958. His men left in Virginia, and what became of them, 1728
Recibo, a towne in Port-Ricco, 1170
Red-Reed, a plant in the Bermudas causing a forcible vomit, and effectually purging the stomacke, 1801
Registers obserued by the Indians, and their manner of registring, 1870
Richard Duke of Yorke, father to Plantagenet, his wilfull casting away himselfe, 1962
Richard Sanders and his companions, their comming from the Bermudas to Ireland in a small boat, boat without any instrument, in a direct line, 1803

Rinde of a tree which is more strong then any spice, in Virginia, 1653
Rio del Oro River, the breadth and depth thereof, 1141
Rio de la Hacha, a place taken by the English, 1183. The riches and strength thereof, 1419
Rio grand, an American River, the situation, description, and commodities thereof, 1224, 1237, 1552
Rivers of gold, 1216. A Riuer running vnder-ground, 1217. Names of Riuers in America, 1282, 1286. A medicinable Riuer, 1400. Riuers that encrease very much, and ouerflow the bankes in dry weather, without the flowing of the Sea, 1553. River of Toads, 1223. 1240. River of Stones, 1223, 1238. River of Palmes, 1505. River of Kine, 1562. River of Saint Crosses, 1562. River Saint Margaret in Canada, 1617. River Canada, 1631. River de Carinas, from the end of which if there were a channell made of foure leagues in length, there would bee a passage to the South Sea through it, without passing the perilous straits of Magellane, 1433
Lord of Robewall Lieutenant to the French King, in the Countreys of Canada, Saguenay, and Hocheliga, 1605
Rocke of Christall, which if a man looke on in a Sunne-shine day, will dazell his eyes, 1285
Roecrafts Voyage to the Newfound-land, his surprizing of a French-Barke, the conspiracie of his owne Mariners against him. the discouerie of the conspiracie, &c. 1829. his voyage to Virginia, kind vsage by Sir Samuel Argoll, the distresse hee suffered in a tempest, his death in a priuate quarrell, 1830
Romanes custome in managing of Martiall affaires, 1942
Rome, a Citie of murtherers and haters of Kings, 1894. New Rome much more drunken with the blood of Christians, then heathenish Rome with the blood of Ethnicks, 1894. Romane policie, 1669
Rosier, his relation of a voyage to Virginia, 1651, & seq.
Ruminnaui, an Indian Captaine, his cruell tyranny in Peru, 1486
Russels Iles in Virginia, 1712
Russia, a little village in the River Marwin, 1283

S.

SAbbath, 1163, 1637
Sabuco, a Riuer and Towne in Port-Ricco, 1170
Sacatekas, the richest Mynes in the Indies, 1177
Sachim of Mattachuest acknowledgeth the power of the English God, 1866
Sacrifices, and Sacrificers, 1472, 1531, 1557
Sacrifices to the Deuill, 1531, 1868
Sacrifices to the water, 1702
Sacrilledge punished, 1163
Sagehay-riuer, and the adioyning Countries described, 1606, 1610
Sayles of cotton cloth, 1394
Sagadohoc, a riuer in Mawooshen, 1874
Sagamos, the name of a Captaine among the Northerne Americans, 1633
Saint Lucia, one of the Ant-Iles in the latitude of 14 degrees, and 20 minutes, 1833
Salma riuer, 1248
Salomons Ilands, their situation, discouery, and losse, 1399
Salt how made and purified by the Indians, 1550
Saltcountrie, 1365. Salt made in New-found Land, 1889
Salt-water dangerous to drinke, 1143
Salt-water made drinkeable, 1378
Samuel Champlain a Frenchman, his taking vpon him the plantation of Kebec in New France, 1642. a conspiracy against him, ibid. his aduice for a further discouery, 1642, 1643. his fight with the Sauages, and returne for France, 1643. another voyage, ibid. & 1644
Samia-plains, neere the riuer Orenoque, 1248. Indians inhabiting those Plaines, 1248
Samambaia, a Tree in America, 1213
Sambo Bay, 1245
Sanctifying meat vsed by the Portingals in the Indies, 1522
Sands rained downe in Peru, 1476, Sands dangerous for nauigation in Brasil, called by the Portingals Bayhas de Sant Antonio, 1238
Sandy places trauelled by Compasse, 1242
Sandy Cape, 1620
Santa Port, 1399
Santa Maria, one of the Azores Ilands, 1834
Santa Cruce, a Carracke surprised by Captaine Norton and S. Iohn Burroughs, 1144, 1145. is burnt by the Portingals, ibid.
Santa Fe del Nueuo regno di Granada, the chiefe Citie in new Granada, 1419
Santas, a towne, 1438
Sapparow, the high countrie of Guiana, 1280
Saquarema, a nauigable riuer in Brasile, its description and commodities, 1240
Sassafrage, 1649. its medicinable vertue, 1655
Sasquesahunock, certaine Indian Gyants, their description, 1693
Sausèges made of the heart and guts of Cods and Lard spiced, 1628
Sauage-rocke, 1647
Sauage and his crue plotted the death of Q. Elizabeth, 1893
Sauages haue their goods interred with them, and why, 1605
Sauages fight with the English, 1187. Sauages of Tuppan Bass 1188. Sauage towne described, ibid. their manners, warres, and vsage of their captiues; 1188, 1218. drunkennesse, 1189. their religion, commodities, they esteem not gold, ibid. their hospitall fidelity to Anthony Kniuet Englishman, 1209. their infidelity, 1211. their ambition, 1212. Sauages called Cariyos, and their battells, 1218. Sauages called Petiuares, 1225. Mariquites, 1226. Topinambazes, 1227. Tomominos, Waytaquazes, ibid. Waymores, ibid. Abasangaretams, 1228. Wayanasses, ibid. Topinaques, ibid. called Pories, Molopaques, Motayas, 1229. Lopos, Wayanauazons, 1230. Sauages their religious desires, 1251. Sauages that make flat their childrens faces; that liue in hollow trees, quartering their faces into foure colours, yellow, azure, party-coloured, and blacke, 1481. Sauages very courteous, and weeping at the distresse of Christians, 1507. Sauages that kill their children lest they should marrie with their aduersaries, that eate any kind of Serpents, that are great theeues, lyars, & drunkards, their tormenting Flies, 1512, 1513. their drinking onely raine-water, water, 1514. Other Sauages. strange customes, fights, feare of horses, quicke-senſed, 1518, 1519. Sauage strange faſhions in Florida, 1520, 1521. Forty Engliſh ſlaine by the Sauages of S^t. Lucia, Anno 1605. 1833

Saugaleon Cape, 1398

Saualet a Frenchman, making two and forty voyages to New-found-Land, 1605

Sauona Iland, 1141

Sauſa, a Prouince in the Indies, whoſe inhabitants worſhip the picture of Dog, 1471

Scorpions not deadly, 1304

Scourge of Malice, a fortunate ſhip, 1148

Schnurdels trauells to Peru, and accidents there, 1347, & 1362

Schenetyeba, a large towne in the Indies, 1364

Scouring or flux, how it may be prouoked or ſtayed, 1265

Scooadodepon, a towne of the Caribes in the Indies, 1286

Scriueners, voyage to Werawocamoco, 1719. his death by drowning in the paſſage from Iames Towne in Virginia, to the Ile of Hogs, 1724

Scuruie, reigning in New France, 1642. and vnder the Æquinoctiall, 1202. its cauſe, effects, ſignes, and remedie, 1373, 1374. great raigning of it among Mariners, 1374. the things that are diſcommodious or beneficiall to the patient, 1623, 1763

Scuruy-graſſe, 1191. its medicinable operations, 1624

Sea blacke in colour beyond the line, 1157. a Sea-monſter like a man, of complexion like a tawny Indian, 1187. another ſtrange Sea-monſter, 1207

Sea-water warme, the ayre being cold, 1627. Sea made freſh by a violent intermixture of riuers in Florida, 1555. Sea-ſcum like pitch, and vſed like pitch, called Coper in Florida, 1556. Sea diſcommodious for meats in ſickneſs, 1624. Sea danger, 1223

Sea-fire, a meteor ſeene commonly in tempeſts, the diuers opinions and names thereof, 1737

The Sea worſhipped by ſome Indians, 1471

Sea-faring mens errors, 1368

Sea-fights, 1183, 1186, 1402, & ſeq. the requiſiteneſſe of armour in Sea-fights, 1408. a Sea-fight betweene the Spaniſh and Engliſh, at vnequall hand, the ſucceſſe largely related, 1780, 1781, 1784

Sea-hawking, 1376

Sea-voyages require a Princes purſe, 1942

Sea-ſtratagem of the Engliſh, hauing good effect, 1908

Sea-ſnakes, 1315

Seale-land, 1440

Seales great ſtore, 1287. their nature and deſcription, 1386

Seaſons falling vnequally vnder the ſame parallel, 1637

Sea-men, their ſeuerall offices, 1403

Seminaries erected at Rome and Rhemes, 1893

Security is dangerous, 1635

S^t. Sebaſtian Iland, 1200

Seed-time in New England, 1866

Segouni, a beaſt in Braſile, 1243

Selinama riuer, 1284. directions to trauell there, 1286

Seralta, an ancient Commander in Port-Rico, 1166

Serpents called Iebua, 1226. a ſerpent called Cu[illegible] in Braſile, as big as a man, twenty foot long, his ſtrange feeding, rotting, and reuiuing, 1243. A Serpent called Curuyuba thirty foot long, its deſcription, 1317, 1318. Serpents that are armed with plates not pierceable by an arrow, ibid. Serpents called Guararici, which being heard ſing by the Indians, cauſeth them to dye, ſo ſtrong is their imagination, 1318. a huge Serpent, 1350. two great Serpents, 1603

Shadden a towne of the Arwaccas in the Weſt Indies, 1285

Shambles of mans fleſh among the Spaniards in the Indies, 1280

Sharke, a fiſh ſo called, deſcribed, 1376

Sheathing of Ships requiſite, 1387

Shawakotoc a riuer in Mawooſhen, 1875

Sheepe why ſcarce in Port-Ricco, 1172. Sheep vſed for cariages as horſes, in the Indies, called Amidas, 1362. Sheepe as big as horſes, with huge hornes, and ſmall tayles, neere Mexico, 1560. one horne weigheth 50 pound, 1561

Shels of Pearle curiouſly wrought by nature, 1381

Sherleys voyage, 1168

Showers of gold, 1395

Shooting at Sea how aduiſedly to be vndertaken, 1369

Sickneſſe, its cauſe and remedy, 1251. Sickneſſes vnknowne in New France, 1623. Sickneſſe in Guiana 1261. Sickneſſe preuented by good dyet, 1624. ſickneſſe deſtroying the whole Country in Pataxet in New England, 1849

Sickene Mountaine, 1286

Sierra Leona, a country ſo called, 1141

Shipwracks, 1355, 1356, 1440, 1560, 1673, 1674, 1676, 1677

Ships, how moſt conueniently built for warres or Merchandiſe, 1405. 1406. ſhips vnprofitably built of Cedar in the Bermudas, 1747. ſhips taken by S^r. Francis Drake at the Caſcois in the Portingall voyage, 1923. ſhips of great worth taken by the Engliſh at the fight before Cadiz, 1930. in ſhips whether race-building be commodious for men of warre, 1409

Silk-wormes in Florida, 1603. in the Bermudas, 1739

Silk-graſſe in Virginia, 1738

Silley, an Ile on the weſt of England 1247

Siluer in Florida preſented to the French by the Inhabitants, 1603

Smiarra, a towne neere the Fort of Maxuin, inhabited by the Arwacca Sauages, 1283

Sir Samuel Argal by vertue of commiſſion with much valour and diſcretion diſpoſſeſſed the French of their vſurped poſſeſſion in the New found Land, 1828. his departure from the coaſts of Virginia, 1830. His inuention of trade with the Virginia Sauages, 1768

Skin as ruffe as Buffe, on men, 1280

Skuls of dead men layd in the windowes of houſes among ſome Indians perchance to put them in mind of mortality, 1560

Slate good ſtore in Canada, affording Diamonds, 1610, 1611

Sleeping-hearbe, 1312

Smiths Iles before Virginia, 1691

Capt. Smith of Plimouth his diſaſterous voyage, with ſudden returne by the vnmercifulneſſe of a raging tempeſt, his ſecond aduentures to the Weſterne Ilands, hee is chaſed by the French Pyrates, is taken priſoner, and the voyage ouerthrowne, 1829. Captaine Smiths ſuſpition by the Councell of Virginia, his behauiour and clearing therefrom, 1706. his care for the Plantation and furtherance thereof, his diſcouerie of the riuer, 1707.

Digitized by Google

1707. he fights and kils sauages, is taken by them, brought to the Emperour, threatned death, and saued by the Kings daughter, returneth to the Plantation, 1708, 1709. his second arriuall at Powhatans court, 1710. his better desire then power, to benefit the plantation, 1711. his striking terror in the Sauages. ibid. his departure for a discouerie, 1712

Iohn Smith his voyage to New-England finished in the space of 6 moneths, with gaine of fifteene hundred pounds, 1838

Snakes-hearb, excellent good against the poyson of Snakes, 1311

Snakes eaten, 1210. snakes verie venemous, 1212. A dangerous snake kild, 1215. its quality. ib. name Sorocueu, 1230, its description, 1231. Snakes without poyson, 1303. their plenty and diuersitie in Brasile, 1303, 1304. with their names, ibid. & 1317, 1318 Snakes of thirty foot long called Amara, worshipped 1457, 1478. Snakes worshipped in Topira, 1560. Snakes worne about the neckes of the Virginians, 1698

Snowes exceeding great in Florida 1551. Snowes made vse of in stead of drinke, 1561. Snowes as good as a furd-gowne for frnits, 1636

Soacatino, a towne in Florida, very poore and destitute of prouision, 1554

Socke riuer, 1176

Sodomites burnt by the Indians, 1558

Somme-riuer in Florida discouered by the French, 1603

Sommerset-Iland in the Bermudas, 1796

Sir George Sommers ariuall at the Bermudas, and death, 1733. his care for the safety of those Ilands, 1738. his departure from Virginia to the Bermudas, 1754

Sommer Ilands commodities at large, 1794. 1795. Vide Bermudas.

Somma, a place in America, 1122

Soto a Spaniard, his parentage, time of his flourishing, nature, and dignity, 1528, 1529. his voyage to Florida at large related, and discouery, 1530 the company of his ships, and number of his Souldiers, his ariuall at Florida, and at the towne Vcita, and meeting with Indianized Christians there, 1530, 1531. his comming to Paracossi, Acela, Tocaste, Cale, townes in Florida, his newes of Gold, and Maiz, 1532. his approach at other seuerall townes in America-Florida, and seuerity to the Indians, 1533, 1534. his many bickerings with the Indians, his resolution for the Prouince of Ochus, 1535. hee pretends himselfe to be the sonne of the Sunne, 1536. his ingratitude to an Indian Princes that had vsed him & his company kindly, 1538, 1539. buricth a letter neere a Pine-tree, to giue direction to his lost followers, 1537. carieth the Caciques with them, till hee was out of their countries, 1541. the course of his trauels, 1542. his skirmish and losse by the Indians, 1543. his other Indian occurrents, 1546, 1547, 1548, 1549, et seq. his ariuall at seuerall Floridan towns, or cottages, his weakenesse and losse of his company, 1550. his hinderance by the losse of Iohn Ortiz, his dangerous passages ouer riuers and snowes, his courteous entertainment by the Inhabitants of Nilco, 1551. his distresse, griefe, sickenesse, death, praise, titles, and substituting Luis de Moscoso in his roome, 1552

Soory-soory, a towne inhabited by Sauages neere Marwin in America, 1283

Soule, the Brasilians opinion thereof, 1290. the opinion of the Indians of Canada, 1610

South-sea passage hoped through Virginia, 1822

South Sea discouered more largely then heretofore, 1566

Souricoua, a riuer in Canada passable with Canoas, 1616, 1617

Soynoone, a towne of the Indians neere Marwin riuer, 1285

Spaine is said to yeeld the King (the King himselfe, Dukes, Marquises, and Earles, with their retinue excepted,) from 18 yeare old to 50, but 1125390 men, page 1817

Spaniards how esteemed of by the Floridans, 1524

Spanish pretended cures of the sicke in the Indies, 1515. Spanish possession of Peru, and its wealth, 1495, 1496. they eate one another, 1512. Spaniards vnspeakable treasure in Peru, 1487 Spaniards preaching to the Indians, 1485. Spaniards Ecclesiasticall reuenues in the Indies, want of Bishops, holding Councels, the Kings reuennues yearely out of the Indies, twelue Millions and whence it issueth, 1422. Spanish destruction of some Indians from off their country altogether, 1415 Spanish Fleet for the Indies, and shipwracke, 1440. Spaniards trecherously circumuent the inhabitants and King of Peru, 1445. Spanish cruelty to their prostrate slaues, 1448. Spaniards came to the Indies for conuerting, but not of Indians, but gold to their owne vses, 1449. Spanish ciuill disagreements in Peru, 1453. visage of the inhabitants, 1453, 1454. Spaniards called by the Indians Viracochie, that is, Sea froth, supposing such could not bee borne of a woman, 1454. Spaniards losse of foure ships, 1142. Spanish Gulleons taken, 1144. Spaniards assault and repulse, 1149. Spaniards yeela to the English, 1164. their enny or desperateneesse, 1166 Spaniards best ruled with seuerity, 1168. their vngratefull trechery, 1177. their perfidious insulting cruelty, 1178. and abuse of the English in Mexico, ibid. et 1179. Spanish distresse in Chili, 1476, 1477. Spaniards very rich in the Indies, 1242. Spanish attempts defeated, 1475. they are called in Trinidada, Conquerabians, 1247. Spaniards dare not but by stealth traffick with the English; the best things for traffick with them, 1266. they are molested by the Caribes, 1281. their taking Lampere, an Indian fortified towne, 1352. Spaniards like to be deuoured by the Indians, 1354. their fight and ouercomming them, 1355, 1356. they striue to discouer the Amazons, 1359. Spanish cruelty and trechery towards the harmlesse Indians 1354, 1360, 1361. they destroy the Indians called Mapais, 1362, 1363. Spoyles of Spaniards in Peru, 1478. Spanish ciuill disagreements in the Indies, 1364. Spanish periurie, 1378. a trecherous and vngratefull Spaniards issue, 1394. Spanish fight with the English vnequally, 1404 Spanish discipline in fights by sea, their seuerall offices and authoritie, their prying and imitating English orders, 1404. their carefulnesse in being armed, 1408. wherein they oftly ouercome the English

English, ibid. a noble Spaniard, 1410. Spaniards careleſneſſe for good Surgeons in fights, 1412. Spaniſh intelligence by trecherous Engliſhmen, 1415. Spaniſh forces how ſtrong or weake in ſeuerall places of Peru and thereabout, their treaſure, when, where, and whence conueyed into Spaine, 1419, 1420. the Spaniards liues and gouernment in the Indies, 1421. their courteſie, and conuerſion of them as they call it, 1448. their hatred of gold, 1449, 1454. Spaniards why called Viracoche 1458. Spaniards ranſacking of our Engliſh ſhips, putting the men to moſt cruell bondage, 1834. the Spaniards cruelty to the dead carkaſſe of an Engliſhman, holding him to bee a Lutheran, 1835. They deny to doe iuſtice, are very willing the Engliſh ſhould ſerue their ſtate, ibid. They betray and take priſoner the men of Captaine Legat, 1836. Spaniſh pride and its iſſue in an Indian Gouernour, 1677. Spaniſh ſhips of great worth ſunke neere Tercera, comming from the Indies, 1673. another ſhip of good ſtrength ſunke by an Engliſhman of a great deale ſmaller force, ibid. Spaniſh ſhips taken by the Engliſh, ibid. Spaniſh ſhips, riches, and ſhipwracke of ſome, 1673. Spaniſh Fleet caſt away, great and rich, 1674. Others taken, ibid. Spaniſh cowardiſe, and inſulting cruelty, 1675. Spaniards ſmart for the cruelties and diſſention with the Engliſh, 1676. Spaniards queld by the Engliſh, 1677. Spaniſh ſhipwracke a iuſt plague vpon them, 1679, 1680. Spaniſh infidelity worſe then Pagan, 1527. Spaniſh manner of preaching to the Indians with the iſſue thereof, 1528. Spaniards eate dogs in Florida, and there dye like dogs for want of victuals, 1536. Spaniards thinke it a worke meritorious to conuert the Indians, that is, with the ſword, 1558. Spaniards conteſt each with other for ſuperiority in diſcouering forraine Countries, 1560. Spaniards firſt diſcouery of the Indies and poſſeſſion thereof, their cruelty and couetouſneſſe related by a Frier, the Millions of Indians ſlaine by them, for their gold, 1569, 1570. Spaniſh cowardiſe and cruelty in broyling, burning, drowning, and twenty wayes elſe murdering them of Hiſpaniola, 1570. & ſeq. Spaniſh torturing vndeſerued by the harmleſſe Indians, hauing not committed any thing againſt them puniſhable by the law of man, 1572. Spaniſh ſlaughter of a million in S^t. Ihon and Iamaica, 1573. Spaniſh inuention to diſpeople thoſe Nations, ibid. The Spaniards god, 1574 Spaniards kill many in Cuba, men, women, and children, 1573, 1574. Spaniards diſpeopling Terra Firma, 1576. They murther in the Prouince of Nicaragua 500000 men, 1576, 1577. Spaniards kill two or three millions in Noua Hiſpania, and its ſeuerall Prouinces, 1577, 1578. an infinite number in Guatimula, 1576. Spaniſh Anthropophagi, 1580. Spaniſh torturing and deſtroying the Indians in Panucha, Machuachan, and Xaliſco, 1580 1581, of Yucatan, 1581, 1582, 1583. Spaniards ſell the Indians Idols, 1583, deuoure the Indians of S. Martha, ibid. & 1584. as alſo of Cartagena, 1584 of the Coaſt of Pearles, the Coaſt of Paria, and the Ile of Trinitie, 1585, 1586, 1587. Indians how vſed at Sea by Spaniards, and at landing, 1586. at the fiſhing for Pearles, 1587, Spaniſh glutton, 1588. Cruelty in Yuiapari and Veneſula, to the ruine of foure or fiue millions of Indians, 1587, 1588. in Florida, Riuer de la Plata, and the kingdomes of Peru, 1589, 1590, 1591. Spaniſh conuerſion of the Indians how weakely followed, 1594. their diuers feats of cruelty and inhumanity to the poore Chriſtians of New Granada, and the ſeuerall prouinces thereof, 1591, 1592, 1593, 1594, 1595. Spaniſh gold thirſtineſſe, and thence iſſuing bloodthirſtineſſe of the Indians, 1596, 1597. Spaniſh reformation of cruelties and wrongs in the Indies ought to bee performed, and vpon what reaſons, 1598, 1599, 1600, 1601, 1692. a repetition of ſundry butcheries, ibid. Spaniſh reaſons mouing them to a poſſeſſion of the Indies, 1603. Spaniſh cruelties hath kild and deſtroyed in all the Indies 20 millions, ibid. Spaniards maſſacre the French in Florida, and plant themſelues, 1604. are maſſacred again by the French as they deſerued, 1605 Spaniſh irregularities in the Indies derided by a French Catholike, 1621. Spaniards arreſt Engliſh Ships, 1893. Spaniſh preparation againſt England, Anno 1588. p. 1895. Spaniſh policy, 1897. The Spaniſh Armada ſetteth ſaile, is diſcomfited by a tempeſt; is at laſt deſcried by an Engliſh Pirat, 1903 Spaniards vaine opinion concerning the Engliſh Fleet, 1907 Spaniards fire their owne ſhips, 1931. Span: Armada's cut their Cables, 1908. They fly for to ſaue their liues, 1910. They ſuffer miſerable ſhipwracke on the Iriſh Sea. They ſeize on ſome Scottiſh Fiſher-boats, ib. Spaniſh plagues and miſeries by the Engliſh, 1680 There flight for feare of the Engliſh, 1932. Spaniſh Fly-boats moleſt the Engliſh, about the coaſts of Cornwall, 1698. Spaniſh Caruels diſperſed, 1698. Spaniſh ſhips at Sea, for the diſcouerie of the ſtate of Virginia's Colony, 1773. Spaniards hated by the Portingals, 1952. Spaniards variety of diſpoſitions in various fortunes, 1954. Their nature in generall, ibid.

Spaynes relations of the Ile of Trinidad, Guiana, and the River Orenoco, 1247, 1248. & ſeq.

Spices excellent good, hot, and comfortable in the Magellane ſtraits, 1390

Spiders with ſilken webs, and little eggs like Quick-ſiluer, in the Bermudas, 1899. Not found to bee venemous, ibid.

Spignard whereof is a precious oynment made, 1264

Spilpergen a famous Nauigator among the Dutch, 1191

Spirito Santo a Port in the Weſt-Indies neere the Line, 1190, 1196. Its deſcription, and fortification, 1197

Spleene, how eaſed, 1315

Squanto a Sauage of the company of the Maſſaſoyts, very helpfull and commodious to the Engliſh, 1851.

Squaſachin wife to the great gouernour of the Sauages, 1861

Squirrels flying in Virginia, 1695

Capt. Standiſh his training vp his men in New-England to military affaires, 1854. His iourney to the Maſacheuaſets, 1863. Hee encountreth with a Sauage, and putteth him to flight, 1865

Digitized by Google

teth him to flight, 1865
Stars obserued by the Indians, 1870
Stately Statues in the Indies, 1463
Steering a ship requireth exquisite care, 1378, 1379
Stills set on worke for want of water 1967
Stingeray Ile so named of a stinging Raye, 1714
Stomaccace a strange disease, its cause, and cure by stinke-grasse, 1624
The Stone how and with what cured 1310. An approued medicine for it, 1312
Stones like Chrystall, 1216
Rich Stones, 1276
Stones transparent, 1284
No Stones in some part of Florida, 1504
Stones medicinable, 1509
Stones how necessary in new France 1624. The benefit of them in generall, ibid.
Straits of Magellane, how dangerous a passage 1439
Strawberies of rare bignesse in Virginia, 1686
A Stratagem of the Indians, 1442 1443, Peter Strosse in his desperate braue ry taken by the Spaniards, to the losse of his nauy. 1962
Tho. Stukeley, an English fugitiue his faire promise to the Popes bastard, 1893
Stuesia an Indian riuer, 1362
Sturgeon store in Virginia, 1758
Suboris certaine Indians so called, 1364
Earle of Suffolkes setting forth a Fleet, 1186
Sugar-Canes, 1171
Sulphry smels issuing from raine, 1157
Cap. Summers voyage, 1186
Sun and Moone worshipped, 1233, 1464, 1465.
Suppayas certaine Indians inhabiting Wiapoco riuer, their description, 1263. Their nakednesse, painting, child-birth, Funeralls, &c. ibid.
Supply to the Plantation in Virginia by the English 1841. Supply to the plantation of New-England 1867
Superstition among Sauages, 1226
Surarer a towne of Sauages called Araccaws in America, 1283
Sarcucuses a Sauage nation their commodities 1356
Sasolas-Indians, 1516
Swearing forbidden amongst the Inhabitants of Peru, 1451
Swearers punished in the King of Spaines Armada, 1902
Swearing and blaspheming, its ill euent, 1805
Sweating vsed by the Indians, to expell diseases, 1624
Swine with holes in their backs, 1316
Sword-fish, 1266
Symamios, Sauages in the West-Indies so called, 1364
Symarons fugitiue Negroes in the West-Indies, 1414. Their habitation called S. Iago de los Negros, ibid.

T.

TAbaga Iland, 1415
Tacnia Sauages, 1299
Tagrona one of the richest valleyes in the Indies, 1434
Tali a Floridan Towne, 1540
Tamgara a dancing bird, troubled with some disease like the falling sickenesse, 1305
Tamos a populous Prouince, 1562
Tamkings a peece of wood of great moment for shooting in peeces of Ordnance, 1413
Taminna a mountaine in America, signifying the mountaine of gold, 1217
Tapatu a Floridan riuer, 1552
Tapecuia Sauages, 1299
Tapetijwason, a strange beast in in Port-famine in the streights of Magellane, 1233. Portugals call them Gombe, 1233
Tapati, a Brasilian beast that barketh like a dog, 1303
Tapia taken by Sir Francis Drake, 1183
Tapuyas certaine Sauages so called 1213. Many Nations vnder that name, 1298 & seq. Their speech cannot bee vnderstood, 1299. The seuerall nations. ibid.
Tapyrousoa, an Indian beast whose skin makes Targets, 1325
Taragauig Brasilians that fight with enuenomed arrowes, 1299
Tar or Taroo a place neer Orenoco 1249
Targets of Cow-hides 1560
Targets made of Buff-skins eaten, 1214. Targets beneficiall against Sauage arrowes, 1716
Tascaluca-Prouince, 1541
Taru a beast of Brasil that hath scales like plates on her back which no arrow may enter, 1302
Tatalacoya a towne of the Indians, in Florida surprized by Spaniards, 1549
Tatarcax a rich King in America, 1561
Tauparamunni a towne inhabited by Caribes in the riuer Marwin, 1283
Taymayas the name of some Indian Sauages, 1211, 1213. Tamoyes description, their infinite store of gold and precius stones, their nature and ciuilitie, 1231.
Tecoantepeck the first Towne in New Spaine, 1177.
Teeth shedding by drinking a kind of water neere the River Rhine, 1622
Teixo a wood as hard as stone, 1670.
Temples couered with straw in Topira, 1560. Temples to the Sun, Moone and Stars, richly adorned in the ancient City Cozco of Peru, which women might not enter, 1465
A horrible Tempest, 1175. Extreame Tempests, 1193, 1194, 1223, 1500. Frequent Tempests, 1502, A dreadfull Tempest neere Tercera, throwing fishes on the ground, ouer exceeding high cliffes, its pittifull effects, 1679, 1680. An extreame Tempest bravely related, 1735, 1736, 1737
Tenaserea a Mountaine in the East-Indies, where Diamonds are found, 1271
Teneriffa an Iland in the Canaries, its exceeding high mountaines, great riches, store of Sacke, 1156 1369, 1370
Tepique a Prouince neere New-Spaine, taken possession of by Spaniards, 1559
Tercera one of the Azores Ilands, 1143. The description thereof, its forts & fortification, mountain and sudden discouerie of ships, its chiefe Towne, wines, prouision, fruits, 1668. The chiefe traffick, woad, 1669. Its birds, seasons, Stones, ibid. Corne, Vines, Oxen called by names like men, ibid. Subiect to earth-quakes, strange fountaine and wood, Inhabitants are all Portingalls or Spaniards, 1670, its strange diseases, strong windes, and other villages, 1671. Whence so called, and the store of Oade growing there, 1938
Terra-Australis incognita, its description at large, 1423, & seq.

Digitized by Google

its bigneſſe, ſituation, diuerſity of inhabitants, their manner and diſpoſition deſcribed, 1423. its commodities of fruits, beaſts, fiſhes, ſilver, pearle, probability of gold, ſpices, &c. 1424. Riuers, and other commodities at large, its poſſeſſion for the King of Spain, 1425 1426

Terra Firma, 1146. it hath on the coaſt 70 Ilands, 1434. the publication of God there after the Spaniards manner, eight hundred thouſand inhabitants made away by Spaniſh cruelty, the women there were murdered, which the Indians thought great cowardiſe, 1575, 1576

Tetitlan, a Prouince in New Spain, 1559

Teulnicham Prouince, 1559

Tharletons perfidie, 1382, 1383

Teſtogos, a place ſo called, 1242

Terattecoumoynetto, a towne of the Charibes, neere the riuer Marwin in America, 1285

Theeues baſeneſſe, 1153

Theft ſeuerely puniſhed by the Indians, 1870

Theft puniſhed in the Engliſh army, 1921

Thimogoa, Inhabitants of Florida, 1604

Thirſt in great extremity, 1505. Thirſt breeding faintneſſe and death, 1686

Thirty ſayle of Ships ſent to further the plantation in New England, 1832

Thought ſlayeth a man, 1878

St Thomas fabled by the Indians to preach to their anceſtors, his Chappell, and miracle, 1219

Three Spaniſh ſhips taken by the Engliſh Admirall, 1960

Three Armadaes of the King of Spaine caſt away on the ſhoald called Olca copos, or Catch-chops 1836

Three Spaniſh ſhips ſurpriſed by the Engliſh, 1908

Thunders ſtrange effects, 1405

Thunders horrid and prodigious in the Bermudas, 1738

Thunderbolts frequent in the Indies, they often cleaue great trees, 1502

Tiembos, fierce and populous Indians neere the riuer of Plate, their nature, faſhion, deſcription, 1349

Tiguez, a Prouince in America, 1561

Tillage, more neceſſary then mynes for a new Plantation, 1631

Timimino, Indians conſumed by the Portingals in Braſile, 1298

Tipi, Indians in Braſile, that fight with venomed arrowes, 1299

Titicaca, an Iland in Peru, of infinite riches, their precious Temple, worſhip and conceit of the Sunne, 1465

Tiuiuinas, Inhabitants neere Orenoco, two ſorts of them, 1247, 1285

Toads and Frogs eaten, 1214, 1219 1230, 1327

The Toad-fiſh, 1315

Toalli, a Floridan towne, and its deſcription, its inhabitants and their diſpoſition, 1536

Tobaccoes firſt bringers in vſe, 1182. Tobacco, 1228, 1230, 1264, 1271. Tobacco ſaue mens lines, 1258. Tobacco ſtore. 1276 1277. its effects in Phyſicke, and abuſe, its name of the Holy herbe, and the manner how the Indians drinke it, 1311. how they blow it in canes one on another, to encreaſe valour, 1238. a ſtrange kind of tobacco, 1392. Tobacco not profitable in New England, the cauſe why 1871. Tobacco-pipe of a Lobſters claw, 1662. Tobacco of Virginia how diſparaged by Tobacco-mongers, 1775, Tobacco worth to Spaine 100000 pound yearly, 1821

Tobaſos Indians, 1561

Tobyas Bay in the Straits of Magellane, 1205, 1388

Tockwhogh riuer in Virginia, 1694

Tocaſte towne in America, 1531

Tocoman, a place in the Indies inhabited by Pigmies, 1231. tis eſteemed to be the vttermoſt part of Braſile where it ioyned to Peru, ibid. & 1242

Tocoya, a towne in the Indies, 1258

Tocuo, a place of America, fertile with gold, 1419

Tolisbay ſtraits, 1233

Tohanna, Indians ſo called, 1363

Tonola, a prouince in New Spaine, 1558

Tomomimos, Sauages ſo called, 1217. they liue at Moregoge, their townes, and warres with the Portingals, 1227

Tooth-ache cured, 1308

Topira, an Indian prouince abounding with gold and emeraulds, armour made of ſiluer, the inhabitants worſhip birds and hearbes, they ſacrifice to a ſerpent, 1560

Tortoyſe, its deſcription in Bermudas, it liues 24 houres after its head is off, 1800. a Tortoyſe with 700 egges in his belly, taken and eaten, 1255. they lay two or three hundred egges at once, 1314 Tortoyſe nor fiſh nor fleſh, 1741

Topinambazes, Sauages like the Petiuares, their carriage, haires, ſinging, 1227. Vide Petiuares.

Toupin Indians neere the riuer Ieneere, 1347

Trauelling very eaſie and ſtrange for a ſmall valley in the Indies, 1242. Trauell-direction in the Indies, 1285. more directions for trauell, 1886. Trauelling in hot water, 1359

A Tree that yeeldeth the inhabitants moſt of the water they haue, 1370 Trees, their nature and abundance in Dominica, 1158. Trees ſtrange and vnknowne in Port-Ricco, 1165. Trees that beare buds, greene fruit, and ripe fruit, with ſeeds, all together, 1173. Trees hauing the ſenſe of feeling, 1280. Trees good againſt bruiſes, and diſtilling Balſome, 1239 trees of exceeding hard wood, exceeding great, 1256. Trees that haue alwayes greene leaues, that beare fruit twice in a yeare, called Mangaba trees, flowing with milk that might ſerue for hard Waxe, called Marueuge. Trees that cauſe (their fruit being eaten) teeth to fall, Trees whoſe fruit makes haire fall, their ſtrange nature, and ſeuerall names in Braſile, 1307, 1308, 1309. Trees that ſerue to cure greene wounds, hauing good Balme, 1308. For the Colicke, for the bloody Fluxe, for cold diſeaſes, for the Poxe, for the Toothake, ibid. Trees fruit that killeth any fiſh in the water, that change leaues euery moneth, that make Inke, that hath in it a riuer of water, ſuch ſtrangeneſſe of trees, ſee 1309. and their names ibid. Trees in Salt-water, 1316. vide Plant.

Baſe Treacherie in an Iriſhman, 1200. In an Engliſhman, 1220. Whoſe miſerable end, 1221. In a Sauage, 1251. In the Indians, 1256, 1258. To themſelues, 1361. Treacherie the loſſe of a voyage, 1383. Treacherie in the Indians, 1392, vide Perfidie.

Triana, a towne taken and fired by Capt. Parker, 1244

Trinity Ile peſtered with Spaniſh cruelty, and robbed of inhabitants, 1584, 1585

Trinity

Trinity harbour Ahanan in the New-found Land, 1882
Tripaſſey, a harbour commodious and temperate in the latitude of 46 degrees, 1885
Trinidada, 1186. the Indians there haue 4 names, their commanders now called Captaines, inhabited by the Spaniards, 1247
Trinity, a hauen in Cuba, 1500
Trugillo, the vtmoſt towne of the Prouince Valenzuola in America, 1419
Truxillo, a place in America, 1399
Triumphall Verſes of the Engliſh deliuerie in 88, 1912
Cape Tuberone, 1146
Tuberones, the name of Dog-fiſh by the Portingals, 1209
Tucana, a bird like a Pye, with a bill a ſpan long, very big, 1306
Tucanucu Sauage Braſilians, 1299
Tuccaman, a towne in the riuer of Plate, 230 miles from the entrance, its fruitfulneſſe, its want of gold, 1141
Tuckers-terrot, a ſhoale on the coaſt of Virginia, 1648
Capt. Tucker, gouernour of the plantation in the Bermudas, his acts there, 1803
Tulahe, a fruitfull country neere Guiana, 1248
Tulla, a place in Florida, 1550
Tullumuchale, a great Towne in Florida, 1541
Tulu, a place inhabited by the Spaniards neere Cartagena, its ſorce, 1419
Tumbez, a plaine country in Peru, 1444. its inhabitants are vitious and luxurious, people that idolize Tygers and Lyons, 1480
Tune, a fruit in Florida, on which onely the inhabitants liue three moneths in a yeare, 1511
Tunſteroito, a towne of Sauages in the Weſt Indies, 1285
Tunza, a place in America, 1419
Tupiguae, Braſilians deuoured by the ſlauery of the Portingals, 1298
Tupinaba, Indians ſo called, 1298
Tupinaquin, Indians inhabiting Braſile, 1298
Tuppac Inca Yupanqui, Emperor ſometime of Peru, his valiant acts and attempts, conqueſts and enlarging his Empire, ciuilizing many ſauage nations, his progeny, death, and ſucceſſor, 1478, 1479
Tuppan Bats, Sauages ſo called neere Braſile, 1188. their birth, habit, life, and lodging, ibid.
Tupac Amaru, heire to the Empire of Peru falſly accuſed, and cruelly executed by the Spaniſh Viceroy, 1488. his well deſerued iſſue, ibid.
Tupan-boyera, a place inhabited by Canibals in Braſile, 1227. the Portingals call it Organes, ibid.
Tupijo, Braſilian Sauages, 1299
Tuquema, a Prouince ſubiect to Peru, its ſeuerall townes of gouernment, 1419
Turkes taken by the Spaniards, and made Gally-ſlaues, reſcued by the Engliſh, and ſet at liberty, 1933
Turky-ſtones in New France, 1621 1622
Turneps a remedy againſt the ſcurvie, 1880
Maſter Turners relation of Braſile, &c, 1243
Turners relation, voyage, ſucceſſe, at large, 1265, 1266
Turtles innumerable, 1306
Tutelpinco, a forſaken towne in Florida, left by the inhabitants, and deſtitute of prouiſion, 1551
Tygers worſhipped, 1457

V.

VAcupa, a Prouince in America, 1560
Vahuar huacac, an Emperour in Peru, his acts and conqueſt, hee wept blood at his natiuity, 1457 1458
Valenzuola, a golden place in America, 1419
Valparaiſo, a place in the ſouth Sea, 1416
Valuation of the voyages of fiſhing Boats, to the coaſt of New-found Land, 1886
Varaua, a fiſh in Braſile as big as an Oxe, 1239
Vaytacaſſes, a kinde of Sauages, 1219
Vbra Riuer, 1248
Veita, a towne in Florida, its deſcription, and commodities, 1530
Vela Pampilona, an American place, 1419
A Venetian ſhip taken by the Engliſh, 1906
Venter-hauen, a place in the weſt parts of Ireland, 1144
Veragua, a towne in the Weſt Indies plenteous of gold, 1419. it neuer raines there, an vnhealthy country 1433
Verù Cruz, a new towne, 1418
Verginia, its hopefull commodities, the inhabitants idolatry and worſhip of the Sunne, their othes and fidelity thereupon, 1690. their cuſtomes, 1690. plantation there, and mortality, accompanied with famine, 1689. 1690. Virginias bounds, temperature, winds, entrance, mountaines, ſoile, 1691. vallies, and 5 faire delicate nauigable Riuers neere the Engliſh Plantation, 1692. its ſeuerall and different languages thereabout, 1694. Vide Virginia.
Viaruna, Indians in Braſile deuoured by the Portingals, 1298
Victuals verie ſcarce in Plimouth in New England, 1846. Victuals of the Spaniſh Fleet ſent for England, Anno 1588. 1901
Vigo, a towne taken by the Engliſh in the Portingall voyage, 1926
Villa de Praya, a towne in Tercera, one of the Ilands of Azores, 1668
Villa Franca, a towne of St Michels one of the Azores Iles, 1963. the ſituation, fertility of the ſoyle, and fruits of the Land, 1964
Vines ſtore in Canada Ilands, 1612 vines naturally growing in New England, 1844
St Vincent a port in the Weſt Indies, 1190. called by the Inaians Warapuimama, its deſcription, 1242, 1438
Virachocha, an Emperour of Peru, his firſt conqueſt, 1458. his ſeuerall acts, and death, with his ſucceſſor, 1459
The Virgines Ilands not inhabited, and deſcription, 1159
Virginia Companies aduentures in fiſhing ſhips, one of them being taken by the Turkes, 1836. Virginia deſpiſed of the very abiects, 1841. fruitfulneſſe of the Land, ſtore of fiſh and Fowle, ibid. Virginia why ſo called, the praiſe thereof, the firſt voyages and diſcoueries there, with their colonies, 1645, 1646. Virginias healthineſſe, ibid. a Virginian yellow haird, and faire, 1689. Virginias naturall commodities trees, among which, cypreſſe, vines, wines, fruits, gums, ſaſſafras, nouriſhable roots, raw, they are poyſon, roaſted, not ſo, but otherwiſe vſed for bread, medicinable plants, beaſts in variety, 1694. 1695. birds, fiſhes, and minerals, 1696. fruits that are planted in Virginia, the ſeaſons there, their vſe of corne, of fleſh, the ayres mildneſſe, and commodities for trafficke with France, Swetheland, Spain, & Holland, 1696, 1697.

Digitized by Google

the commodities that may redound thence to the industrious, ibid. Virginians number, nations, languages, their description, constitution, Barbers, apparell, women, shamefastnesse, attire, ornaments, 1697, 1698. their building, lodging, bedding, gardens, exercise for men or women, child-birth, naming children, easie deliuery, their manner of striking fire, of making bowes and arrowes, 1698 their swords and targets, boats, fishing, spinning, fish-hookes, hunting, either in companyes or alone, consultations before battell, 1699. Virginians neere the English Plantation, their enemies, their manner of embattelling, stratagems, ambuscadoes, painting to make themselues looke terrible, singing and yelling in their combate, musicke, and entertainment of great men, 1700. their trade, Physicke, Chirurgery, charming, 1701. their Religion, and adoration of any thing that can hurt them without their preuention, worshipping the Deuil called Oke, buriall of their Kings, their ordinary burialls, and mourning for the dead, their Temples, their supposed sanctitie, Priests, and their habite, times for solemnities, ibid. their coniuration, altars, sacrifices to the water, their solemne customes for the making Southsayers, their opinion of their Kings and Priests soules, and the common peoples after death, their opinion of the Christians God, 1702. manner of gouernment which is monarchicall, their Kings pompe described, 1703, 1704. Virginian punishment of offenders, 1703. Virginia by whom discommended, the miserie it sustained by effeminate idlers, 1704. Virginian dissentions in the English plantationers, 1706. The Planters nominated, and their first imployment, ibid. their miserie, famine, and sicknesse, with mortality, caused by the Presidents auarice, 1706, 1707. with vnexpelledr emedy, ibid. seconded by the care of Captaine Smith, ibid. Virginian plots for the leauing the Plantation, 1707, 1709. Virginian plantation and trading endamaged by the ambition of the Company, 1710. by desire of gaine in some priuate persons, 1711. Virginias golden hopes frustrate, ibid. Virginia ies want of a good President, 1712. Virginias plantation supposed ouerthrow, 1717. Virgina-Tauerne, the abuse of trading among Saylors there, 1719. Virginian first mariage of the English, 1720. Virginian Plantations supply, 1708, 1716, 1719. Gold as easie to bee gotten as corne there, from the needy Sauages, 1725. Virginian planters losse of armes by the trecherie of Dutchmen, 1725. Virginias buildings repaired, but by want of prouision not prosecuted, the cause of such want, 1727. and the miserie sustained by laxinesse, ibid. Virginias vnprofitable planters checked by the Presidents speech, 1728. Virginias healthinesse, and the care taken for sicke men there by the English, 1728. the Plantations third supply, 1729. the change of gouernment and Captaines, the preiudice of the plantation, and mutiny seconding the supply 1729. Virginia Plantation at the Falls, and Nansamund, 1729. Virginia planters breake peace with the Sauages, 1730. Virginias multiplicity of Presidents, losing Captaine Smith, the miserie, famine, and discomfort it sustained by his absence, 1732. its supply by the arriuall of the Lord La Ware, Sir Thomas Dale, 1732, 1733. Virginias innouation in gouernment, whether mutinous or no, 1734. Virginias dispraise by idle fellowes, 1743. the Presidency of Virginia assumed by S^r Thomas Gates, 1749 the miserie of it at that time, ibid. the causes thereof, ibid. & 1750. Virginias hopes and aduancement 1750. other causes of its distresse, and the distresse it selfe, 1751. more at large, 1756, 1757. its commodities, 1757. Virginians triumphs after victory, feasting, simplicity, feare, horrible and prodigious rites of southsaying, their iudgement of powder, and other customes, 1708, 1709. Virginians are al of all occupations, 1709 a Virginian exchanged for a Christian, 1710. Virginia Sauages strange mortality, 1712. Virginians courtesie to the English, 1713 and trecherous proiects ibid. exceeding feare of Muskets, ibid. how Virginian Sauages may be dealt withall, 1714. Virginia Sauages fight disguised like bushes, 1716. Virginians made proud, not awed by courtesie and benignity, 1717. Virginians in want and pouerty, 1725. a Virginian Sauages his Oration to Captaine Smith, 1727. a Virginian smothered at Iames towne, and recouered, lunaticke, and restored, 1726, 1727. Virgina Sauages offer to fight vnder English banners, 1729. Virginian Sauages brought perforce to peace with the English, 1769, 1770. Virginia Sauages religion and disposition, 1771. their countries described, season, climate, beasts, birds, fishes and other rarities, 1771, 1772, 1773. Virginian account of yeares, 1774. Virginians kill some English, ibid. their trecherous and bloody nature, 1788, 1789. Virginians worship the Deuill, but loue him not, 1790. their fearing the shadow of a Piece or Musket, with their sowing gunpowder, ibid. Virginians possesse some Pieces, with munition after the massacre, destroyed castell, ibid. Virginian plantations Presidency assumed by the Lord De la Ware, its first successe, 1754. 1755, 1756. in what case it was left by the said Lord, and the cause why he left it, 1763. its commodities, ibid. & 1764. Virginias plantations benefit of corne by Captaine Argall, 1765. its rarities, ibid. Virginian affaires variety, by the approach of diuers Captaines there, 1766, 1767, 1768. its commodities, vnworthy English inhabitants, ibid. chiefe places the Bermuda City and Henrico, ibid. its Forts, 1768. Virginias eleuation aboue many countries, 1770. Virginian affaires, Anno 1617, 1618, page 1774. Anno 1619, page 1775. the profits that may bee deriued thence, ibid. Anno 1619 et 1620 page 1775, 1775. the supplies from England in that time, ibid. with Ships, men, and their employments there, on what commodities for trading, 1776; 1777. Virginian benefactors, 1777. Virginian affaires in the yeare 1621, page 1783. with the supply of men, goods, and Ships then sent, with other accidents, ibid. et 1784. and supplies, with relation of matters of trading there, 1784. Virginia's praises farther related, 1717. with the hopes to passe thence thence to China. 1786. Virginia's state before the massacre, 1788. The massacre it selfe, the plot and execution, 1788, 1789, 1790. 1347. The Englishmen basely murdered in it, ibid. A Virginian converted, discovers the plots, 1790. Virginiaes plantations necessaries, without which it may not so wel be effected, 1791 Virginiaes massacre supposed cause, seconded by a sickenesse, 1792. Its authors end, ibid. The suppry thereof by King Iames, 1793. Virginia commended and discommended, according to mens diuers humours, discovered in Letters, 1806, 1807. Virginia planted by French men, 1807. They afterwards displanted by Sir Samuel Argall, 1808. Virginia's possession and plantation, by the English, soundly and largely proved to be lawfull, by a naturall, and nationall right, 1809, 1810, 1811. Virginia's first discouerie, and discouerers, 1812. Virginia rightly possessed by the English, by acknowledgement of the Prince there, 1813. By buying, selling, cession, forfeiture, ib. Virginiaes plantation aduanceth Gods glory. 1817. 1818. Virginia's want of good excused, 1814, 1815. Virginia-plantations losse by the massacre, 1816. The number there since, ibid. Virginia's plantation to the prosecuted, and for what reasons, 1826. & seq. At first Religion, honour of the Nation, &c. 1816

Digitized by Google

Virginia deserues plantation for the profit, 1817. For disburdening multitudes, 1818. For a temperate climate, ibid. For largenesse, ibid. Commodious Riuers whose sliding embracements of the earth are fluently described, ibid. Silkes, Wines, Mines, drugs, &c. ibid. Materials for shipping, 1820. Fishing, 1821. Tobacco trading, ibid. Hopes of passage to the South Sea, 1822. For other reasons & aduantages, 1824. For being a refreshment to ships tired with long voyages, ibid. & 1825

Virguano, a towne inhabited by Sauages in America neere Marwin, 1285

A Vision, 1458

Visitation of the sicke among the Indians, the horrible hideous noise vsed by those miserable comforters, 1860

Vitachaco, a town in Florida, 1534

Vlissingers take one of the Portingal Gallions, 1909

Vllibaholi a walled towne of the Indians in Florida, and the fashion of those walls, 1541

Vndermining of townes, 1919

Vnicornes horne saueth many from poison, 1213

Vno a River, 1223

Vomiting to death, 1214. Vomiting procured by whats Plants in Bermuda Ilands, 1801

Vna, a mountaine in the West-Indies, 1285

A Vnicorne with a strange horne, 1560. With haire as bigge as a finger. ibid.

Vnthankfulnesse in Spaniards towards their Indian Benefactors, 1526

Voyages are commonly ouerthrowne by the Captaines giving way, or too much yeelding lenity, 1389. Voyages by the Lord of Cumberland, 1141. 1142. & seq. Voyages by Sir Sebastian Cabot, Sir Thomas Pert, 1177. By Sir Iohn Hawkins, Sir Fran. Drake, ibid. & seq. Voyages by Capt. Michelson, Capt. Newport, Earle of Suffolke, Sir Robert Dudley, ibid. Voyages by Captaine Preston, Capt. Summers. Sir Anthony Sherley, Capt. Parker, Sir Walter Raleigh, Mr Will. Hawkins, ibid. Capt. Parker, 1243, 1244, & seq. Middleton, 1246, 1247. Voyages by Reniger, Borey, Pudsey, Steuen, Hare, Fenton, Ward, and Iohn Drake, 1186. Voyages by Captaine Candish, and Capt. Danes, 1191, 1192, &c. By Sir Richard Hawkins, 1367. &c By Pamphilo Naruaez Spaniard, 1500, 1501, & seq. By Francisco Pizarro, 1489, & seq. Voyages by Nunno de Guzman Spaniard, 1556. & seq. Soto his Voyages and discoveries of Florida, 1530. at large in seq. Voyages by the the French, and discoueries of Florida, and Canada, 1603. & seq. Voyages by Monsieur de Montz, 1620. & seq. Voyages from England, the ships being furnished with two hundred pounds in Cash, 1838. From Plimmouth to Bilboa with dry fish, 1839. A voyage of seuen sayle from the West-country, 1839. Voyages to Virginia furnished by Sir Walter Raleigh, 1645, 1646. Voyage of Captaine Gosnol to Virginia, Anno 1602. pag. 1647. & seq. Voyage by Mr Pringe to Virginia, 1654. & seq. By Captaine Gilbert to the same, 1656. & seq. By Capt. Weymouth to Virginia, 1659. & seq. A voyage to the Ile of Azores, by the Right Honorable Rob. Earle of Essex, 1935. Voyages by Sir Thomas Gates, 1734 & seq. By Captaine Argall, 1758. Voyages to Sommer-Iland by the English, 1793. & seq An admirable voyage from the Bermudas to Ireland in a small boat, 1803

Vparason, a River nauigable in Brasile, 1146

Vpanason, a River in the Indies, very commodious for watering, 1223

Vpsegon, a towne in Mawooshen, vnder the Lord Bashabes, 1874

Vrarino towne, a towne of Warwacas, and Parawogotos Sauages in America, 1283

Vraritan an Iland in Brasile, called by the Portingals Alquatrusses, 1241. Its description for Nauigators, ibid.

Vrapo, and Arieppo, two Indian woods, 1251

Vrine drunke for want of water, 1188

Vrokere, Indians so called, 1286

Vrquam River, 1364

Vtinama, a Floridan towne: 1533

A Vulcan, a most dreadfull thing casting forth fire, & stones as great as a house, causing vnwholsomnesse of thence-issuing waters, 1559

Vuranqui his raigne ouer the inhabitants of Peru, his acts and conquests his making a bridge of Osiers, beautifying the Sunnes temple, extent of his dominions, transplantation of countries, 1463, 1464

Vzela, a towne in Florida in America, 1534

W.

WAbockeyaway an Arwacca towne in America, 1286

Wacarimock mountaines neere the riuer Orenoco, 1248

Walnuts, thirty Ilands of them, 1612

Wancoobanoua, a valley abounding with gold-grains washed from the mountaines, 1284

Wages detaining, how turbulent in a voyage, voyage, 1396

Want of water in New-England, causing some of our men to famish, 1844
Waratiua, a river in Brasile, its description for Navigation, 1440
Want of bread in the English Army, 1921
Io. Want, a schismaticall and seditious fellow in the Bermudas, 1743
Wareteena, a place in America, 1212
Warooca, a towne of the Arwacca Savages in the Indies, 1285
Warraskoyat, Indian-Virginians, 1692
Warres between the Portingals, and the Indians, its effects, 1321
Warres made for the water, 1364
Warres betweene the Indians and Spaniards in Chili, 1443
Warriers that haue killed men among the Savages of Tuppan, haue as many holes board through their visage in token of honour, 1189
Warlike Fleets set forth by the English Deborah, the Q. Elizabeth, 1891
Water that is salt dangerously drunk, 1143. Strange kinde of watering, 1146. Water-drinking endangereth many, 1178. Want of fresh-water, 1188. Water too much drunke kils Will. Pitcher, ibid. Salt-water cureth sores, 1207 Water vnwholsome and deadly, 1248. Water burning and tasting like brimstone, 1375. Water venemous, 1379. Water very hot in a lake of Florida, 1549. Bad waters breeding sundry diseases, 1623. Waters that being drunke, caused teeth to fall in two houres space, 1624. Watry ground the supposed cause of vnhealthfulnesse in Port-royall among the French, 1632. Water sacrificed to by the Virginians in time of tempest. 1702. Water want in Virginia, 1712. Water wanting in the English armie, 1966
Watry iourneys, 1359
Wayanasses, Savages so called in the West-Indies, 1211. Their complexion, cowardlinesse, painting, lodging, Tobacco, chiefe towne, 1228
Waanawazons, Canibals in America, 1213. Their simplicity, stature, feeding, lazinesse, women, 1230
Waymores Savages in Brasile, their stature, valour, rudenesse, swiftnesse, man-eating, 1227
Waytaquazons, called by the Indians Iocoex, are Brasilian Savages, their habitation, stature, women-warriours, lodging, iarres, man-eating, 1228
Weaknesse of the English in New-England, causing the Indians to insult, 1848
Wealth bred ambition among Captaines, 1145
Weannocks, Indians in Virginia, their number of fighting men, 1692
Weeatopona, a towne of the Arwaccas in America, 1285
Weeping in salutation, an expression of obedience in some Indians of Florida, 1553
Three Wels, one very hot, another scalding hot, a third temperate, neere a cold Hill, 1243
Werowances, the title of a King in Virginia, 1692
Werawocomoco River in Virginia, 1692
West-winds constantly, 1658
Master Wests plantation at the Fals in Virginia, 1730
West-country voyage in twelue ships with a good returne, 1840
Westons men abuse the Savages of Massacheusets, which caused much vnkindnesse to the English, 1857. Their misery among the Savages, 1863
Capt. Weymoths voyage to Virginia, 1659. & seq. His danger by sandy, and rocky Shoales, escape and arriuall at Pentecost-harbour, 1659, 1660
A Whale very great, eaten by Anthony Kniuet, 1207.
Whales haue open heads, whereat they breathe, their battaile with the Sword-fish, 1313, 1376, 1377, 1685
A Whale worshipped 1471
Whale-fishing in the Bermudas, and its benefit, 1797
Whitson-Bay in Virginia, 1654
Capt. Rich. Whitbornes Voyages to the New-found-land, 1882. His voyage to Lisbone, is taken by a French Pirate. 1883
Whelps dreſt and eaten, 1202
Whittingtons communication with the Indians, 1881
Wia a River in Guiana, 1261
Wiapogo River, 1250. Its commodities, 1261, 1263, 1264. at large. threescore leagues broad supposed the bigg'st in the world, 1267, 1268. Its situation and strength, 1270. English plant there, ibid.
Wiaumli, a River to the North of Orenoco, 1249
Wiawia, a towne in the West-Indies, 1280. Or Wia Wiam, 1283. Tis inhabited by the Yaios and other Savages, 1283
Wighcocamoco river in Virginia, 1694
Wighsacan, a medicinable plant in Virginia, 1695
Wikeries are Indians that inhabite the Plaines of Samia, 1248
Mr Will. Strachy his relation of Sir Tho: Gates voyage, and of the Colony of Virginia, 1734. & seq.
William Morgan his happy & most strange deliverance, 1943.
Wild-geese in great Shoales, 1845
Willowes 1316
Mr Willsons relations at large, 1661, 1262. & seq.
Wine ouerthroweth more then the enemy, 1349. The Wine of the Nauy in 88. 1961
Wine causeth ambition & dissention, 1151
Extreame winds, 1175. In the straits of Magellane, 1194. An exceeding winde by Sea and Land, 1500. Winds that pierce iron and stone, 1671
Winter not durable by Christians,
Witawamack, an insulting slaue among the Savages, opprobrious to the English, 1859
Wiues conuted a dignitie among the Savages, the hauing of many of them only permitted to the King, and those that haue proued themselues braue fellows, 1188, 1217. Wiues and children sold for Hatchets and Knines, 1208. Wiues put away for adultery, 1870
Sir Io. Winkfield dyeth at the fight in Cadiz, in warlike manner buried, 1932
Wolues in New-England pursuing our English Dogs, 1849. Wolues in the New-found-land faning and playing with English masty dogs, 1885
Womens strange entertaining strangers among Savages, 1717. Women dancing starke naked, 1618. Indian womens modestie, yet familiaritie, 1158, 1159. Women got by valour among the Savages, 1209. Women Archers, 1226. 1228. Women with vgly bodies and good faces, 1228. Eight women bought for a red-hafted knife, 1249. A woman roasted, 1272. Women starke naked, 1268 Women goe before men in Brasile, 1292. Their agreement there among

Digitized by Google

among themselues, their chastitie if maried, but loosenesse vnmaried, 1341. A womans price amongst the Carios of the West Indies, 1357. Womens toile among some Indians, 1382. Women that revenge the wrong of their husbands, not solitarily by themselues called Amazons, 1437. Women (no not Kings daughters) might not enter the Temple of the Sunne among the ancient inhabitants of Peru, 1465. Womens vsage and habite among some Indians of Florida, 1524. Women amongst the Indians put to vile slavery, 1869. Women not suffered to enter any of the Ships of the King of Spaines Armada, 1901

Wonders of the new World, 1477.

Wood-bind, a plant running on trees like a Vine, that causeth a vehement and harmlesse purging, 1801

Wood that maketh fish drunke, 1272

Wood of all colours, 1670

Wood as hard as iron, ibid.

Words of the Savages language in Virginia, 1667

Wormes how killed in the bodie, 1311

Wormes breeding great torment, 1251. Very pernicious in Brasile, but killed by Garlicke, 1382. Wormes poysoning water, 1286. Wormes devouring the flesh, 1365. Wormes very preiudiciall to ships without sheathing, vnder the Æquinoctiall, 1387

Wounds, how cured, 1310, 1311

Wyanatses, a towne in the West-Indies, 1208

Wyapocoories, inhabitants in a Province of Guiana, 1271

Wywaypanami Indians with shoulders higher then their heads, 1285

X

XAlisco, a Province neere the South Sea. 1559. The great losse of inhabitants in it by the Spanish inhumane cruelty, 1581. Eight hundred townes burned in those Realmes by Spaniards, ibid.

Xalpa Province discouered by the Spaniards, 1559

Xaltenango Province, 1559

Xaqua, a harbour in the Iland of Cuba, 1500

Xaragua, a dominion in the Ile Hispaniola, its King and Lords traiterously burnt by the Spaniards, the Queene hanged, the youths thrust through, or having their legs cut off, they that fled condemned to perpetuall slauerie, 1572

Xualla, a Province in Florida, 1539

Y.

YAes, Indians neere the River Wyapoco, their nature and description, 1263

Yaguiana, a towne in Hispaniola, 1186

Capt. Yerdly Deputy Governour in Virginia, 1773. His acts and exploits there, ibid. & 1774

Yerua viua, an hearbe that is sensible, and shrinkes at any mans touch, not resprouting till his departure, 1174

Youghtanund, inhabitants of Virginia, 1692

Youwalprenay, a towne of the Caribes, 1285

Ytara an America Floridan town, 1533

Yraua, a towne in Florida, 1541

Yupaha, an Indian country in Florida, ruled by a woman, her great town, commodities, and abundance of gold, 1535

Yupanqui an Emperour of Peru, before the Spanish conquest, his difficult attempts, 1474. He subdued the Chunchus, and so extended his Empire, ibid. & 1475. His assault of the Chirihuana, a Savage Nation, and successe, his proceeding to conquer Chili. 1475 his miraculous Fort and buildings, other acts and death, 1477, 1478

Yuia Pari, a River in America, the inhabitants thereabout tortured by the Spaniards, 1587

Z.

ZAcheo, a place so called, 1186

Zapatula, a place of New-Spaine, 1558

Zemie, an Indian Nation neere the Riuer of Plate, 1363

Zemais Saluaisco, Indians so called in the River Paiana, their description, 1350, 1351

Zumpanga, a towne of Indians, 1418

FINIS.

Bayerische Staatsbibliothek MÜNCHEN

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google